BIG LION ON A RAMPAGE

"Nero," Escapes from Washburn Quarters and Spreads Terror Along River Road.

ROAMED FIELDS ALL NIGHT.

Injured a Camel, Treed a Man and Killed a Heifer Before He Was Shot by Edward Radel this Morning.

Making his escape from a temporary cage at the Washburn circus winter quarters on the river road, near Riverside Park, early last night, "Nero," the magnificent lion belonging to the show menagerie, created havoc all along the River road until he was killed at 7 o'clock this morning. He was laid low by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of Edward Radel, the former New Brunswick traction superintendent, just as he was sucking the blood from a heifer on the Henry Isham farm that he had torn to pieces a few moments before. The lion bounded high in the air as the leaden missile struck him directly between the eyes, but he struggled for fifteen minutes before death ensued. The owner refused an offer of $1,000 for the animal a week ago.

The Washburn circus closed its season at Easton, Pa., on Saturday last and the entire outfit was placed in the winter quarters on Mr. Washburn's farm running along the Raritan river between Bound Brook and New Brunswick. "Nero" was taken from his big cage, in which he had been kept all summer, and placed in a smaller one yesterday, with the idea of shipping him to New York today for further exhibition purposes. Everything was all right about the stables at 7 o'clock last night when the employes went away for the evening, but soon after that the lion gained its freedom and got out into the yard. Just how it was done, no one knows exactly but it was evidently through the door being left unbarred.

The first anyone knew that the animal was loose was about 8 o'clock when a camel in the show menagerie tore down the river road, bellowing madly and bleeding from ugly wounds on the back and sides. It was learned afterward that the lion had attacked the bactrian in the exercise grounds and that it shook it off by running under the low hanging branches of a tree. About the same time John Wilson, one of the circus attaches, came up the lane to the quarters from an opposite direction to learn the cause of the commotion and was startled by a roar that told him immediately where the trouble lay. The next instant, "Nero" bounded from a clump of bushes and started after him but failed to notice a barbed-wire fence and ran against it with terrific force. The shock flung the lion back and before it could recover, Wilson gained a refuge. The wire fence is probably all that saved the man's life.

Wilson gave the alarm and all the Washburn men that could be mustered together started after the ramparging animal. The word was passed all along the River road and the hunters were joined by several farmers but though they searched the fields all night, "Nero" could not be found. A patrol was maintained along the highway to protect pedestrians and the farmers got in all the cattle that could be quickly located.

Shortly after 6 o'clock this morning, a workman on the Isham place discovered the lion tearing about after a herd of cows and calves. Several of the bovines had been ripped by its claws and they were in a frenzy. The workman hurried to Mr. Radel's home, knowing that the latter is an expert shot, and asked him to run the lion down. Mr. Radel has several splendid rifles but no cartridges, so he jumped into his automobile and at a speed of fifty miles an hour went to New Brunswick after some. He returned in a short time and without any thought of the dangerous and unusual kind of quarry he was after, sallied into the field after "Nero." He came upon him just as he had felled a half-grown heifer and was tossing the carcass in the air and then sucking its blood, repeating this alternately. All the while, the lion was emitting angry roars that would have turned back anybody but an absolutely fearless man.

Nothing daunted, Mr. Radel kept on until he was within 100 feet of "Nero." The animal watched his coming and crouched low, probably with the intention of getting ready to spring. Mr. Radel dropped to his knees and taking careful aim directly between the lion's eyes, pulled the trigger. The bullet sped true to its mark and "Nero" rolled over and over with the leaden missile in its brain.

When "Nero" gave up his strug-

MILK PROBLEM SOLVED AT CLARKHURST FARMS

The question of a pure milk supply, safe-guarded from every possible means of contamination, has been solved by Edward H. Clark, proprietor of the famous "Clarkhurst Farms," situated on the Raritan River Road, about a mile from Bound Brook. That there are no better dairy farms in this country is conceded by experts, who pronounce it to be "A model dairy in every sense of the word. "That is the testimony of the State Board of Health.

Two years ago Mr. Clark retired from a renumerative law practice in New York, and moved to New Jersey with one object in view—to furnish the people with a quality of milk that would not only meet all requirements, but exceed them. He acquired the beautiful farm where his dairy is located and today he owns 125 thoroughbred registered cows, with a daily output of from 1,000 to 1,200 quarts of the richest milk to be found anywhere, and commencing today this milk will be distributed in Plainfield and vicinity through the agency of A. T. Jordan, who has established a dairy store on North avenue. The milk to be sold here will be certified in every sense that the word implies. Karl M. Ball, of this city, will be in charge of the store here, and will solicit trade.

Mr. Clark never buys a cow until his vetrinarian, Dr. E. R. Voorhees, of Somerville, has made a thorough test of the animal and frequent tests are made for any signs of tuberculosis. After a cow becomes part of the stock farm, she is either placed in barn No. 1 or 2, both of which are perfect models of what a barn should be. They are built in accordance with the suggestions of the United States Department of Agriculture, the structures being composed of steel and concrete. Running along outside of each stall is a groove in the concrete in which is splaced food and running water. After the cows are fed the groove is placed food and running water, clean water. The water is supplied from an artesian well 105 feet deep, and is pumped by a windmill and a gasolene engine into a tank with a capacity of 10,000 gallons.

The greatest care is taken in the selection of food and among other things is ensilage, a green corn product which is kept green and fresh the year round; oats and peas, green clover, cotton seed meal, altalfa grass and the cows are fed on strictly scientific lines.

Twice a day the cows are currycombed and brushed like a horse and at intervals they are given a bath, hot and cold water being used. When a cow shows any sign of sickness she is immediately placed in the hospital and given every attention. Although one apparently cannot point to a single deficiency Mr. Clark still maintains in his mind that perfection has not been attained and he continues to make improvements.

Dirt is tabooed, not a speck being found wherever the milk is handled or the cows are kept. To prevent the pestiferous fly from getting in his work, the cows are regularly sprayed with an antiseptic preparation, while the milkers in addition to being compelled to wear white uniforms, take further steps toward prevention of disease by washing their hands with the same preparation. Sanitary milk pails are used. With the exception of the circle that fits under the udder, the pail is air tight. As soon as a pail is filled with milk it is carried to the milk house, in which the milk is run through a patented apparatus which cools the lacteal fluid to about forty degrees.

After use the milk pails are taken to the wash room where by patented process they are thoroughly sterilized and washed with scalding water to which has been added a cleansing compound. By this same process the rooms are thoroughly sterilized. The ventilation of the barns is so arranged that the animals have pure fresh air summer and winter. The tops of the windows are of glass and the bottoms of mesh wire and cheese cloth.

Fifty of Mr. Clark's high-class cows are thoroughbred Holstein-Frisians with pedigrees guaranteed by the Holstein-Frisan Association. He also owns two Holstein-Frisan bulls, one of which he would not sell for $5,000. A. A. Cortelyou, former president of the Holstein-Frisan Association, says that he considers Mr. Clark's black bull with the golden skin, the finest type of a thoroughbred he has ever seen. The name of one bull is "Sir. Hengerveld De Kol," and the other his premier, "Beets Ormsby De Kol Butter King."

The very latest and approved method for bottling milk is used, preventing every possible way of contagion. In order that the cows might have green food the year

ST. PATRICK'S JUBILEE COMES TO A CLOSE

The four-day jubilee celebration of St. Patrick's church at Elizabeth came to a close last night with a banquet, attended by 400 parishioners and several outside guests. The invited guests were Frank Bergen of the Public Service Corporation, Senator Thomas A. Hillery, Congressman James A. Hamill, Postmaster Palmer H. Charlock and the Rev Isaac P. Whelan, of Newark, in addition to Elizabeth officials. The addresses were all of a laudatory nature, in which the speakers reviewed the great work of Dean Gessner and the splendid influence St. Patrick's had on the city at large. All agreed with Bishop O'Connor that St. Patrick's was the "banner parish of the Newark diocese." The Rev. James A. Lundy was toastmaster.

Since the anniversary celebration started thousands have gathered nightly to view the decorations and the fancy lighting on the church, and also to hear melodious airs and sacred hymns played on the church chimes. Last night there was a minstrel show and a parish reception the night previous. Religious services were interspersed throughout the celebration.

CONGREGATION GREETS THE REV. EDWIN SHAW

Members of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and congregation to the number of nearly two hundred attended the reception given last night to the new pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw and Mrs. Shaw. The affair was held in the Sabbath-school room of the church and was by and in charge of the social and entertainment committee of the Women's Society for Christian Work, comprising Mrs Frank J. Hubbard, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph, Miss Ida Spicer, and Miss Id. Randolph. They were assisted by other members of the society.

The Sabbath-school and reception rooms were attractively decorated with dog wood and white flowers, arranged to present the appearance of a parlor. Rev. and Mrs. Shaw received their friends, assisted by Mrs. J. Everett Kimball, president of the Women's Society for Christian Work. During the evening Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston rendered several violin solos, accompanied by Miss Mabel Maxson.

A feature of the evening was the address of welcome to Pastor Shaw and his wife by Joseph A. Hubbard, president of the Board of Trustees. In a few well-chosen words he extended to them a cordial greeting and expressing the sentiment of the entire membership, wished for them success and happiness in their new field of labor. Mr. Shaw, speaking for himself as well as Mrs. Shaw, thanked one and all for the hearty reception given. He said that ever since he and his wife had come to Plainfield they had been given every courtesy and the formal reception only tended to still further emphasize the good will and kindly feeling toward them.

Following the reception, refreshments were served by a committee comprising Mrs. Ira N. West, chairman; Mrs. William R. Mosher, Mrs A. L. Titsworth, Miss Lucie Dunham and Miss Carrie Randolph. Those who poured were Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Mrs. William H. Rogers and Mrs. F. A. Dunham.

The rest of the evening was given up to sociability and exchange of good will. Rev. Edwin Shaw, the new pastor, is a brother of Rev. George Shaw, a former pastor of the church. He was for a number of years a professor in Milton College, Milton, Wis., where he was successful. While a member of the college faculty he became an ordained preacher that he might serve a denominational church near Milton. A successful pastorate in Plainfield is predicted for him.

Tied His Horse to a Tree.

The police crusade against violations of the tree ordinance is still continuing and Alfred Jacobson is the latest to ge caught. He was arraigned in court this morning for tying his horse to a tree. He pleaded guilty and was let off with the usual shake-down. Judge Runyon announced that after a sufficient time had elapsed for Plainfielders to get fully acquainted with the new ordinance, violations would result in fines being imposed.

Business College Students' Active.

At the first meeting of the Students' Society of Drake College these officers were elected: President, James Capano; vice-president, Miss Helen Borrup; secretary, Claude Borden; principal of the college as treasurer, C. W. Fogarty.

BRAIN WORTH $10,000

Amherst Professor Reported to Have Sold Cranium After Death for Big Price.

IS VALUABLE TO SCIENCE.

John Mason Tyler Declines to Make Statement and His Wife Is Much Distressed.

John Mason Tyler, brother of the late Col. Mason W. Tyler, of this city, and son of America's greatest Greek scholar, is said to have made an extraordinary compact with scientists of wealth weherby he has sold his head after death for $10,000 It is because he is reputed to have the best shaped head in America, with an extraordinary brain development, that the question becomes of such great interest to science.

When the report was circulated at Amherst College, and Professor Tyler was asked for its verification he declined to make a direct statement, but added that during his student days at Leipzeg he believes he did make some such agreement However, the professor is inclined to treat the matter as a joke. Mrs. Tyler is very much distressed over the suggestion of such a contract and refuses to discuss the matter.

Experts in America are quite familiar with Professor Tyler's head and it has been common knowledge that they regard it of great value to the scientific world.

MRS. PRICE IS DEAD AT AGE OF NINETY-TWO

Mrs. Emily Catherine Judd Price, widow of Matthias Price, and known by many Plainfielders, died at noon yesterday at the home of her son, Matthias J. Price, 139 Orchard street, Newark, in her ninety-second year. She had been ill a long time and the end came as the result of old age.

Mrs. Price was born at Lyons Farms, February 20, 1817, but spent most of her youth in Orange, until her marriage to Mr. Price, seventy years ago. They lived together more than sixty-three yars, he having died about six and a half years ago. Mrs. Price was the oldest living member of the Third Presbyterian church, of Newark, having joined it before her marriage. She was active in the work of the Newark Female Charitable Society, in which she was a worker for twenty-five years, and its president from 1885 to 1890. As its president she laid the cornerstone of the society's building, at Hill and Halsey streets.

Mrs. Price leaves twenty-nine descendents—six children, thirteen grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Two of her six children are sons—Clinton B. Price, of East Orange, and Matthias J. Price, of Newark. Her daughters are Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph and Mrs. H. R. Halloway, both of Plainfield; Mrs. H. R. Ford, of Crosswicks, and Mrs. Theodore Wilcox, of Newark. On both the paternal and maternal side of her ancestry she was descended from patriot-Revolutionary stock.

The funeral will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in Evergreen cemetery, this city, at the convenience of the family.

FORMER PLAINFIELDERS BADLY HURT IN ACCIDENT

Rev. William C. Nelson, a retired Methodist Episcopal minister living in Passaic avenue, Nutley, and who formerly resided on Somerset place, the borough, was knocked down by a wagon near Market and Washington street, Newark, yesterday, and sustained severe injuries. Mr. Nelson, who is about seventy years old, was taken to the City Hospital where he was said that he was suffering from a broken ankle, contusions about the face, and shock.

At the time of the accident Mr. Nelson was alighting from a car. Going in the same direction as the car was a wagon belonging to the Newark Mantel and Furniture Company, of 235 Washington street, driven by Vincent Reinbach. The pole of the wagon struck Mr. Nelson, knocking him down. Before he could regain his feet or the driver stop his team the front wheel of the wagon passed over Mr. Nelson's leg. A number of persons who witnessed the accident carried the injured man into a nearby store, where he remained until the arrival of the hospital ambulance.

A short time ago Mr. Nelson and his wife celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home in Nutley.

DAMAGES FOR INJURIES DEMANDED OF THE P.S.C.

The suit of Christopher S. Myers against the Public Service Corporation for damages for alleged injuries received by the plaintiff's wife on August 31, last, while attempting to board a main line trolley near Scotch Plains, was begun in the district court, this morning before Judge Newcorn and a jury of twelve men. Robert N. Crane represented the plaintiff, and Clarence Case, of Somerville, the Public Service Corporation. After examining a number of witnesses during the morning session, an adjournment was taken at 1 o'clock for one hour.

Among those examined this morning were Mrs. Helen Myers, the injured woman; Mrs. Rohetta Randolph, Edward Heath, Christopher S. Myers, husband of the injured woman; Dr. T. H. Tomlinson and Dr. Thomas D. Blair, for the complainant; Dr. J. S. Green, of Elizabeth, and Dr. Albert Pittis, of this city, physicians in the employ of the defendant company.

Considerable time was taken up with medical testimony, the physicians' statements tending to show that Mrs. Myers received internal injuries by the accident. According to stories told on the stand, Mrs. Myers with her child was attempting to board the trolley car. The child had entered the trolley and the mother had one foot on the step, when the car started and she was thrown to the ground. This assertion was disputed by the counsel for the company, the contention being that in attempting to get on the car she lost her hold on the guard rail and fell backward to the ground.

The statements of Drs. Tomlinson and Blair based upon examinations made, showed that Mrs. Myers had received injuries by the fall, that she suffered considerable pain along the spine, in the abdomen and legs. They gave a minute description of their examination.

On the other hand, Dr. Green attempted to prove that the pain of which Mrs. Myers complained was likely due to her troubles of long standing. He said that his examination disclosed no abnormal conditions, that he could not discover any bruises or discolorations and that when pressure was brought to bear on the spine or other alleged affected portions of the body, Mrs. Myers did not even wince. He found her general condition normal both before and after the examina-ion. The testimony of Dr. Pittis practically supported that of Dr. Green in all essential particulars.

At the close of the examination of Dr. Pittis, Judge Newcorn announced and adjournment for an hour.

The jury empaneled for the case is as follows: Elmer Barrett, Peter Thompson, Abraham Van Cleef, Alexander Sergeant, F. M. Masker, William Messersmith, Percy Culver, Edward Jones, Frank Vermeule, Charles Woolston, W. H. Drayton and Charles W. Runyon.

When the case was resumed at 2 o'clock this afternoon other witnesses caluled included Motorman William Mayea and Conductor A. F. Carlsberger, who were in charge of the car the day of the accident; Harry Platt, of Bound Brook and Albert G. Meyer, of Scotch Plains, passengers. Dr. T. H. Tomlinson was called in rebuttal. Afterward counsel for plaintiff and defendant presented their case to the jury.

STARTS CAMPAIGN AGAINST ASSESSMENT METHODS BY RAISING HUGE SIGN "ROASTING" ALLEGED "RING"

Wealthy Manufacturer, Discontented Over Taxes, Advertises His Woes to Outside World—Rated at $200,000 But Assessed at Only $54,000—City Authorities and Board of Trade Get Busy.

Public indignation is rife today over the "slander" on Plainfield's fair name by Samuel W. Rushmore, a wealthy manufacturer, who it is considered has held it up as an undersirable place of abode. Above his big new dynamo works on South avenue and facing the tracks over which the B. & O., the Jersey Central and the Reading fly, Mr. Rushmore has raised a huge sign, thirty feet long and fifteen feet deep, publishing to the outside world his opinion of taxing methods in "The City Beautiful," whose government is claimed to be second to none in the State.

The sign not only contains Mr. Rushmore's sentiments but the likeness of a typical "ward heeler" or thug politician. The subject wears a silk hat cocked on the side of his head, the latest cut in clothes, a huge diamond in his shirt front, a boutonniere, and an expression that shows he is a "high liver."

This is the inscription in large white letters on a red background:

TREMENDOUS TAXES
For Easy Plainfielders
Easy Taxes for Men in the Ring
Get Rushmore's Tax Book Find Who's Who and Why.

When Mr. Rushmore was asked by a representative of The Daily Press today whether he charged corruption in the city government, he stated that he did not but that "there are some very loose methods and some flagrantly low and outrageously high assessments" He declined to say who compose the alleged "ring and whether he aimed his attack at the mayor, the board of assessors or the Republican organization.

"I am making no charges against anyone," said Mr. Rushmore, "the book we are compiling as a result of an investigation of the city tax records will explain all. It will contain every assessment and will also set forth some startling comparisons. The people can judge for themelves after they see the book which will be ready in less than a week."

When Corporation Counsel Marsh was asked today what rights the city had in the matter, he declined politely to make any statement at this time, other than to remark that it is the intention of the city under the law passed last winter to publish and distribute pamphlets containing copies of the tax duplicate as soon as the assessment is completed.

From other legal sources, it was learned that the board of assessore might pursue by either criminal or civil libel against Mr. Rushmore. If the facts he alleges are true, but if his purpose can be proven to be malicious, he is liable to indictment. Malice would have to be shown to get a conviction, regardless of whether the facts are proven to be true or not. In civil libel suits, if the facts are proven by the defendant to be true, he must be acquitted.

President H. W. Marshall, of the Board of Trade, which has spent a thousand dollars recently in a campaign of newspaper publicity for the city beautiful, refused to make any comment today other than to say that the matter would be thoroughly dicussed tonight by the board and action will be decided on at that time.

While some merely laugh at Mr. Rushmore's peculiar methods of getting "revenge" for a unfair assessments on his property, the big majority of business men and commuters say that the position that the wealthy manufacturer has committed an outrage and should be condemned.

Mayor Fisk declined to make any comment on the sign other than to say that as he knew nothing in his official capacity of Mr. Rushmore's alleged grievance, he would talk with him at the earliest opportunity. Mr. Fisk has always advocated publication of all tax assessments, an idea that was recently made an optional statute.

Report from unofficial sources has it that Mr. Rushmore has placed his assets at over $200,000, although for the last two years his total tax assessment in this city has been but $54,600. According to the official tax books, he pays $12,000 on personalty; $4,300 on realty; $30,000 on new manufacturing plant, and $8,300 on old plant. Inquiries in New York today revealed the fact that Mr. Rushmore's rating is far above the $200,000 mark. He has given out these figures to such bureau of information, $89,000 on realty; $49,000 on machinery; $2,000 on office fixtures; $47,000 on merchandise.

At noon today, Mayor Fisk and Coporation Counsel Marsh inspected the ugly sign, but neither had any comment to make for publication. From reliable sources it is learned that Mr. Rushmore has not made any regular protest against his assessments. The law provide that if he considers such assessments unjust he may seek redress through the city board and that failing that he may apply to the county board for a hearing. A a last recourse he may appeal to the State board. He has never taken adavantages of these provisions of the law, but has begun a most peculiar and injurious way of his own patent.

A QUESTION OF VERACITY.

If Michaelson Lied to Judge Runyon He Will get a Jail Sentence.

Max Michaelson, a borough junkman, was arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged by Patrloman Saffron with coming over to the city side of the brook and buying old iron and other stuff without the formality of a license. He denied the cop's statement and asserted that he was carting home an old mattress that he had bought for his own use when he was arrested. Saffron retorted that he had been violating the junk ordinance for the past six months and could bring witnesses to prove it.

"If that's the case and this man has been lying to me," said Judge Runyon, "I'll adjourn this matter until tomorrow morning to establish the fact. If he is proven guilty by the witnesses I'll send him to jail."

The threat failed to shake Michelson's denial and he declared he would be on hand tomorrow and face any accuser Cop Saffron might produce.

Gift of All the Employes.

The handsome dinner set presented Mr. and Mrs. William Thorn at their wedding Tuesday afternoon, was the gift of all the employes at the postoffice and not the clerical staff alone, as stated yesterday. Mr. Thorn is held in high esteem by the entire force and the carriers and other men expressed their good will with the others.

UNITED EVEN IN DEATH.

Double Funeral of Assemblyman and Mrs. Ellis R. Meeker Yesterday Afternoon.

The double funeral of former Assemblyman Ellis R. Meeker and his wife, Fannie Gilbert Meeker, who died on Monday afternoon within two hours of each other, took place yesterday afternoon from the late home, 46 Elm street, Elizabeth. The bodies of the couple rested side by side in two caskets. There were numerous floral tributes from sorrowing friends.

From 8 to 9 o'clock Tuesday night the house was open for friends of the family to view the bodies and there was a steady stream of callers. The funeral service yesterday afternoon was private and was conducted by Rev. John M. Meeker, from the Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown, a brother of the dead Assemblyman. The interment was at Evergreen Cemetery.

There is no doubt but that Clinton Avenues will have to extend themselves if they want to win Saturday's contest from New Brunswick. The latter team, considered one of the strongest of its class in the State, has been defeating a majority of the clubs played this season and it has the reputation for putting up a fast game. Rowland will occupy the box, while Van Vecthen will be behind the rubber.

Randolph and Serry will be the battery for Clinton Avenue in the game with New Brunswick on Crescent Oval, Saturday, while the club will present its regular lineup. The contest will be one of the best of the season and the fans will not be disappointed. The New Brunswick team will get a good guarantee for coming here and the local club feels sure of receiving liberal patronage.

The friends of Clifford Randolph have their doubts as to whether he will sign the Newark Club contract. He will not be in a hurry, at any rate. Randolph is sure to make good in faster company and he will be careful before taking any steps that will afterward work against his interest. On past performances Randolph has pitched steady consistent ball and a bright future is before him.

Manager Dorflinger, of the Clinton Avenues, was among the local fans that witnessed the double-header at the Polo Grounds on Tuesday, and he says that he was surprised at the kind of ball put up by some of the Giants. He feels sure that there are players on minor league teams and the amateur ranks who would make a better showing, especially at the bat. He says that some of the big leaguers gave a miserable exhibition of the game.

Somerville and Bound Brook will play the second game of the series of three at Somerville on Saturday. Bound Brook took the first game by a score of 10 to 7, but Manager Conklin is looking for better results this week. Phil. Smith, pitching for Bound Brook, while hit hard, kept the bingles scattered. Jimmie Montgross was touched pretty hard throughout the contest.

Devore, who is substituting in various positions for the Giants at present, is showing exceptional form and not only fields well, but is doing well with the stick.

FOOTBALL.

Every year the West Point cadets have to devise means to make the most of the short time the daily drills leave them for football practice before dark. Much attention has been paid lately to the forward pass, but in the twilight the men found difficulty in seeing the ball. This week Coach Nelly had several footballs painted white and the scheme worked like a charm, the men handling the pass cleanly and also being able to continue the practice until quite dark. Johnson, one of the last year's quarterbacks, has been shifted to right end and Mountford to right halfback on the second team. Nix, who has been playing tackle on the first team, was hurt yesterday and Bryne took the position. Fowler, the big tackle of last year's team, will not be out this season owing to illness. It has been decided to keep Surles and Pullen out of the game, both men having bad knees. Pullen will help with the coaching of the line men.

The Naval Academy eleven will not have the services of Harold Spencer, who was expected to show up well for the back field this season, as he agreed not to play football this year as a condition of his reappointment to the academy. His loss will be felt, as he showed up well last season and this year is bigger and stronger than ever. He was not satisfactory in his studies last year and had to resign, and in order to return had to agree with his Congressman that football would be eschewed this season. The practice this week was fast and spirited. Good work was done by Reifsnider and Robertson, the ends, in handling forward passes, and Lange got them off in good shape. Much time was devoted to the handling of punts and the work was excellent for so early in the season.

GOLF.

To avoid a conflict with the tournament of the Morris County Golf Club the championship of the Eastern Professional Golfers Association at the Fox Hills Golf Club has been put forward a day to October 13 and 14. There will be a four ball match for professionals on the first morning and for pairs made up of amateurs and professionals in the afternoon. The championship will be on October 14 at thirty-six holes of medal play. It will be the third championship of the league; Aleck Campbell of Boston being the titleholder, who succeeded to Aleck Smith, who is soon to change from the Nassau Country Club to Wykagyl Country Club. On October 29, during the week following the women's championship at Chevy Chase, the Fox Hills Golf Club will hold a women's tournament. The prizes will be of exceptional value and beauty.

Saturday's competition at the Fairfield County Golf Club will be at thirty-six holes of handicap medal play for a cup presented by A. E. Foran. Final rounds in all sets of the September events will be decided this week at the Dunwoodie Country Club.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Mrs. Mary Carter, ninety-two years old, eldest female resident of Clarksboro, has been at the point of death for several days.

The entire fire loss of Atlantic City in September was but $600, according to official reports sent out yesterday. The loss is the smallest of any month for years.

After forty years' service as pastor of the Presbyterian churches at Columbus and at Plattsburg, Rev. Henry Rodney Hall has retired and will seek rest from his labors.

Taking laudanum in mistake for medicine, Mrs. Annie Ross, sixty years old, of 920 Howard street, Camden, was saved from death with difficulty at Cooper Hospital yesterday.

While riding a wheel between Mt. Ephraim and Westville, James Hutchinson was chased by a dog that jumped from a rag-picker's wagon and gave him a bite on the leg.

The idea that frost is necessary to open the chestnut burrs has been exploded in South Jersey, where large quantities of the nuts are being gathered before any frost has appeared.

Walter Miller, an oyster dealer of Ocean City and son of Parker Miller, first settler on that beach, died suddenly while eating his dinner yesterday. He was born in Philadelphia fifty-seven years ago.

John Jopko, who shot himself in the breast in an attempt at suicide, at his home, at Roebling's, Monday night, is in a critical condition at St. Francis's Hospital, Trenton. On a former occasion he cut his throat.

Four children were bitten yesterday by a fox terrier that raced along Second street, Camden, presumably suffering from rabies. The victims included Charles Franks, eight years old, of 1023 Francis street; Anna McGrath, eight years old, of 1218 Mt. Ephraim avenue, and John and Michael Lobinski, five and ten years old respectively, of 1128 Liberty street.

The Cumberland County Grand Jury, which has just finished its labors, adopted a resolution calling upon the State Medical Board to apply to the Legislature for a law that will do away with the "scrip doctors." It is the opinion that there should be a law enacted which will enable the State Board to revoke the license of any physician who gives prescriptions for intoxicating liquors unless he gives them in good faith that they are to be used for medicinal purposes.

When Mayor F. P. Stoy, of Atlantic City, yesterday signed the appropriation ordinance passed by Council Monday night, he protested the omission of an increase in the police budget. He had demanded $115,000 because last year the account ran short, but Council has forced him to keep within $110,000, which the Mayor declared was inadequate. A veto would have held up the pay of city officials and employes for several weeks, and he decided to approve the law, to which he personally if not officially, had objections.

There will be a reception of members at the communion service to be held at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning.

The Lord's Supper will be celebrated at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday morning.

Rally day services will be held at Warren chapel, Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. There will also be special music.

"SUSPEND JUDGMENT."

Samuel W. Rushmore has taken a most unusual method of seeking redress for alleged unfairness in tax assessments, but it must be admitted that judgment on him should be suspended until he "produces the goods." This he promises to do in the shape of a pamphlet containing "a complete and accurate list" of all assessments together with some alleged "odious comparisions." That he is not justified in pursuing the course he has adopted will be generally admitted, unless he has evidence that a great wrong has been committed and there is no other stronger method for redress. The law provides a proper remedy for any taxpayer who believes that his assessment is unduly severe, but the wealthy manufacturer has not seen fit to take advantage of this process. Regardless of the statutes, he has advertised "the city beautiful" in a most uncomplimentary way, but it remains to be seen whether he is "an undesirable citizen" or a public benefactor. On our part, we are fain to believe that there has been any corruption in the department of taxation, but should Mr. Rushmore bring convincing proof we will be the first to applaud him for his costly though peculiar efforts.

Mr. Fowler says that Taft will carry New Jersey by 75,000. As that great statesman spends much of his time in Vermont, probably this is a long range view. But at any rate, his estimate is as sound as his currency views.

HIGHER TAX ON CLUBS.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue Williams has rendered a decision which will affect many clubs throughout the country. He holds that any club or organization dispensing liquors to its members and making a charge for service, is liable to a special tax if the service charge includes any portion of the cost of the liquors furnished.

TWO CENT POSTAGE TO GREAT BRITAIN NOW

Two-cent postage rates go into effect between the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain tomorrow and one will be able to send a letter to England for the same rate, two cents an ounce, that it costs to send a letter from below the railroad to a party living on the Hill section of the city. Unpaid or short paid letters will be sent to their destination, but double the deficit postage will be collected on delivery.

This reduction in the postage rates, which at present is 5 cents from here to England, has been effected under a recent convention between George Von Lengerke Meyer, Postmaster General of the United States, and Sidney Buxton, Postmaster General of Great Britain.

Efforts to have cheap postal rates between nations separated by oceans have been made for several years and it was claimed that a more friendly feeling would promote if communications between the people of different countries would be sent more frequently.

So far this reduction is limited to the United States and Great Britain but it is believed that within a few years every country in the Postal Union will send and receive mail at great reductions from the present rates.

POLITICAL NOTES.

In Red Bank, with a natural Republican majority of 300, a Bryan and Kern Club has been organized with a membership of over 200. The members are mostly young men, many of whom will cast their first ballot. A determined effort will be made to carry all of the wards in the city for Bryan and Kern and the whole ticket. Arrangements are being made to hold a mass-meeting at which will be speakers of national note. This will be followed by a banner raising. The officers elected are: President, Alton Beekman; vice-president, Albert Jones; secretary, Charles Johnson; treasurer, Oliver Frake.

Congressman James A. Hamill was renominated last night by the Democrats of the Tenth, Hudson county, district, at the clubhouse of the Robert Davis Association, Jersey City.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy, chairman of the Republican State Committee, announced last night that Charles Warren Fairbanks, Vice-President of the United States, would spend two days in New Jersey next month. He will address mass-meetings to be arranged in Essex county on the evenings of October 12 and 13. One will be in Newark and the other somewhere in the suburbs, probably East Orange. On the evening of October 12 James S. Sherman, Republican candidate for Mr. Fairbanks' office, will speak in Orange.

Colonel Samuel D. Dickinson, Secretary of State, last night made his first public appearance in Hudson county since John Rotherham deposed him as leader of the Republican party, last January. He was one of the guests at the dinner of the April term Grand Jury, held at the Dukes House, in Hoboken.

Edward W. Townsend of "Chimmie Fadden" fame received the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Seventh District of New Jersey at the convention in Bloomfield last night. Mr. Townsend, who is a resident of Montclair, was named without difficulty. Joseph Connolly, of Belleville, was nominated against Mr. Townsend and was beaten, 175 votes to 9. Mr. Townsend's nomination was then made unanimous. He made a speech in which he promised his best efforts for the party, local and National. Mr. Townsend will be opposed to Representative R. Wayne Parker.

The Republicans of the Eighth Congressional district met in East Orange on Tuesday night and unanimously named William M. Wiley for Congress. Senator Colby was present and made a speech in support of the nominee. The Democrats of the Ninth New Jersey Congressional district held their convention in Jersey City and nominated Eugene F. Kinkead to succeed Eugene W. Leak. The Democrats of the Tenth district nominated James A. Hamill to succeed himself.

Most of the Congress nominations in New Jersey have been made, but the greatest interest among Jersey politicians yesterday was the Second district, where E. Burd Grubb, formerly Minister to Spain under the Harrison administration and a leading Republican, accepted the Democratic nomination for Congress. Gen. Grubb will run against Congressman Gardner, against whom a great deal of opposition has arisen in the district. Gen. Grubb received the Notification Committee at his home at Edgewater Park. In his speech he declared that he believes it the patriotic duty of any citizen to take up arms against such a foe as Congressman Gardner had proved to be to the people of the district. The General declared he was an independent of independents, and had ever fought in the line of clean politics and good citizenship. He expressed the belief that the National platforms of the two parties were so similar that it would make little difference to the country which won out in the campaign, as both are anxious to continue the good work begun by President Roosevelt. Josiah W. Ewan, chairman of the convention, pledged the hearty support of many emocratic leaders and Independent Republicans.

round, three silos were built, each of a capacity of 130 tons of ensilage. This is made by grinding up corn in the husk, just as it comes from the field. This lasts until early summer.

Patrons of this dairy can always depend on getting pure milk and cream, produced under every approved sanitary condition. Special bottles have been made and they will be sealed in a way to prevent germs coming in contact with the milk.

SIX CENTS FOR SLANDER.

Two Fresh Pond Women Now No Longer Friends.

Mrs. John Trundt, of Fresh Pond in the Middlesex County court yesterday afternoon recovered a verdic of six cents against her neighbor and lifelong friend, Mrs. Frederick Doerr for slander. The women were born and raised in the same community went to school together, played together, went to the same parties and, in married life, were active workers in the same church. Yesterday they sat in court, side by side as strangers.

Mrs. Trundt claimed that Mrs. Doerr circulated infamous stories about her. Mrs. Doerr said that she had simply said that William Lempke had said things about Mrs. Trundt and other women of the neighborhood, including herself, and that she had repeated the things so that people would beware of Lempke.

Senator Silzer, in summing up, declared the slander was of such a nature that some husbands would have taken the law into their own hands, but that Mr. Trundt decided to let the court settle the matter and vindicate his wife.

LESLIE CARTER'S WILL.

Disinherits One Son Because the Latter Associates with His Mother, the Noted Actress.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 1.—The will of Leslie Carter, once a millionaire, was filed for probate yesterday, disposing of an estate of $75,000. The estate is divided between a sister and a brother, thus disinheriting a son Leslie Dudley Carter.

In the will occurs the following paragraphs giving Mr. Carter's reason for disinheriting his son:

"So long as he remains under his mother's influence I do not desire either directly or indirectly to aid him. If he comes to understand the serious nature of his error and separates himself from his mother, I do not object to my brother or sister treating him as I gladly would have done if he had been loyal and dutiful toward me.

"I desire that all feeling of resentment for any ingratitue toward me be forgotten and disregarded, and I leave them free to act, in the event of my son separating himself from the influence and association of his mother, as they or either of them think best."

A MAYOR DEFIES A JUDGE.

Declares Police Can's Search Citizens for Concealed Weapons.

The efforts of County Judge Theodore Booraem to break up the practice of carrying concealed weapons have been successful throughout Middlesex county, but he has run up against a snag in Perth Amboy in the person of Mayor Bollschweiller who has issued a manifesto which he declares, must prevent the citizens of his baliwick from being searched for weapons.

Mayor Bollschweiller declares that the order of Judge Booraem is against the law which allows personal liberty, and that he will have arrested on sight any person caught trying to search the citizens of his village.

To Vote on City Library.

Whether or not it is good policy for the city of Elizabeth to support a public library will probably be decided by allowing a referendum on the question. The City Council will so recommend at its meeting tonight.

AGENT FOR FAMOUS BEER

Henry Haurand Is the Plainfield Agent for Rienzi Beer.

If you are going to have a social function at your home and want to serve your guests with a pure, high grade beer, free from billiousness or after effects, call up Henry Haurand and order a case of Rienzi, the famous Rochester beer of the Bartholomay Brewery Co.

Henry Haurand's address is 168 Somerset street. Call up 'phone No. 229, and he will deliver your order without delay.

Rienzi is not an ordinary beer. It is brewed after the most approved process. It has that rich, ripe flavor that gratifies the most particular taste.

Rienzi is pure and wholesome. It is a great stimulant for jaded appetites, and a bottle at bedtime will induce sleep, and quiet the overworked nerves.

Order Rienzi, the right beer; the wrong beer is dear at any price.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The weekly prayer meeting at the Baptist church tomorrow night will be in charge of Rev. J. E. Foster, of the State Missionary Society. Mr. Foster will tell of the work being accomplished by the society. His talk will be illustrated with stereopticon views of the work. The public are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

The "Outlaws," who are to play the local ball team Saturday, claim that the scrub lineup will be strong enough to keep the team busy for nine innings. This will be the last game of the season.

A meeting of the base ball team was held last night in the Central Hotel parlors. Business relating to the season's work and prospects for next seaon were discussed.

Chestnuts are beginning to ripen and the small boy is out every day gathering them. There is said to be a good crop this year.

Henry Alberts will catch for the Highlanders in the game at Neshanic Saturday afternoon.

A meeting of the Township Committee will be held in the town rooms tomorrow night.

Mrs. Horace Pangborn was the guest of friends in Plainfield yesterday.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., meet in the library rooms tonight.

MRS. JOHN HILL DIES AT MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Ellen Hill, wife of John Hill, of South Second street, died this morning in Muhlenberg Hospital, having been taken there yesterday for treatment. She had been ill for nearly a year with heart trouble and complications but seriously only within the past six weeks.

Mrs. Hill was born in England sixty years ago and had lived in Plainfield and vicinity for the past twenty-five years. She was a member and regular attendant at Hope chapel, at one time holding a record of three years without a single absence from a session of the Sunday-school. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Florence Ackerman, of Stebbins place.

The funeral will be held at her late home Saturday afternoon at 3:30 and will be in charge of Rev. L. R. Howard.

Mrs. Smith's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Marguerite Smith, who died at her home on East Fifth street, yesterday morning, will be held at the residence tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

FOWLER'S DREAM OF OVERWHELMING VICTORY

Representative Charles N. Fowler, who has been nominated in Fifth Congress district for re-election, said yesterday that he was confident that Mr. Taft would carry the State by a majority of 75,000. He was expressing his gratitude to the people of the Fifth district for supporting him for renomination when he said:

"The sentiment for Taft is growing, not only in this Congress district, but all over the country, and the trend of sentiment from Bryan to Taft is enormous. I believe Taft will carry this State by a majority of 75,000.

"I am in perfect harmony with Mr. Taft and heartily approve the Republican platform as amplified in his letter of acceptance. I am utterly opposed to Mr. Bryan's scheme of guaranteeing bank deposits, and favor the plan of coinsurance only under the management of the banks by the banks themselves. All discussion of the matter to date does not go to the foundation and is as superfiial as Bryan's position, which the bankers attack.

"The reform of currency based upon the principles of the bill I advocate is bound to come, because it is approved by every economist, with a single exception, in the country, and almost all boards of trade and other commercial bodies."

In reply to the question, "What do you think of the action of the national bankers concerning the guaranteeing of bank deposits, at their convention in Denver?" Mr. Fowler said:

"I think just as much of their action on the question of guaranteeing bank deposits, which is based upon the superflical view generally taken of the subject, because of the superficial position of Mr. Bryan on the questsion, as I did when they universally and practically unanimously condemned credit currency only a few years ago.

"They were utterly wrong then, as they now admit with the same unanimity that they opposed credit currency.

"The unification of our banking system and the consequent coinsurance of bank notes and bank deposits, which differ in no respect in principle, must inevitably follow a thorough understanding of the subject, which will only come about after a full discussion following a submission of the question to the people, precisely as the gold standard was settled."

Funeral of Mrs. Hudnut.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Hudnut was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. John F. Wakefield, of Manning avenue. It was conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. The floral tributes included a set piece from the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, of which she was a member. One of her favorite hymns, "Abide With Me," was sung. Burial was at Flemington.

Going Back to "Ole Virginny."

John Taylor, of West Third street, Plainfield's well known colored vocalist and buck and wing dancer, will leave Monday morning to visit his old home at Petersburg, Va., which he left twenty years ago. He will be accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Ellen Elliott, and his son, George Taylor. John will probably remain a month but he has stilled anxious queries by emphatically stating that he will return on or before Election Day to cast his vote.

gles, the carcass was taken to the Riverside Park premises where it was photographed at the feet of the slayer. A taxidermist afterward started removing the skin and it will be mounted probably to be placed in Mr. Radel's den as an evidence of his fearlessness and markmanship.

The lion was a splendid specimen of his kind and was seen in this city when the circus exhibited on the Darrow avenue lot early last summer. Soon after moving from here "Nero" escaped from his cage at Greenwich, Conn., and stampeded a big crowd of spectators that included many women and children. At that time, Mr. Washburn offered $500 reward for his capture alive and the money was paid to two canvasmen who corralled him with ropes.

When seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning, Mr. Washburn said that he could not understand how the lion got through the cage door. He stated that it seemed absolutely secure when the employes left it. He also said it was remarkable how "Nero" had left the building without doing more damage than he did. He passed by a drove of twenty or more ponies and several horses before he sprang upon the camel.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Girls" will be at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, direct from Daly's Broadway theatre, New York City, where it broke all records for a summer run. The piece is the work of Clyde Fitch, whose ability as an author no one can question, and who has to his credit more than fifty successes.

Virginia, once termed "The Mother of Presidents," and now the vacation place of that eminent statesman, Hon. William H. Taft, is the section of the country in which the principal scenes of "The Time, the Place and the Girl" are laid. This clever musical comedy of American environment and action comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. "The Time, the Place and the Girl" is the joint work of Will M. Hough, Frank R. Adams and Joseph E. Howard, the gentlemen who are responsible for "The Umpire," "The Land of Nod," "The Isle of Bong-Bong," "The Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella" and "The Girl Question," recently a big Broadway hit. "The Time, the Place and the Girl" is generally considered the best of the clever output of those three gentlemen, judging from its long record of success, since its phenomenal run of nearly two years in Chicago. Other cities have confirmed the Chicago verdict, and Plainfield will doubtless receive the production with acclaim.

The management of the New Plainfield theatre begs to announce, in answer to the many requests made at the box office and by letter, that the arrangements have been completed whereby "Our New Minister" will play a return date on Saturday next, matinee and night. It was only with the greatest difficulty that the company was secured, for the balance of the season was practically filled. The same excellent cast will appear. "Our New Minister" will be sure of a hearty welcome when it makes its reappearance, for it will be greeted not only by its old friends but many new ones as well.

Probably no dramatic production, within a decade has created as much enthusiasm and comment in New York as "The Devil," which by arrangement with Henry W. Savage will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday afternoon and night by Alfred E. Aarons. This version is the only one authorized by Franz Molnar, the famous Hungarian author as will be seen by the following cablegram sent by Mr. Savage: "You, and you alone, are authorized by me to produce Devil in America, anyone else who presents it does so without my authority and without paying royalties to me. My very best wishes for your success and my thanks for the splendid production of 'The Devil' which Herr Herzka tells me you made." (Signed) Francis Molnar. The play is described as symbolism in the most modern and realistic garb. Calling himself Dr. Miller, The Devil appears as a highly polished gentleman, full of cynical wit and worldly philosophy. Most inaptly he makes his appearance in the studio of Karl Mahler, an artist, who is just about to paint the portrait of Olga Hofmann, the wife of a rich banker. Olga and Karl had been sweetheart when he was a drawing master and she a pupil at the girls' school. He was [illegible] of that their love had [illegible] binding [illegible] artists are [illegible] to discuss their dead love. This dragged the discussion when it was interrupted by the news as both found that the love was not dead. Then "The Devil" appears as though shot up from a trap. He makes himself odious to both but by play of positions between himself and Olga and Karl and the young heiress, whom Olga has selected for him to marry arouses the forgotten love and better still for his purposes an unreasoning jealousy in both. The last act shows Karl's studio where "The Devil" first appears. He is again present and guides the young couple into a room and the door is closed. Though of absorbing interest the piece is full of sparkling wit and comedy situations.

THE COST OF RINGING THE WEDDING BELLS.

To count the cost of a wedding either before or directly after the ceremony is not the custom of the generous father. But many must regard their check books with amazement when, after the lapse of time, they realize what they have spent upon their daughter's behalf upon her day of days.

To decorate the church in meagre fashion looks worse than not to decorate it at all. But what an immense sum adequate floral adornments represent. The sum of £700 is by no means an uncommon bill for the floral decorations at a smart wedding, and in many cases the charge is large. In such instances an immense amount of subtle thought is expended upon the floral scheme.

It is impossible to calculate the enormous sum of money spent at a recent American wedding, where orchids formed the chief decoration. These costly blossoms were used in such profusion on that occasion that the sum of £1,000 did not pay for the orchids alone.

The bride's father, who apparently plays so small a part in the wedding, winning scarcely a glance from the assembled congregation, and that glimpse as often as not one of annoyance if he is nervous, or awkward, or obsecures a view of his daughter's marriage toilet, is a much to be commiserated person. Not only has he paid highly for the decoration of the church and his home, but he has been busy signing checks for months before for his daughter's trousseau.

His eye may fall upon such items, if he happens to have examined the bills, as £ for the wedding dress embellished with the most elaborate embroideries and flounced with real lace, of £40 for a single hat, of £200 for lingerie, or £50 for gloves, and so on, in like proportion, if he is a man of immmense wealth.

Not even millionaires can disburse money sa lavishly without realizing the cost of ringing the wedding bells. —London Mirror.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Copyright, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

It was at that instant Mortimer reached the scene—in his hand a stable fork he had grabbed as he raced down the passage. Even Lauzanne's attack, though it gave Allis a respite, would not have saved her life; the madly fighting horses would have kicked and trampled her to death.

"My God! Back, back, you devils!" And pushing, crowding, hugging the side of the stall, Mortimer fought his way to the girl.

Once Diablo's hoof shot out and the man's left arm, snapping like a pistol, dropped useless at his side. His brain reeled with the shock. The oddly swinging arm, dangling like a doll's, with the palm turned backward, seemed to fascinate him. Why was he there? What was he doing? Why was he hammering the horses over the head with a stable fork held tightly in his right hand? He hardly knew; his mind was clouded; he was fighting by instinct, and always crowding along the wall toward the farther corner. The girl had quite faded from his sight. Somehow he felt that he must drive the horses back, back, out of the stall.

Allis, too, was fighting; bringing the crop down with cutting force over the withers, neck, head, any part of the plunging mass in front of her. She could escape now through the opening where the boy had gone; but was not Mortimer in the same position she had been. She had seen him drop to his knees when Diablo lashed out; he must be sorely hurt; now he was reeling like a drunken man as he fought the mad brutes.

"This way," she panted, catching him by the coat, and pulling him toward the window.

Ah, that was it. He saw her now. It steadied his senses. It was the girl and she had called him—"Mortimer!"

"Back," he yelled, irrelevantly, in answer cutting Diablo across the face with the fork. It was pandemonium.

"Get through the window," the girl screamed in his ear. "Quick! Now—and she gave him a push toward it.

"You—first—back, you devils!" and he pressed away from her, closer to the horses, thrusting and striking with the steel-pointed fork.

The horses were giving away; Diablo was fighting half through the door, weakening before the assault of the powerful chestnut. Even in battle, as in a race, the stamina of the Lazzarone blood was telling.

"Quick! You can get out!" called the girl.

"You first!"

This drear repetition was the only expression Mortimer's numbed senses were equal to, but he fought with the ferocity of a tiger.

They could both escape, Allis knew, if she could bring Mortimer to understand; but they must do it quick, if at all. It was useless. He seemed conscious of but the one idea that he must drive the fighting animals out into the passage to save her. She was not afraid now; it was useless to speak to him of the window; neither would go first; so, with her riding whip she fought side by side with Mortimer; springing back from the swift-cutting forefeet; sometimes even hugging close to the side of the horse as he lashed out from behind; and once saved her companion from being cut down by pulling him swiftly from under a raised foot. In the end the stallions were forced out into the passage, just as Mike came rushing upon the scene.

But the battle had waned. Twice Diablo had been pulled to his knees, forced down by the firce strength that was Lauzanne's; the black was all but conquered. The trainer's voice checked Lauzanne's fury; even the boy had plucked up courage to return; and between them the chestnut was driven into his stall. All the fight had been taken out of Diablo. He struggled to his feet and stood trembling like a horse that had come out of a fierce cutting race. On his neck were the marks of Lauzanne's sharp teet, where they had snapped like the jaws of a trap; from his crest trickled a red stream. All the fierce fire of hate had gone from his eyes. He hung his head dejectedly, his flanks quivered. Lauzanne, too, bore evidence of the vicious strife. On one quarter, where Diablo's sharp hoof had ripped, was a cut as though he had been lashed with a sickle; and his withers were torn.

Mortimer and Allis had come out of the stall. The man, exhausted by the struggle, leaned wearily, with pale, drawn face, against the wall; the floor seemed slipping from under him; he felt a sensation of swiftly passing into nothingness. He was sleepy, that was all; but a sleepiness to fight against. He must still fight.

"You are badly hurt." It was the girl's voice. He was almost surprised that he recognized it, everything was so confused.

He answered heavily. "Yes, I'm—I'm—I want—to lie down."

"Here, lean on my shoulder." It was Mike's voice this time. "This is bad business," the trainer was saying; "we must get him out of this; he's nearly knocked out. Are ye all right, Miss?" turning to Allis.

The wounded man turned guiltily; he had forgotten the girl. Yes, surely she had been in that hell of noises with him, fighting too.

"I'm just frightened, that's all," answered Allis. "Mr. Mortimer saved me."

"Had he?" he wondered. "How had he come in there, anyway?" His mind refused to work out the problem; his side was so sore.

"Your arm's broke," said Mike, passing to Mortimer's right side. "Come, lean on me, sir. I'an you walk? I'll put ye in the buggy and drive ye to the house."

At the first step Mortimer staggered and swayed like a drunken man. In his side were many sharp things pulling him down like grappling irons; on his head was a great weight that crushed his feet into the hard planks; his knees gave way under this load, and he would have fallen, but for Mike's strong arm.

"I'm—afraid;" then he set his teeth hard, his voice had sought to end the sentence in a groan of anguish; the thing that was tearing at his side had whistled in his lungs.

Allis stepped forward swiftly, and passing her arm about his waist, helped Mike lead him to the door. Twice she put her left hand up and brushed tears from her eyes; the struggle had unnerved her. Very helplessly against her swayed the man she had laughed at half an hour before. And he had been crushed saving her! But that was not why the tears came—not at all. She was unstrung.

"And he's got grit," she kept muttering to herself; "he has never even groaned."

Together they succeeded in getting him into the buggy; then, gently, Mike drove to the house.

Three smashed ribs and a broken arm was the doctor's inventory of the damage inflicted by Diablo's kick, when he came out again with Porter, in an hour.

"I'm afraid one of the splintered ribs is tickling his lung," he added, "but the fellow has got such a good nerve that I hardly discovered this unpleasant fact. He'll be all right, however; he's young, and healthy as a peach. Good nursing is the idea, and he'll get that here, of course. He doesn't want much medicine; that we keep for our enemies—ha! ha!" and he laughed cheerily, as if it were all a joke on the battered man.

"Thim docthors is cold-blooded divils," was Mike's comment. "Ye'd a throwing' dice, an' it was a horse on the other gintleman. Bot' tumbs! it was, too. Still, if old saw-bones had been in the box yonder with Diablo, he wouldn't have felt so funny."

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 4, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Songs of the heart.—X. Our vows and their fulfillment.—Ps. cxvi. Consecration meeting.

The One Hundred and Sixteenth Psalm was undoubtedly written by King Hezekiah as an expression of his gratitude to God for sparing his life, as recorded in Isa. xxxviii. 1-5. The authorship of the psalm has been ascribed to others. But there is no incident in the Bible that in any way fits into it except the experience of Hezekiah, and that does so with marked exactness. Isaiah announced to Hezekiah to put his things in order, for the reason that he was to die. The king turned his face to the wall and prayed unto the Lord, wept bitter tears and undoubtedly made vows unto the Lord, for he declares in the psalm that he will fulfill his vows. God heard his prayers, and he opened the psalm by saying: "I love the Lord because he has heard my voice and my supplications, because He inclined His ear unto me; therefore will I call upon Him as long as I live." Success in prayer inspires to continuance in prayer.

The psalmist then describes his condition as he went into death and how the Lord saved him from death, dried his weeping eyes and kept his feet from falling into mistrust or denial of God because of his afflictions. In deep gratitude for all God's blessings he cries, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"

In considering the question, "What shall I render unto the Lord?" the psalmist emphasizes the fact that he will pay his vows unto the Lord. Twice he [illegible] "I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people," the second time adding, "In the courts of the Lord's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem." And the psalm closes with the exhortation, "Praise ye the Lord." It is beyond question, therefore, that Hezekiah had made vows unto the Lord during his illness. Most of us follow his example. In times of adversity and illness we make solemn and sacred vows unto God. As we follow the example of the psalmist in making vows, we should do the same in our attitude toward them after God has heard our prayer and restored us or helped us in the hour of need.

First.—The psalmist declares that he will pay his vows unto the Lord. Vows unto God of any character are very sacred. Human vows are important and should be paid, but much more should we pay our vows unto the Lord. But do we always do so? All our religious vows are unto the Lord. Shall we refuse to keep faith with God?

Second.—The psalmist says that he will pay his vows "now" unto the Lord. He will not postpone their fulfillment. This is the weakness of too many. They intend to fulfill their promises to God, but postpone them. It is so easy to procrastinate—to put off the payment of our pledges. The psalmist did not fall into this error. "Now," while God's benefits were fresh in his mind, he would fulfill them. If you have vowed to God and not fulfilled it, do it, and do it now.

Third.—The psalmist declared that he would publicly pay his vows. "In the presence of all the people, in the courts of the Lord's house," he paid his vows to God. Have we vowed thus to express our gratitude to God for some especial blessing? Have we promised Him that if our lives are spared, if adversity passes away, we will accept Christ as our Saviour and publicly confess Him or do some special work in the church or among men? If so, we should do it—do it at once and in God's house.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xvii. 1-8; xxviii. 10-22; xxxv. 9-15; Ps. cv. 1-10; Num. xxi. 1-3; Ps. cxxxii. 1-5; Rom. xii. 1, 2; Acts xviii. 18-21.

Sightless, but Seeing.

At the close of a Christian Endeavor consecration meeting in India the roll was being called, and one after another was responding. After one name was called there was a slight pause, and amid the perfect silence rose the clear, sweet tones of a young girl's voice:

"The very dimness of my sight
Makes me secure,
For, groping in my misty way,
I feel His hand. I hear Him say,
'My help is sure.'"

The meeting over, the visitor sought out one of the members and asked the reason for the emotion manifested by the audience in the response given. The following reply was made: "You may well wonder what touched us all so much, but you will hardly be surprised when I tell you. For months that girl's sight has been failing, and a fortnight ago she became totally blind. This is her first response since."—India Christian Endeavor.

New Forces.

The coming historian will characterize the nineteenth century as the age of new forces. He will make mention of steam and electricity and of their wonderful application and adjustments in the industrial world. He will have something to say about dynamite and of the part it played in enforcing peace. But he will dwell with vastly greater emphasis on certain new forces and new adjustments of religious things, such as the Sunday school, the missionary propaganda, the temperance reform, women's work and the Endeavor movement. Nor is the last the least. It stands for the transfusion of youthful blood; it means the mobilization of the Christian army; it marks an awakening as distinct as the crusades and immensely more momentous.—Rev. David James Burrell, D. D.

FOLLOWING HOUNDS IN BROWN OCTOBER

Lewis E. Waring, as master of the hounds of the Watchung Hunt Club, has decided upon the time and place where the hounds will meet during October for the weekly hunts. The hounds will not meet on Saturday, October 10, on account of the race meeting of the Whippany River Club. The master is desirous of having as many farmers and their friends hunt with the hounds this year as possible, and they and their families will be given a hearty welcome at all the meets as well as at the club house. The following fixtures have been announced:

Saturday, October 3, Dog Tavern, 3:30 p. m.; Wednesday, October 7, Oak Tree, 6:15 a. m.; Wednesday, October 14, The Kennels, 6:15 a. m.; Saturday, October 17, Mt. Pleasant Schoolhouse, 3:30 p. m.; Wednesday, October 21, The Kennels, 6:15 a. m.; Saturday, October 24, Baltusrol Golf Club, 3:30 p. m.; Wednesday, October 28, Plainfield Country Club, 3:30 p. m.; Saturday, October 31, Colonia, Pennsylvania Railroad Station, 3:30 p. m.

PERSONAL.

Miss Alice Smith, of Somerville, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

Mrs. Berne Egel, of West Front street, is slowly improving from an attack of typhoid fever.

Miss Eleanor Staats, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a visit of a few days with friends here.

Edward Abel, of West Front street, who has been ill several weeks with typhoid fever, is improving.

Mrs. S. S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, has returned from a visit with relatives at Whitehouse.

Clarence Vail, of the First National Bank, returned yesterday from his annual ten days' vacation.

Daniel Leach, of Rifton Glen, N. Y., is visiting his brother-in-law, Charles Place, of Grove street.

Mrs. Fred Haberle, of this city, is quite ill at her summer home in Manasquan, with typhoid fever.

Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Adelberg, of East Second street, are parents of a son, born to them last night.

S. T. Sarson, of Watchung avenue, returned home yesterday after an absence of one month, spent with relatives in the western part of New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Haynes, of "The Bristol," West Front street and Central avenue, have returned home from Lake Hopatcong, where they have been sojourning for nearly four months.

Rev. and Mrs. I. L. Cottrell, of Leonardsville, N. Y., who have been attending the anniversary of the Seventh Day Baptist church, Ashaway, R. I., will come to Plainfield this week to visit his son, John Cottrell.

W. I. Chittenden, formerly of this city, will spend the fall and winter in Atlanta. In a letter written to a friend here, he says that the weather in Atlanta is delightful and cool and that recent rains have been a great benefit.

Trolley Change for Plainfielders.

In speaking of the complaint made by pupils of the Plainfield High School regarding trolley service, a member of the Councilmanic public affairs committee, said that in re-arranging the schedule, it was not the purpose or intention to consider any but Plainfield children and so far as they are concerned the change seems to work satisfactorily. He said that he thought the Dunellen authorities might be able to arrange for a through car provided that there are any considerable number of children from that place who attend the high school here, but that was not a matter for the authorities in Plainfield to discuss.

Sewer Survey Progressing.

Hering & Fuller, the New York engineers, are making excellent progress with the preliminary survey for the proposed trunk line sewer to include Plainfield, North Plainfield, Bound Brook, Dunellen and South Bound Brook. It is expected that possibly within the next month the engineers will have their work completed and report submitted to the general committee representing the several municipalities. Chairman F. E. Mygatt will then issue a call for another conference when the result will be announced.

L. B. Woolston and Peter Mc Donough Oppose Restricting Privileges to Corporations.

AT TRADE BOARD'S SESSION.

Obstacle to Trolley Between City and South Plainfield, They Say, Should Be Removed.

An unusually large attendance of members marked the first fall meeting of the Board of Trade, held last night, and the spirited discussion and lively interest in several important topics, demonstrated that the organization is far from being a "dead one." Among the questions discussed at some length was the one in reference to securing some means of transportation between Plainfield, South Plainfield and Metuchen, and it was the sense of the members that every effort should be made to establish either a trolley, bus or auto line between these points.

Speaking in the interest of this movement, P. McDonough, of South Plainfield, said that it would be possible to obtain all the necessary consents for a trolley franchise, but he had learned after a conference with Col. Hine and other officials of the Public Service Corporation, that the company has no desire to undertake the project for a limited term of years as now provided by law. He felt sure that a trolley line would be built if the franchise could be had for an indefinite term of years and this led him to say that he thought the limited franchise act was undesirable and should be repealed. He spoke of the great advantage to Plainfield from a trade point of view in having such means of transportation.

L. B. Woolston told of his interest in the proposition and of his experience in previous years in trying to get a trolley line between the city and South Plainfield. He too opposed the limited franchise act and thought the Legislature should repeal it this winter.

William Hamilton, another resident of South Plainfield, said that the Plainfield merchants are losing a great deal of trade which now goes to New Brunswick and Perth Amboy. He said that if good transportation was established with South Plainfield and Metuchen all of that trade would come here and not only would the stores be benefitted, but the banks as well.

Milton Mindel, of Park avenue, who has been a leading spirit in the proposed improvement, addressed the board, suggesting that either a bus, an auto or trolley line be established at an early date. He said that he had been informed by one of the managers of the Trenton Fair Association that the annual fair would be held near Stelton, after this year, that its present site in Trenton had been sold for building lots and that 600 acres have been purchased near Stelton along the Pennsylvania Railroad, where future exhibitions will be held.

For this reason he urged that the members get busy and get in touch with the people that live in that part of the State. To prove that such a line would pay he referred to the auto bus line operated last summer by Andrew C. Thompson, who conducts an auto garage on Park avenue. He alone believed that the line would pay and it did, the autos being well patronized in their daily runs to Boynton Beach. He felt sure that such a line to South Plainfield and Metuchen would be a paying venture.

AWARDED MANY PRIZES.

A. C. Bechstein's Poultry Farm A Big Winner.

A. C. Bechstein, of Park avenue, owner of the Oak Tree Poultry Farm, one of the finest in the State, has had great success in the exhibition of his pigeons and poultry at various shows held this fall. At the Westchester County Fair, recently held, he exhibited four pigeons and nine fowls, receiving thirteen prizes. He also exhibited at the Trenton Fair, this week, receiving eighteen prizes from his exhibit of four pigeons and fourteen fowls. Mr. Bechstein has probably some of the finest stock to be found in the country and he never fails to receive valuable awards wherever he exhibits.

Mrs. Stockton Wins Tournament.

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, of the Plainfield Country Club, won the one-day open tournament on the links of the Hackensack Golf Club, yesterday, with a card of 101, 20-81, eighteen holes. Miss Maud VanBoskerck returned a card of 112, 12-100, while Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers posted a score of 106, 4-102.

ARGUE OVER P. O. SITE

Board of Trade Members Differ as to Most Desirable Location.

MORE MONEY IS NEEDED.

Mayor Samuel Townsend and Others Take Position that $125,000 Appropriation Is too Small.

If the Government has as much trouble selecting a site for the proposed Federal building in Plainfield as the Board of Trade had last night in trying to settle the question, it is safe to say that there are many people here who may not live to see the new postoffice structure. The presentation of the subject by President Marshall caused an endless discussion. There were so many varied opinions that after several motions and amendments were offered the matter became hopelessly tied up. As a result the subject was tabled for the present.

The discussion began when J. V. E. Vanderhoef, a member of the Plainfield Merchants' Association, tried to have the board adopt the resolution approved by the association, favoring the Embury property on East Front street as the best place for the postoffice building.

L. B. Woolston considered it would be best to go slow and perhaps through the efforts of Senator John Kean and Congressman Fowler, a second appropriation of $50,000 could be secured which, with the $100,000 would make it possible to get a more central site. "What's an extra $50,000," said Mr. Woolston. "Our Congressman and Senator should be able to secure the extra appropriation. I do not favor the Embury property because there are no cross streets at that point. There is no show of our getting a public municipal building here and let us have a postoffice building worthy of the city."

F. A. Duttenhoffer favored the Embury property and urged that the board lend its endorsement to that proposition. He considered the price reasonable. Morris Abraham suggested the site at West Second street and Madison avenue, which he said could be purchased for $25,000.

Speaking in the interest of the borough, Mayor Samuel Townsend cautioned the board to go slow. He argued that the bulk of the population lies west of Somerset street in the borough, and the same was true in Plainfield. The people of the borough use the postoffice and it is to their interest as well as that of Plainfielders that the new building be located in a central spot. He believed that a larger appropriation could be obtained. He then suggested that the board go on record as favoring a site within the boundaries of Madison and Watchung avenues, Greenbrook and Fourth street, and offered this as an amendment to Mr. Vanderhoef's motion.

The amendment was opposed strongly because the boundaries would eliminate the Embury property. Joseph C. Allen, of Westervelt avenue, championed the movement in behalf of the Embury property, explaining that the price asked was very low, less than $9,000. The discussion brought out the fact that the Government still has a lease of eight years on the Babcock building for its postoffice, but that the lease can be terminated on thirty days' notice.

At the suggestion of E. A. Laing, J. Fred MacDonald, who represents the owners of the Durlach property, and who talked with William Fletcher Field, the Government agent, when he visited Plainfield, explained that the Embury property was the logical site for the Federal building considering the price. It has a frontage of 111 feet and the sixty five additional feet of land necessary, according to specifications, could be had for a reasonable price. This site is 250 feet east of the Durlach property for which $60,000 is asked.

President Marshall stated for the benefit of the members that Mr. Field informed him that if a site should be purchased now it would probably be four years before work on the building would begin. In view of this Mr. Allen stated that fours hence, the Embury property would be the most central location for the building.

During the discussion motion after motion was offered to which were added several amandments. President Marshall was finding it difficult to straighten out the tangle when Eugene A. Laing came to his rescue with a motion to lay the whole matter on the table. It was seconded promptly and before the majority realized what had happened, the motion was carried.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Phillips, of Fairview avenue, have gone to New York for the winter.

CONFERENCE OF MINISTERS

Elizabeth District Pastors of M. E. Churches to Meet at Bound Brook, Oct. 15.

THE PROGRAM ANNOUNCED.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph Will Preside—Three Sessions Are Arranged for Occasion.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of this city, district superintendent of the Elizabeth District M. E. church, has completed the program for an all-day conference of the ministers of the Elizabeth district, to be held in the M. E. church, Bound Brook, on Thursday, October 15. There will be three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening. The day sessions will be for ministers, while the evening service will be for the general public. As district superintendent, the new title given to presiding elders by the general conference, Dr. Randolph will have charge of the sessions. The program is as follows:

10 a. m., devotions, Rev. S. D. Decker, of Whitehouse, and Rev. George Okeson, of Mt. Horeb; 12:20, "Ethics of Worship," Rev. Thomas I. Coultas, of Elizabeth; 10:40, "The Mid-Week Meeting," Rev. A. W. Hayes, of Westfield; 11, "The All-Around Pastor," Rev. W. S. Newson, of Frenchtown; 11:20, "The Best Book of Recent Issue I Have Read," Rev. William Westcott, of Tottenville, N. Y. 12, luncheon served by women of M. E. church.

2 p. m., devotions, Rev. W. C. Kinsey, of Clinton; Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of North Plainfield; 2:20, "Civic Righteousness," Rev. F. J. Hubach, of Port Richmond; 2:50, "The Applied End of Methodism," Rev. R. K. Boyd, of Elizabeth; 3:20, "The Problem of the Young People and Some Attempts at Solution," Rev. C. C. Woodruff, of Roselle; 3:50, "Evangelism," Rev. G. C. Wilding, of Perth Amboy; 4:20, "Foreign Missions," Rev. Marvin A. Rader, district superintendent Manila district, Philippine Islands; 6, supper served by women of M. E. church.

The evening service for the general public will begin at 7:30 o'clock. There will be two addresses, one on "Foreign Missions Under the Flag," by Rev. Marvin A. Rader, of the Philippine Islands, and the other on "Our Own Country," by Rev. Robert Forbes, corresponding secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal church.

BOARD OF TRADE HEARS TRUNK SEWER REPORT

The Board of Trade at its first fall meeting, last night, adopted the new constitution and by-laws without any change, received an informal report from E. F. Feickert, chairman of the publicity committee, and President H. W. Marshall appointed Herman Schwed, Francis K. Anderson, F. A. Duttenhoffer, J. V. F. Vanderhoef and J. Fred MacDonald as an executive committee for the ensuing year.

Regarding the proposed trunk line sanitary sewer in which several adjoining municipalities are interested, Mayor Samuel Townsend, of the borough, explained the progress already made, explaining that the engineers, Hering & Fuller are now engaged in making the preliminary survey and that the municipalities are now awaiting their report. There was an informal discussion on the subject and the members expressed their approval of the proposition.

Charles Matt, Ernest Sharpe and A. H. Osmun were elected members, the rules being suspended for that purpose. It was expected that a representative of an adding machine company would be present to explain that it is desirous of locating a factory in Plainfield, but Edmund Rushmore, through whom the representative had been invited, informed the board that "he must have been sidetracked," whereupon one of the members suggested that "possibly he had been held up at the Rushmore factory."

An Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. George Mullen, of Basking Ridge, have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Nellie May Mullen, and Francis Philip Jahn, of Scotch Plains. The ceremony will be performed at the bride's home on Thursday evening, October 15, at 6 o'clock. Mr. Jahn is the managing head of the firm of Robert Jahn's Sons and has been prominent for several years in local business and lodge affairs.

GIRL SITS UPON INTRUDER UNTIL POLICE ARRIVE

After being sat upon by a pretty girl until the arrival of a policeman, John Titterelli, sixteen years old, of No. 118 Park avenue, Westfield, was arraigned in the Essex Market police court in New York yesterday on a charge of burglary, and Magistrate Kernochan held him in $1,000 bail for examination today.

Mrs. Rosa Blauhut lives on the fourth floor at No. 140 Essex street, New York, and keeps a furnishing store on the ground floor. Her son, Alexander, found Tittrelli in the apartment, and after they had struggled down one flight of stairs the intruder broke loose. He was running down the next flight of stairs when Alexander's sister, Ida, seventeen years old, caught him and held him until her mother and Alexander arrived. The captive bit Mrs. Blauhut on her left arm, but he was floored, and Ida sat upon him while her brother ran to the street for a policeman.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF PROSPEROUS CONCERN

This day marks the Fifth Anniversary of the People's Credit Clothing Co., 131 East Front street, this city. No concern can show as clear a record of progress as they. Beginning five years ago with a very small part of one of the floors they now occupy, they, within a very short time, were compelled to increase their quarters to double its original size, owing to the volume of business which poured in and this has continued, so that today they occupy the entire two floors of the Pittis block, with a floor space equalling the combined space of both the Public Service Corporation and Lohrman's confectionery, who occupy the ground floors of the same building.

This continued and increasing business record is wholly due to the thorough and careful good business methods of their able manager, H. Adelberg. Mr. Adelberg's many years of experience has taught him the requirements of the business and his method of doing business has won the friendship of all his customers for him.

In the past, many Plainfielders, as well as the residents of the nearby towns, have found it necessary to hold on to their ready cash as much as possible, and still find it very easy to be well dressed and to keep their families well dressed, by paying the small installment of One Dollar per week. The courteous treatment extended to all, has won the confidence of those who have had any business dealings with them.

The People's Credit Clothing Company do not believe that it is one thing to get customers and another to keep them, they claim that once they get a customer, that customer will not leave them. They give everybody a square deal and that is the secret of their success. A fitting example of their ability to fit up a proper establishment, is shown in their ladies and misses department. An entire floor is given over to this department, which is elegantly fitted up and stocked with the latest assortment of suits, coats, jackets and furs, as well as a large and beautiful assortment of ladies hats, which attract your attention the minute you set foot in the establishment. It can be truthfully said that this is the finest ladies' and misses' wearing apparel establishment in this part of the State. Nor can the gents' and boys' department be slighted, to which another floor is assigned. The large and fine assortment of suitings, overcoats, vestings and hats, will convince the most critical buyer that he has found what he sought.

The People's Credit Clothing Company propose to celebrate this their Fifth Anniversary with a large Fall Opening, on Saturday, October 3, which will surpass anything heretofore ever attempted in the way of a fine assortment of Fall wearing apparel and their usual easy terms of One Dollar per week will prevail, thus enabling those of very moderate means to take advantage of it and to be well dressed in the hardest of times.

A beautiful souvenir will be presented to each and every visitor to their establishment on the Fall Opening day. •••

DEATH OF MRS. WEIGHTMAN

Passed Away Last Night at Watch Hill, R. I., Her Summer Home.

HAD BEEN ILL ONE WEEK.

Was Formerly Miss Fanny Cox, of This City, and Had Lived in Philadelphia Since Her Marriage.

Word came by telegraph to Plainfield today of the death at Watch Hill, R. I., of Mrs. Aubrey Weightman, of Philadelphia, who was formerly Miss Fanny Cox, daughter of Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street. It occurred last night at 7 o'clock after an illness of one week. Mrs. Cox, who has been spending the summer at the same cottage with Mrs. Weightman, was at her bedside when the end came.

The telegrams conveying the information gave no details or arrangements for the funeral but it is probable that the body will be taken to Philadelphia for the service and burial.

Mrs. Cox was one of the most popular young women in Plainfield's social circles at the time of her marriage to Mr. Weightman, five years ago this month, and the ceremony at her mother's home was the event of the season. It was attended by scores of prominent residents of the city and borough and many society people from the larger cities. Mr. Weightman is the nephew of the late John B. Weightman, Philadelphia's multi-millionaire chemist, and the young couple made their home in the Quaker City after the wedding, although Mrs. Weightman spent a great deal of time in Plainfield.

The family passed the summer at Watch Hill and during the heated months Mrs. Weightman was enjoying her usual health. It was not known to Plainfielders generally that she had been ill until the news of her death was received.

Besides her husband and mother, Mrs. Weightman is survived by two little daughters and three brothers, Dr. Rowland Cox, of New York, and Archibald and Roy Cox, of Plainfield.

MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL TO GET $5,250 FROM COUNTY

Little business of interest to Plainfielders was transacted at the regular meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders in Elizabeth, yesterday. Appropriations aggregating $20,000 were made to the four hospitals in the county, Muhlenberg Hospital's share being $5,250. The Elizabeth General Hospital receives $8,000; Alexian Brothers, Elizabeth, $3,000, and St. Elizabeth's, Elizabeth, $3,750. These amounts were reported to the county collector and will be apportioned January 1, 1909.

The suggestion that an isolaion ward be established at the county jail was adopted, and it is was also recommended that two padded cells, one for men and the other for women, be built. Definite action was not taken on this proposition, but the recommendation will probably be adopted.

UNITY LODGE ENTERTAINS KNIGHTS AT EUCHRE PARTY.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., gave a progressive euchre party and quoit match last night, following a regular meeting. The lodge entertained Lodge of the Castle, of Somerville; Somerset Lodge, of Bound Brook, and Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, of this city. The team from Lodge of the Sastle, numbering thirty-five men in uniform, conferred the third rank on one candidate.

At the conclusion of the initiatory work, the euchre party was held. First prize, a gold pin, was awarded to A. D. Hope, and Edward Bowman received the second prize, a Welsbach lamp. Clarence Rittenhouse received the booby prize. No prizes were given in the quoit match. Wood Titsworth attended the meeting for the first time in twelve years. The committee in charge of the entertainment comprised Samuel Rothberg, chairman; A. E. Causebrook and James D. Anderson.

W. B. Cragin, Jr., Champion.

The men's singles tennis championship at the Plainfield Country Club has been won by W. B. Cragin, Jr., who defeated A. D. Beers in the final round, 6-0, 8-6, 6-2. In the semi-final round, Cragin deefated W. L. Righter, 6-0, 6-2, and A. D. Beers defeated Willard Wadsworth, 6-2, 1-6, 9-7.

MR. RUSHMORE EXPLAINS

Manufacturer Says His Taxation Campaign Has Uniformity as Its Object.

MUCH CENSURE FOR HIM.

Board of Trade President Invites Mr. Rushmore to Tell His Grievance but Latter Declines at This Time.

Samuel W. Rushmore, the manufacturer who has erected a huge sign over his new factory in South avenue which announces "Tremendous Taxes for Easy Plainfielders, Easy Taxes for Men in the Ring," and advises that all get a copy of his forthcoming tax lists, declined to explain his object to the Board of Trade last night. He said he was unable to be present but that did not save him from public opinion.

In addressing the Board of Trade, President Marshall dclared that it was unfortunate that Plainfield should be given such undeserved notoriety. He added that the extraordinary action of this particular taxpayer in holding the city up to ridicule and contempt had done much to counteract the board's campaign in advertising the community as "the city beautiful." Mr. Marshall expressed the opinion that it is up to the Common Council to deal with the discontented taxpayer. J. C. Allen put in a word arguing that Mr. Rushmore should be thanked for publishing abroad the fact that Plainfield is really a model government.

That Mayor Fisk and the other city authorities will request that Mr. Rushmore state his grievance in the proper form at an early date is the general opinion. When seen today, the wealthy manufacturer said that his promised booklet would be issued in due time and that at present he cared to make no statement. "I am not making any protest against my own assessment," he stated. "All I seek to do is to arouse public opinion and uniform taxation will follow. Under the law, I have no remedy so far as others are concerned. Some people in this city are assessed at a startling low figure. This is what I am to rectify."

Elston M. French, a local real estate agent, today sent this statement to the local papers with a request for publication:

"Mr. French thinks tax assessors are not infallible; he has occupied that position himself, but if an honest difference of opinion exists there are three methods of appeal to be taken; first the County Board of Assessors, second the State Board and third the Courts.

"His belief is that the assessors try to do their duty and more than earn their salaries. While in the past their ideas of values and his have differed, and may again in the future, he has always found them amenable to reason. The inference to be gathered from Mr. Rushmore's sign that the Board of Assesors are influenced by political pull is absolutely unfair and unjust.

"This sign would indicate that the city of Plainfield is run by grafters when it is a well known fact that it is one of the best governed cities in the State.

"If errors of judgment exist he has the right not only to ask the proper authorities to reduce his own assessment, but those which are in his opinion too low can be advanced.

"One man can tear down more than ten men can build up. Such a sign is damaging to the city, and should be obscured from view by a high board fence erected along the line of the Central Railroad."

Miss Lawrence Surprised.

A birthday surprise party was given to Miss Mamie Lawrence, of Tompkins avenue, yesterday afternoon. The house was handsomely decorated, the color scheme in the dining room being pink and white. Games were played and a luncheon served. Miss Lawrence received a number of beautiful gifts. Those present were the Misses Grace Ludgate, Helen Taylor, Florence Taylor, Grace Taylor, Alice Brentnall, Ethel Brentnall, Mary Peterson, Amy Norway, Lizzie Mowray, Ethel Brown, Ruth Morris, and Ralph Ludgate, Theodore Martin, Harvey Taylor, Ralph Brown, Walter Brown, Clarence Donnelly, Charles Lawrence, Russell Lawrence, Goodwin Lawrence, Miss Mamie Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Donnelly, Mrs. G. C. Coan and Miss Hazel Coan, of Meriden, Conn., and Mrs. William Coan.

Will Play New Brunswick F. C.

The Plainfield Soccer Club will go to New Brunswick tomorrow afternoon to play a return game with the New Brunswick F. C. The last time these teams met the score was a tie, neither side scoring. The Plainfield boys are in fine condition and expect to bring home a victory.

FOR DIRECT PRIMARIES

Republican County Chairman Smith Says Initial Trial Proves Their Popularity.

ANSWERS BRYAN'S SLOGAN.

He Declares Direct Nominations Show That the People Do Rule—Results Significant.

That many recognized Republican leaders in Union county strongly disagree with State Chairman Franklin Murphy, State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and many others as to the merits of the new direct primary law was learned today by a representative of The Daily Press who obtained expressions from a number of them. Frank H. Smith, the Union county chairman, appears to be most pronounced in an endorsement, declaring that the plan is the most Democratic and equitable.

"I am more than satisfied with the results of the first trial given the direct primary law," said Mr. Smith today. "Personally I regard it the twentieth century improvement on the old town meeting where everybody is given a fair and equal show. The direct primary insures to every voter the sacred right of registering his own choice for party candidates.

"To my mind," continued Mr. Smith, "one of the good features of the new primary is the secrecy of the ballot. The only thing that is revealed by it is the voter's party affiliations and I believe this exception is well ordered for it prevents trickery and dishonesty. I cannot see the argument that the new primary is cumberstone as some have stated. On the other hand, I think it is simplicity personified. Nor can I altogether agree that it seems to place the control in the populous communities, and that smaller localities do not have as much say as under the convention plan.' If the smaller localities do not have as much representation under the new plan the convention idea, it is because they probably are not rightfully entitled to it.

"Personally, and I speak only for myself, I want to see this direct primary law given the fair deal. The returns of the recent primary election should convince anyone that it has propen popular. In many places the primary vote was almost as large as at a general election and the interest taken in making nominations was given ample demonstration of the fact that the people want the law. In Elizabeth there was convincing proof that the new law is the best thing that could be devised. The same was true all over. I'm for the new direct primary first, last and all the time. It is the best answer to Mr. Bryan's question: 'Shall the people rule?' For with it on the statute books the people do rule."

MICHELSON'S FALSIFYING COST HIM FINE OF $25.50.

Max Michelson falsified to Judge Runyon yesterday. He denied absolutely that he had collected junk in Plainfield without a license when Patrolman Saffron brought him into court on that charge. The officer said he could get witnesses to back him up and His Honor adjourned the case until this morning to allow him to bring them in, warning Michelson that if he had lied he would be sent to jail.

Saffron was on hand today with Max Kahn, who has a skirt factory on West Front street, and who testified that he had sold Michelson a lot of remnants. Then, and only then, did Michelson admit that what the policeman had said was true but he begged hard for leniency. Mr. Kahn also put in a good word for the defendant and it had much to do with the magistrate imposing a fine instead of the imprisonment he had threatened. He instructed the defendant to pay $25.50, the amount a license would have cost him if he had acted squarely with the other junkmen.

"When I pay the money, can I have a license for it?" queried Michelson.

"Sure you can," the judge said; "for another $25.50."

Change in Funeral Arrangements.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Hill, wife of John Hill, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday, will be held at Hope chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3:45, instead of at her late home as at first planned. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery.

Borough Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council will be held tonight. Indications point to a busy session as several matters of importance await discussion.

Fall Suits and Coats
For Grown Ups and Young Fellows.

We offer you tomorrow exceptionally well Tailored Suits for Dress and Business Wear in plain black, brown and neat mixtures, in various good styles bordering on the conservative, and—

Young Men's Suits with all the latest kinks that appeal to the younger set—suits made of splendid materials—the famous "Sampeck" make; also—

Not a suit or overcoat in the collection that should sell at less than $15, and from that the values go above $20; but we are going to give you choice of any suit or overcoat or raincoat tomorrow, at only $12

Palato Raincoats, form-fitting, Fall weight, full skeleton lined, Top Coats and Short Box Overcoats.

Men's regular $10 to $15 Suits, Saturday at $7.50.

Men's $4.50 and $4.98 Trousers, tomorrow at $3.85.

Strong and serviceable wearing trousers for as little as $1.50.

Gents' Tailoring—only the best—is now a feature of our clothing business.

Suits and Overcoats $25 to $55.

Rich Millinery Pickings
Especially Hats at $4.75

The Trimmed Hats we sell at $4.75 are enough to make those who would compete with us jealous, for it is a difficult proposition for them to face—that of trimming hats in such styles as we produce these with trimmings anyway near the equal of ours in beauty and quality, and produce such a vast variety to sell at the little price of $4.75.

Our other popular lines at $7.75, $9.75 and $12.50 are much finer at these prices than hats selling elsewhere equally as low. We invite intelligent comparison.

Lots of millinery shops offer hats no better than these at $8 and $10. We see models every day not a whitt better than ours at prices about double, and people pay those because they are not aware of the fact that here they can pick from hundreds of models just as beautiful, just as well trimmed, at $4.75

$1.25 Satin Hats in the latest, most fashionable pressed shapes, made over buckram frames, will be offered Saturday at ..... .75

49c Fancy Wired Wings in all the new long effects and in the most fashionable colors, will be sold Saturday at, only ..... .33

$15 Is a Little Price to Pay for Such Suits and Dresses.

Folks who have been around and seen the suits starred as supreme by other stores are the most astonished of all our visitors when they see the Tailored Suits and the Princess Gowns we are featuring at the low price of $15.

Just see them—and don't blindly buy anywhere until you've made comparisons.

Tailored Suits—Of Mannish Worsteds and Serges in distinctive, fashionable stripes; 38-inch coats with inlaid collar and cuffs of satin; novel pockets; satin and self-covered buttons; skirts in the newest cape and full flare styles; choice of colors including gray, green, brown and navy in richest shades; suits that are cheap at 22.50; a feature for Saturday's selling at only $15

Princess Gowns—Princess Gowns, Empire effects, of Messaline, Broadcloth, Satin Cotilie, in gray, catawaba, peacock, white, black and pastel shades; yokes and cuffs of fancy tucked net with lace edgings and insertions; self-covered buttons; demi-train skirts; in Directoire effects; values $19.50 and $29.50; will be sold Saturday at $15

DOUGLAS $3.50 SHOES - - $2.59

You save almost a dollar a pair by buying Douglas Shoes of us, for we control the factory's output of slightly damaged shoes—those that will not pass the O. K. of the rigid Douglas inspectors; not that the shoes will not give good service—not that they do not look well, but simply because they cannot be passed as strictly perfect.

New shipments arrive almost every day, keeping the line of styles and sizes full and satisfying. You may take your pick of these $3.50 shoes at only $2.59

Men's Shoes taken from our regular $2.50 lines, including patent colt skin; button and lace styles; to be closed out Saturday at only $1.50

If the Giants win all their five remaining games they will win the pennant, even if either Pittsburg or Chicago should win all its contests. If, however, the Giants should lose one game and the Pittsburgs win all theirs the latter would win the championship by a percentage of .643 to .641.

If the Giants win all their games they will have a percentage of .647. If the Pittsburgs do likewise they will have .643, and if the Chicagos equal this record they will have .641. It is, however, an impossibility for both Pittsburg and Chicago to win all their games, as they meet in their final game on Sunday. If the Giants lose one game and the Cubs win all their games the percentage of each team would be .641.

FOOTBALL.

Jones is doing some phenomenal punting in practises at Annapolis.

Two of Lehigh's players are laid up with injuries. Captain Spiers has a wrenched ankle and Luckie, a promising halfback, has a twisted knee.

Lee Gilbert Warren, the Yale player who was kicked in the head and rendered unconscious at practise on Monday, is on the road to recovery, and it is expected that he will be out within a week.

Bucknell will lineup against Pennsy on Saturday with a weakened backfield owing to injuries to Hemphill and Stroop. The punting of the former will be greatly missed. Clawson, last year's quarterback, returned to the squad yesterday.

Changes are being made in the positions of players at Lafayette. Rankin, the big fullback, was yesterday shoved up to a guard position, where it is figured that his weight and speed will prove a big help. Bumbaugh was given a try-out at half.

The North Plainfield High School football squad has partially completed its schedule as follows: October 7, at Bernardsville; October 10, at Rahway High School; October 14, Battin High School, of Elizabeth, here; October 17, New Brunswick High School, to be scheduled; October 21, open; October 24, at Somerville High School; October 28, open; November 3 or 4, Hudson River Military Academy, here; November 7, at Westfield High School; November 11 and 18, open; November 21, Plainfield High School. The management is anxious to schedule a few more gamess to be played on the home grounds.

BASKETBALL.

The girls of the North Plainfield High School have organized a basketball team and have begun practice. A little later a series of games will be schuduled.

The Y. M. C. A. will have a strong basketball team this season, under the manager of Physical Director Listman. Most of the positions will be filled by old players, whose ability in playing the game is well known.

The girls of the Plainfield High School will, as usual, have a basketball team, and now that the borough school is also to have a girl's team, perhaps a series of games may be arranged.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold a regular meeting tonight.

ALEXANDER GILBERT FAVORS THE CENTRAL BANK PLAN.

At the American Bankers' Association convention at Denver yesterday, Alexander Gilbert, of this city, summarized the recommendations of his address on "Vital Issues," as follows:

"A central bank would centralize the note issues and the banking reserve and would carry the government deposits and would at all times be a source of supply from which other banks could obtain help in the hour of need. It could negotiate forign loans in time of panic. It could regulate the interest rate better than any other agency, and would probably work just as well here as in any of the continental nations. If we could reconcile ourselves to the idea that a great central bank—either a bank of banks or a government bank—could be as safely and successfully operated in this country as anywhere in the world, and at the same time would set ourselves to work to develop a plan. I feel quite confident that practical results would be reached in a short time. Whatever is done must be done gradually. Our system would not be the worst in the world if its lack of elasticity could be remedied. A central bank such as I have suggested would accomplish this effectively, and possibly after a few years of successful trial would pave the way to the abandonment of our bond-secured theories."

MR. AND MRS. PATTERSON GIVEN TIN SHOWER SURPRISE.

Mr. and Mrs. David C. Patterson celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary at their home at Johnston avenue and East Second street, Tuesday. A large number of their friends from Faith chapel, where they are are active workers, were present and surprised them with a tin shower.

The Baraca Class, of Faith chapel, of which Mr. Patterson is the president attended and presented to the bride and groom a handsome arm chair. They also received the congratulations of their guests. During the evening an informal program of music and games was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

FITCH COMEDY PLEASES.

"Girls" Proves to Be a Delightful Production at Local Theatre.

Clyde Fitch's three act comedy, "Girls," which had an all-season run at Daly's, New York, captivated an audience at the New Plainfield theatre, last night. It was presented by a cast of uniform excellence fully capable of bringing out all the bright spots in the clever situations.

Miss Edith Browning, who has been seen in Plainfield in less pretentious productions, was delightful as one of the "Girls," and created a lasting impression. Dorothea Sadlier, Ethel Strickland and Fred Sumner were also good in their respective parts. The staging was in keeping with the tone of the production.

Miss Fleming Wins Title.

The women's singles tennis championship has been decided at the Plainfield Country Club. In the final round, Miss Barbara Fleming defeated Miss Sarah E. Schuyler, 6-1, 6-3. The tournament was started two weeks ago and was one of the most successful in the history of the club. A majority of the matches were close and some fine playing was witnessed on the club's courts.

Rev. Mr. Shoop to Speak.

Rev. Orra J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, will make an address tonight at an entertainment to be given at the Woodrow M. E. church, at Richmond borough, S. I.

Preparatory services will be held in Trinity Reformed church, tonight at 8 o'clock. Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson will be in charge. The regular communion service will be held Sunday morning.

"Ye are the Salt of the Earth," will be the topic of the sermon by Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor, at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, tomorrow morning. The text will be found in Matthew 5: 13.

At the meeting of the Sophomore class of the Plainfield High School these officers were chosen: Eugene Lidgate, president; Anna Johnson, vice-president; William Little, secretary; Dorothy Merrill, treasurer.

$2.75 to Philadelphia and Return for Founders week, October 4-10, via New Jersey Central. Tickets good on all trains. 10 1-2-3-6

AGENT FOR FAMOUS BEER

Henry Haurand Is the Plainfield Agent for Rienzi Beer.

If you are going to have a social function at your home and want to serve your guests with a pure, high grade beer, free from billiousness or after effects, call up Henry Haurand and order a case of Rienzi, the famous Rochester beer of the Bartholomay Brewery Co.

Henry Haurand's address is 168 Somerset street. Call up 'phone No. 229, and he will deliver your order without delay.

Rienzi is not an ordinary beer. It is brewed after the most approved process. It has that rich, ripe flavor that gratifies the most particular taste.

Rienzi is pure and wholesome. It is a great stimulant for jaded appetites, and a bottle at bedtime will induce sleep, and quiet the overworked nerves.

Order Rienzi, the right beer; the wrong beer is dear at any price.

SWACKHAMER PRESIDENT OF BOROUGH DEMOCRATIC CLUB.

The North Plainfield Democratic Club was organized last night at Debele hall, which it has rented for the campaign. County Committeeman W. L. Linbarger presided and these officers were chosen: President, former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer; vice-presidents, John H. Van Winkle, Jr., William J. Conroy and Dr. Charles R. Thiers; secretary, Thomas Gough; treasurer, John Mc Cullough.

The president will appoint his committees. Seventy young Democrats were enrolled as members. The hall will be open nightly and several massmeetings and smokers are planned.

Jury Decides Against Plaintiff.

The jury returned a verdict of no cause of action in the case of Christopher S. Myers against the Public Service Corporation, tried in the district court, yesterday. Mr. Myers brought the suit against the company to recover damages for injuries to his wife, while trying to board a main line trolley car on East Second street on August 31 last. She claimed that the car started while she was in the act of stepping on the platform, while the company contended that Mrs. Myers missed her hold on the guard rail and fell backward. Upon application of Robert N. Crane, counsel for the plaintiff, Judge Newcorn has granted a new trial.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Another of the Chicago products, backed up by a New York and Boston reputation, in the musical entertainment line, is to be offered to New Plainfield theatre goers tonight, when "The Time, The Place and The Josephine Pink as Molly Kelly, in "Th Time, The Place and The Girl,' at New Plainfield Theatre Tonight.

Girl," will be the attraction This offering has been designated as "a comedy with music and a reason," and comes with a somewhat distinct record—that of having the longest run of any production presented in the Windy City.

Not a small town in the country but what's had a New York boy drop in on it some morning, get acquainted, stir things up, and then skiddoo in the wage of affectionate regret. Everything in a small town is funny to a New York boy, and everything a New York boy does is startling or stupifying to a country-bred person. In Denman Thompson's "Our New Minister," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, "Skeezicks," is the name of the youngster from New York who drops in. He makes no end of fun before he leaves, and teaches the rustics quite as much as they'd try to teach him. One of the funniest phases of "Skeezicks" advent in Hardscrabble is the slew of city slang he hands out to his country neighbors. It is quite a while before they understand him. He says himself that he will never be quite able to understand the rustics. It is all very amusing. The linguistic duel that occurs between "Skeezicks" and the country folk, but then for that matter the comedy of this piece is scandalously funny all the way through.

Not in twenty years has there been created such a furore as has been the case with Henry W. Savage's production of "The Devil," at the Garden Theatre in New York. By special arrangement with Mr. Savage this version of Franz Molnar's famous Continental play will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre Monday afternoon and night by Mr. Alfred E. Aarons. Following is a plot of the piece: Olga Hofman is the wife of a prosaic banker, one whose vision is obscured by a dollar sign. Hofman's mind cannot resolve the world into anything more than pelf and his wife naturally seeks an outlet for the full measure of her imagination Six years before the woman refused to marry an artist, Karl Mahler, because of his poverty. She finds wealth does not satisfy the longing in her heart and for six years she dreams of the artist. Mahler in turn dreams of the woman, in his spare moments drawing her portrait from memory. They meet in Mahler's studio. The husband wants the artist to paint the wife's portrait, little suspecting the romance of the past. Both the painter and the wife are leading lonely lives and the author from the first shows them to be affinities. The problem is one bearing on the breaking of conventions. Shall the wife give rein to her emotions? Shall the couple together put the husband out of mind? The woman knows that duty beckons her to the side of her hsuband; she has made her bed and she should lie in it. Then the devil, in the person of Dr. Miller comes to her side and uncovers the secret in her breast. He makes her tell that she loves the artist. He makes her place on paper the crude but fervid poetry that is spinning in her head in her desire for the painter. Not only that; The Devil impersonates a third person. He presents himself as a rival for the affections of the woman and thus stirs jealously in the artist. The author shows this unhappy pair as putty in the grip of their desires. The man is led on to a confession of his love and in the end borne on by irresistible emotions, the couple break down every barrier of convention and rush to each other's arms. The Devil always appears at the moment when the passions begin to whirl upon the couple and he attends them to the end when they cast reason aside and for love of each other face the inevitable. In no modern play is there a moral so clearly set forth. It shows the importance of avoiding temptation in all its forms. It is decidedly a modern morality play.

Pleasant memories will be recalled to the old time theatregoers in Andrew Mack's announcement that he will produce "Arrah-na-Pogue" at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night. These memories will bring back the days when Dion Boucicault, that past master of stage craft, advanced "Arrah-na-Pogue" as one of the most beautiful and convincing offerings from his fertile pen. Mr. Mack has announced the piece for his Plainfield engagement, not alone because it has aroused the greatest enthusiasm throughout his tour of the world just completed, but because of numerous requests that have been received from Irishmen and Irish societies in this city. The play will be elaborately staged and is entirely new in all its equipment. Scenically it will be highly attractive, the splendid setting being enhanced by elaborate electrical effects. During the action of the play Mr. Mack will introduce several new songs, words and music by himself, which promises to become highly popular. Among them may be mentioned "The Heart of the Rose," and a rollicking Irish song, "Finnegan and His Flute."

WE ARE MAKING OUR GREATEST CLOTHING HIT

Young Men and Boys were never so well looked out for in clothing as this year and here. Though we have been ever supreme our efforts to offer better values each succeeding season have met with greatest success this Fall. That this is known our books tell unmistakably—we are the greatest clothing business ever. The following are only specimen values out of most complete stocks.

Special Value Young Men's Suits—Incomparable, fit, workmanship, snappiness, and materials for the money; wool cheviots, cassimeres and worsted; conservative and ultra fashionable models; tailoring best, fit the envy of merchant tailoring; linings and trimmings what you expect in suits sold at a great deal more; new brown, green and gray, handsome patterns; sizes 16 to 20 years; or 32 to 36 chest; unequalled at the price..... $15

Special Value Boys' Suits—Double-breasted and belt and single breasted; wool cheviot and cassimere, newest browns, grays, greens, tans, stripes and invisible plaids, neatly tailored, fit perfect, shoulders constructed to build out hollows; flap on pockets; wear resisting linings, knickerbocker trousers; lined and taped thruout; full and roomy, 7 to 17 years; unequalled at the price..... $5

Special Value Little Boys' Suits—Juvenile line most complete anywhere; and are just as much favored with mothers as our suits are for older boys; Russian style, with military cadet and sailor collar; Blouse Suits with the popular sailor collar, best wool materials, brown, gray and green, many different shades; neat stripes, checks and plaids, also blue serge, perfect fitting, best workmanship, bloomer trousers, lined thruout; patent waist bands; 2½ to 10 years, at $5

More Women's $15 Rain Coats—Did not have enough for all who came last Saturday, this time we hope to have plenty; response last week was greater than anticipated; but not to be wondered at when you consider same coats sold all season at $15; these have additional strap over shoulder and large button trim, high turn over collar, double breasted; all the good colors in stripes—best rubberized silk $10

Great Sale Women's, Girls' Sweaters

No Mail or Telephone Orders Taken

Come Early, Surely—Though we have a tremenduos quanity and we would have bought more if we could, we anticipated great rush, hence warning, Come Early; most sweater value at $1.00 you have ever bought; we know wholesalers who ask more than our retail price by the style you would justly compare them with sweaters at $3.50 to $5.00—you would never guess the price; most popular style, full size, plain close stitch; rolling shawl collar and two pockets; close fitting double wirstlets; good buttons, white and a very pretty shade of gray; all sizes, 32 to 44; while they last, at $1

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Copyright, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"Mortimer behaved well; didn't he, Mike?" asked Porter.

"Behaved well, is it? He was like a live devil. Punched thim two stallions until they took water and backed out. My word! whin first I see him come to the stable wit' Miss Allis, thinks I, here's one of thim city chumps; he made me tired. An' whin he talked out Lauzanne's knees, m'aning his locks, I had to hide me head in a grain bag. But if ye'd seen him handle that fork, bastin' the black, ye'd thought it was single sticks he was at, wit' a thousand dollars for a knock-out."

Mortimer's gallant act had roused the Irishman's admiration. He would have done as much himself, but that would have been expected of a horseman, constantly encountering danger; that an office man, to be pitted in his ignorance, should have fearlessly entered the stall with the fighting stallions was quite a different matter.

Even Allis, with her more highly developed sense of character analyzation, felt something of this same influence. She had needed some such manifestation of Mortimer's integral force, and this had come with romantic intensity in the tragic box-stall scene. This drama of the stable had aroused no polished rhetoric; Mortimer's declamation had been unconventional in the extreme. "Back, you devils!" he had rendered with explosive fierceness, oblivious of everything but that he must save the girl. The words still rang in the ears of Allis, and also the echo of her own cry when in peril, "Mortimer!" There must have been a foreshadowing in her soul of the man's reliability, though she knew it not.

Even without the doctor's orders, it was patent that Mortimer must remain at Ringwood for a few days.

It was as if Philip Crane, playing with all his intense subtlety, had met his master in Fate.

Mortimer had been most decisively smashed up, but his immense physique had wonderful recuperative powers. The bone-setting and the attendant fever were discounted by his vitality, and his progress toward recovery was marvelous.

XI.

Outside of her family little interested Allis but horses; certainly not a very lofty aspiration. Patently it was difficult to become interested in such a young woman; actually she monopolized the thoughts of at least two men. Inconsistently the fair offender felt no recoil of this somewhat distressing situation; her mind busied itself chiefly over the reclamation of Lauzanne.

By inheritance all the qualities of a good horse had come to him except a submissive temper. Allis worked on the theory that his disposition had been set awry by injudicious handling; that unlimited patience would cause him to forget all that. He could gallop, else he had not won the race in which he beat The Dutchman. That he needed a stimulant that day was because he had been soured and would not try with his wits about him.

From the time of coming back to Ringwood Allis had ridden him in all his exercise gallops, and had asked Mike personally to supervise his stable education. It had taken all her great patience, all her youthful enthusiasm and faith, for the chestnut had notions beyond all belief. At first, missing the abuse, he almost seemed to thirst for it; tried the gentle girl in every way—sulked, and loafed, and took little streaks of trying to cut the course, and made false breaks as though he were going to run with full vigor; even laid hold of the horses with his teeth when opportunity offered. These antics did not break the girl's faith; she rode him with a gentle hand a woman knows and a horse soon learns to appreciate, and gave him to understand that he was to have fair treatment.

The first sign of regeneration was the implicit faith that Lauzanne began to place in his young mistress. At first when she put up a hand to pet him he would jerk his head away in affright; now he snuggled her shoulder, or nibbled her glove in full spirit of comraderie. Then one day in a gallop came a strong manifestation, a brief minute of exhiliration, with afterhours of thankfulness, and beyond that, alas for the uncertainty of a spoiled temper, an added period of wallowing in the Slough of Despond!

It was on a crisp, sparkling morning, and with Shandy—it was before his downfall—on Lucretia, another stable lad, Ned Carter, on Game Boy, and Allis on Lauzanne, the three swung off for a working gallop of a mile or more. Lauzanne was in an inquisitive mood as the other two raced on in front. What was his lightweighted rider up to anyway? Why did she always leave it to him to do just as he liked? Was she really deceiving him? Did she wish him to lie back there behind the others always? He fell to wondering what she would do if he were to take hold of the bit and spread his big muscles in one rushing gallop, and go on past the others and get home to the feed box first. He rattled the snaffle in his mouth with a nervous indecision. He had a notion to try it.

"Steady, my boy!" said Allis, as she slipped the reins back through her fingers till they stretched tight. A dozen times she had sought in vain to make him think she did not wish him to gallop, but something in the crisp air this morning threw him off his guard. Why should he be forced to lag behind? He stretched the arch of his neck straight till the bit held hard in his mouth; the ears pitched forward in eager point; the great frame under the girl quivered and sank closer to the earth; the roar of his beating hoofs came up to her ears, muffled by the drive of the wind that was now a gale as the chestnut raced into it with the speed of an express. How her heart sang! Here was speed, and with such stride—strong and straight, and true. Low she crouched, and her call to Lauzanne was but a joyous whisper. Her small hands were framed in steel, strength to steady the big chestnut as he swung around the course glued to the rail. On Lauzanne sped, and to the rhythm of his big heaving quarters the girl's soul sang a song of delight. At last, at last was coming her reward.

And then just when everything had been achieved, when the great gallop had brought them half up the stretch something came to Lauzanne—perhaps the memory of the whipping finishes; at any rate, he curled up like a dog, threw his ears back—Allis could feel the sudden stiff prop of the forelegs as he set himself against the rush of speed—and in a dozen strides he was Lauzanne again, Lauzanne the Despised.

And so it had gone on for weeks, Allis working out her theory up to the time of the trouble over Diablo. There was something in the girl's quiet determination that was masterful; perhaps that was why she had always had her own way at home. Now this mastery was spreading out wonderfully; Lauzanne, and Mike, and her father, and Crane, and Mortimer, all in different degrees of subjection, but, as Fate knew, all subject.

Mrs. Porter's continued lament on the subject of racing had given Crane a keynote for his line of action. He had an impulse to buy back Lauzanne. For almost the first time in his life experienced twinges of remorse; this was because of Allis. Porter's affairs were in a bad way, and he would probably accept eagerly an offer from Crane to lighten his load. Individually he cared little for Porter's financial troubles, but it was a good opportunity to prepare the way for a stronger pressing of his suit with the girl.

With the master of Ringwood he went very straight to the point. This was possible, as Porter could not hesitate to discuss his financial condition with his banker. Crane offered to buy Lucretia, this with him was purely a speculation, but Porter would not part with his little mare. When the banker spoke of Lauzanne, saying that he felt somewhat guilty since learning that his horse had been doped, Porter failed to see where Crane had anything to do with it. But the latter insisted that he had unwittingly injured Langdon by speaking of Lauzanne as a good horse. He had known nothing of the matter, beyond that his trainer had assured him the horse would win; in fact, he had backed him.

Porter laughed at the idea that responsibility could attach to Crane. As to the chestnut, he was not worth a tenth of the three thousand he had cost—that was well known; and if Crane or any other man sought to buy him at that price it would savor too much of charity. At any rate, Lauzanne belonged to Allis, and Crane would have to bargain with her.

Then there was Diablo, Crane said; his presence was a menace to Miss Porter.

"I've nursed him for a good while," Porter replied, "and he's a bad betting proposition—he's too uncertain. You don't want such a horse as that—nobody does."

A GRIZZLY HUNT

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

IF out in the late fall or early spring, it is often possible to follow a bear's trail in the snow; having come upon it either by chance or hard hunting, or else having found where it leads from some carcass on which the beast has been feeding. In the pursuit one must exercise great caution, as at such times the hunter is easily seen a long way off, and game is always especially watchful for any foe that may follow its trail.

Once I killed a grisly in this manner. It was early in the fall, but snow lay on the ground, while the gray weather boded a storm. My camp was in a bleak, wind-swept valley, high among the mountains which form the divide between the head-waters of the Salmon and Clarke's Fork of the Columbia. At dawn I rose and shook myself free of the buffalo robe, coated with hoar-frost. The ashes of the fire were lifeless; in the dim morning the air was bitter cold. I did not linger a moment, but snatched up my rifle, pulled on my fur cap and gloves, and strode off up a side ravine; as I walked I ate some mouthfuls of venison, left over from supper.

Two hours of toil up the steep mountain brought me to the top of a spur. The sun had risen, but was hidden behind a bank of sullen clouds. On the divide I halted, and gazed out over a vast landscape, inconceivably wild and dismal. For two hours I walked onwards across the ridges and valleys. Then among some scattered spruces, where the snow lay to the depth of half a foot, I suddenly came on the fresh, broad trail of a grisly. The brute was evidently roaming restlessly about in search of a winter den, but willing, in passing, to pick up any food that lay handy. At once I took the trail, travelling above and to one side, and keeping a sharp look-out ahead. The bear was going across wind, and this made my task easy. I walked rapidly, though cautiously.

At last, peering cautiously over a ridge, crowned with broken rocks, I saw my quarry, a big, burly bear, with silvered fur. He had halted on an open hill-side, and was busily digging up the caches of some rock gophers or squirrels. He seemed absorbed in his work, and the stalk was easy. Slipping quietly back, I ran towards the end of the spur, and in ten minutes struck a ravine, of which one branch ran past within seventy yards of where the bear was working. In this ravine was a rather close growth of stunted evergreens, affording good cover, although in one or two places I had to lie down and crawl through the snow. When I reached the point for which I was aiming, the bear had just finished rooting, and was starting off. A slight whistle brought him to a standstill, and I drew a bead behind his shoulder and low down, resting the rifle across the crooked branch of a dwarf spruce. At the crack he ran off at speed, making no sound, but the thick spatter of blood splashes, showing clear on the white snow, betrayed the mortal nature of the wound. For some minutes I followed the trail; and then, topping a ridge, I saw the dark bulk lying motionless in a snow drift at the foot of a low rock-wall down which he had tumbled.

One day while camped near the Bitter Root Mountains in Montana I found that a bear had been feeding on the carcass of a moose which lay some five miles from the little open glade in which my tent was pitched, and I made up my mind to try to get a shot at it that afternoon. I stayed in camp till about three o'clock, lying lazily back on the bed of sweet-smelling ever-green boughs, watching the pack ponies as they stood under the pines on the edge of the open, stamping now and then, and switching their tails. The air was still, the sky a glorious blue; at that hour in the afternoon even the September sun was hot.

When the shadows began to lengthen, I shouldered my rifle and plunged into the woods. At first my route lay along a mountain side; then for half a mile over a windfall, the dead timber piled about in crazy confusion. After that I went up the bottom of a valley by a little brook, the ground being carpeted with a sponge of soaked moss.

At the head of this brook was a pond covered with water lilies; and a scramble through a rocky pass took me into a high, wet valley, where the thick growth of spruce was broken by occasional strips of meadow. In this valley the moose carcass lay, well at the upper end.

In moccasined feet I trod softly through the soundless woods. Under the dark branches it was already dusk, and the air had the cool chill of evening. As I neared the clump where the body lay I walked with redoubled caution, watching and listening with strained alertness. Then I heard a twig snap; and my blood leaped, for I knew the bear was at his supper. In another moment I saw his shaggy brown form. He was working with all his awkward giant strength, trying to bury the carcass, twisting it to one side and the other with wonderful ease.

One he got angry and suddenly gave it a tremendous cuff with his paw; in his bearing he had something half humorous, half devilish. I crept up within forty yards; but for several minutes he would not keep his head still. Then something attracted his attention in the forest, and he stood motionless looking towards it, broadside to me, with his fore-paws planted on the carcass. This gave me my chance. I drew a very fine bead between his eye and ear, and pulled trigger. He dropped like a steer when struck with a pole-axe.

If there is a good hiding-place handy it is better to lie in wait at the carcass. One day on the head-waters of the Madison, I found that a bear was coming to an elk I had shot some days before; and I at once determined to ambush the beast when he came back that evening. The carcass lay in the middle of a valley a quarter of a mile broad. The bottom of this valley was covered by an open forest of tall pines; a thick jungle of smaller evergreens marked where the mountains rose on either hand. There were a number of large rocks scattered here and there, one, of very convenient shape, being only some seventy or eighty yards from the carcass. Up this I clambered. It hid me perfectly, and on its top was a carpet of soft pine needles, on which I could lie at my ease.

Hour after hour passed by. Every slight noise made my pulses throb as I lay motionless on the rock gazing intently into the gathering gloom. I began to fear that it would grow too dark to shoot before the grisly came.

Suddenly and without warning, the great bear stepped out of the bushes and trod across the pine needles with such swift and silent footsteps that its bulk seemed unreal. It was very cautious, continually halting to peer around; and once it stood up on its hind legs and looked long down the valley towards the red west. As it reached the carcass I put a bullet between its shoulders. It rolled over, while the woods resounded with its savage roaring. Immediately it struggled to its feet and staggered off; and fell again to the next shot, squalling and yelling. Twice this was repeated; the brute being one of those bears which greet every wound with a great outcry, and sometimes seem to lose their feet when hit—although they will occasionally fight as savagely as their more silent brethren. In this case the wounds were mortal, and the bear died before reaching the edge of the thicket.

I spent much of the fall of 1889 hunting on the head-waters of the Salmon and Snake in Idaho and along the Montana boundary line from the Big Hole Basin and the head of the Wisdom River to the neighborhood of Red Rock Pass and to the north and west of Henry's Lake. During the last fortnight my companion was the old mountain man, named Griffeth or Griffin—I cannot tell which, as he was always called either "Hank" or "Griff." He was a crabbedly honest old fellow, and a very skilful hunter; but he was worn out with age and rheumatism, and his temper had failed even faster than his bodily strength. He showed me a greater variety of game than I had ever seen before in so short a time nor did I ever before or after make so successful a hunt. But he was an exceedingly disagreeable companion on account of his surly, moody ways. I generally had to get up first, to kindle the fire and make ready breakfast, and he was very quarrelsome. Finally, during my absence from camp one day, while not very far from Red Rock pass, he found my whiskey-flask, which I kept purely for emergencies, and drank all the contents.

When I came back he was quite drunk. This was unbearable, and after some high words I left him, and struck off homeward through the woods on my own account. We had with us four pack and saddle horses; and of these I took a very intelligent and gentle little bronco mare, which possessed the invaluable trait of always staying near camp, even when not hobbled. I was not hampered with much of an outfit, having only my buffalo sleeping-bag, a fur coat, and my washing kit, with a couple of spare pairs of socks and some handkerchiefs. I walked, while the little mare followed almost like a dog, often without my having hold the lariat which served as halter.

As dusk was coming on I halted and camped in a little open spot by the side of a small, noisy brook, with crystal water. I opened the pack, tossed the bedding on a smooth spot, knee-haltered the little mare, dragged up a few dry logs, and then strolled off, rifle on shoulder, through the frosty gloaming, to see if I could pick up a grouse for supper.

As I was thinking of turning towards camp, I stole up to the crest of one of the ridges, and looked over into the valley some sixty yards off. Immediately I caught the loom of some large, dark object; and another glance showed me a big grisly walking slowly off with his head down. He was quartering to me, and I fired into his flank, the bullet, as I afterwards found, ranging downward and piercing one lung.

At the shot he uttered a loud, moaning grunt and plunged forward at a heavy gallop, while I raced obliquely down the hill to cut him off. After going a few hundred feet he reached a laurel thicket, some thirty yards broad, and two or three times as long which he did not leave. I ran up to the edge and there halted, not liking to venture into the mass of twisted, close-growing stems and glossy foliage. Moreover, as I halted, I heard him utter a peculiar, savage kind of whine from the heart of the brush. Accordingly, I began to skirt the edge, standing on tiptoe and gazing earnestly to see if I could not catch a glimpse of his hide. When I was at the narrowest part of the thicket, he suddenly left it directly opposite, and then wheeled and stood broadside to me on the hill-side, a little above. He turned his head stiffly towards me; scarlet strings of froth hung from his lips; his eyes burned like embers in the gloom.

I held true, aiming behind the shoulder, and my bullet shattered the point or lower end of his heart, taking out a big nick. Instantly the great bear turned with a harsh roar of fury and challenge, blowing the bloody foam from his mouth, so that I saw the gleam of his white fangs; and then he charged straight at me, crashing and bounding through the laurel bushes, so that it was hard to aim. I waited until he came to a fallen tree, raking him as he topped it with a ball, which entered his chest and went through the cavity of his body, but he neither swerved nor flinched, and at the moment I did not know that I had struck him. He came steadily on, and in another second was almost upon me. I fired for his forehead, but my bullet went low entering his open mouth, smashing his lower jaw and going into the neck. I leaped to one side almost as I pulled trigger; and through the hanging smoke the first thing I saw was his paw as he made a vicious side blow at me. The rush of his charge carried him past. As he struck he lurched forward, leaving a pool of bright blood where his muzzle hit the ground; but he recovered himself and made two or three jumps onwards, while I hurriedly jammed a couple of cartridges into the magazine, my rifle holding only four, all of which I had fired. Then he tried to pull up, but as he did so his muscles seemed suddenly to give way, his head drooped, and he rolled over and over like a shot rabbit. Each of my first three bullets had inflicted a mortal wound.

He made a vicious side blow at me.

Union County Court of Common Pleas.

Notice of Hearing Objections to Assessments for Street Improvements in the City of Plainfield.

Thomas J. Hughes, Harry B. MacDonald and Andrew J. Gavett, the Commissioners appointed by the Union County Court of Common Pleas, by order entered on the twentieth day of May, 1908, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent street improvements in the City of Plainfield, under the ordinances of said city specified in said order, (said ordinances being also hereinafter specified) said improvements being the macadamizing of

Berkeley Avenue, from the southerly curb line of Park Terrace to the southwesterly curb line of Leland Avenue;

Webster Place, from the southerly curb line of Putnam Avenue to a point 183 feet north of the northerly side line of Watchung Avenue;

Berckman Street, from the southeasterly crosswalk of South Avenue to the northwesterly crosswalk of East Seventh Street;

Richmond Street, from the southerly crosswalk of Putnam Avenue to the northerly crosswalk of Watchung Avenue;

Kensington Avenue, from the southerly crosswalk of Watchung Avenue to the macadamizing already constructed on Prospect Avenue;

Division Street, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fifth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Sixth street;

John Street, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Seventh Street;

West Second Street, from the southwesterly curb line of Liberty Street to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield Avenue;

Randolph Road, from the centre line of Arlington Avenue to the bridge over Cedar Brook;

Arlington Place, from the southwesterly curb line of Park Avenue to the northeasterly curb line of Arlington Avenue;

Cottage Place, from the northeasterly curb line of Washington Street to the southwesterly curb line of Richmond Street;

Park Lane, from the easterly curb line of Woodland Avenue to the westerly curb line of Belvidere Avenue;

Elmwood Place, from the southeasterly curb line of West Front Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Second Street;

College Place, from the southeasterly curb line of West Eighth Street to the northwesterly crosswalk at West Ninth Street;

Sycamore Street, from the southeasterly curb line of East Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of East Fifth Street;

Hillside Avenue, from the present macadam at Evergreen Avenue to a point 540 feet south thereof;

West End Avenue, from the northwesterly crosswalk at West Front Street to the bridge over Green Brook,

under the ordinances of said city entitled

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved Dec. 15, 1905;

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved July 5, 1906;

"A Supplement to an ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits,' approved July 5, 1906," approved April 1, 1907; and which ordinances were adopted under and by virtue of the act of the legislature entitled, "An act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same," approved June 13, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto, having made and filed in the office of the clerk of said court, a report in writing of their estimates and assessments, accompanied by surveys and maps prepared by the city surveyor under their direction, showing lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, respectively, the cost of the whole work under said ordinances, the portions assessed upon the city at large, and the names, so far as ascertained, of the owners of the said lots or parcels of land and real estate, and the amount of the assessment to each owner for each of said lots or parcels of land and real estate for the said benefits, and the excess thereof to be paid by the city at large, and raised by general tax, and the other matters required by said acts of the Legislature, as by reference to said report and maps will more fully and at large appear.

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved May 16, 1907;

Notice is hereby given, that the said Union County Court of Common Pleas has fixed the Twelfth day of October, 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as the court can attend to the same, at the court house in the city of Elizabeth, as the time and place for hearing before said court any objections that may be made to such assessments, when and where all parties may be heard, and has directed the publication of this notice.

FURBER OUT FOR BRYAN

Former Republican Mayor of Rahway Gives Reasons for Going Into Enemy's Camp.

FAVORS DENVER PLATFORM.

Says Cry that Bryan's Election Would Bring Hard Times Is Silly and Vicious.

James B. Furber, who was elected Mayor of Rahway on the Republican ticket, comes out in a letter to the Democratic candidate for Senator from Union county, Frederick C. Hyer, of Rahway, and says: "I shall not only vote for you in November, but for every capable and honest man who upholds the Denver Democratic platform. I have been counted in the ranks of the Republican party and have been elected to office on a Republican ticket with promises of support by Republicans, but have learned, as have hundreds and thousands of others, that support as promised by Republicans means support only so long as the bosses and the 'interests' are protected. Just so soon as a man shows an independent spirit, as have Colby and Hughes, the party has no further use for him. Just as soon as a man proposes to work for the people and gauge his official action by the measure of protection it affords the common people, just so soon he is marked for the side track.

"The fact that the capable, honest and honorable Mr. Taft is heading the Republican ticket can be no excuse for asking our support so long as the policies of the party are dictated and controlled by Wall Street and trust officials.

"The cry that the election of Bryan will bring about hard times is as silly as it is vicious, for, if the Republican party can save us from such times, have they not been free for years past to show us their skill in that direction? Is the Democratic party responsible for what we have been made to suffer during the past twelve months?

"In conclusion we should be justified in voting for Bryan and his platform if for no other reason than the restraining effect it would have on the Republican party, which has now been so long in power that it has become reckless and regardless of the people's rights."

ENDEAVOR UNION MEETING.

October 29 Set as the Date for the Regular Fall Rally.

A special meeting of the congress of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union was held Thursday night in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. It was decided that the regular fall rally would be held on Thursday, October 29. The prayer meeting and executive committees of the union will arrange the details. It is probable that the address will be delivered by one of the convention speakers, and that several of the delegates to the convention will give brief reports. The attendance banner will be awarded to the society bearing the highest percentage of active and associate members present at the meeting.

Most of the societies have appointed representatives to serve on the central and finance committees for the State convention to be held in Plainfield in 1909. The first meeting of these committees will be held on Monday, October 19.

A rally mass meeting of the Union County C. E. Union to be held on Thursday, October 22, in the Cranford Presbyterian church was announced. A number of the members of the local unions are planning to attend.

Epworth League Elects Officers.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church held its first fall meeting last night and discussed plans for the winter work, after which these officers were chosen for the coming year: President Arthur Humble; first vice-president, Miss Ada Stark; second vice-president, Mrs. Ingraham Hart; third vice-president, Mrs. D. F. Sherwood; fourth vice-president, Miss Frances Weed; secretary, Edwin Brown; treasurer, Leslie Leland; Junior League superintendent, Miss May F. Randolph. The various committees will be announced at the next meeting.

Princeton Loses "Sam" Calhoun.

Samuel Calhoun, who for nearly a quarter of a century has been a policeman on the Princeton campus, died suddenly at Princeton yesterday afternoon from a hemorrhage. "Sam" was well known by hundreds of Princeton men, and well thought of because of his courteous manner and kindness to the students. He was 65 years old.

BOROUGH COUNCIL HAS A BRIEF SESSION

The Borough Council set a new record for speed during a regular meeting, last night. In exactly fifteen minutes, all the business accumulating in the past month was disposed of and the members were getting coats on to go home. The presence of only four of the councilmen beside Mayor Townsend was partly responsible for the general apathy that pervaded.

Following the disposal of routine matters, Councilman McGee offered a resolution that the borough borrow $1,000 for general purposes. Councilman Smith offered a resolution that a hydrant be placed at Dupont and Duer streets and Councilman Van Arsdale presented a third one for the installation of a light on Fritz place. All were carried.

Recorder Dolliver reported that during the month of September the police hade made ten arrests and the victims had contributed $18 in fines to the borough coffers. Councilman Waldron reported that work will be commenced Monday to put Wilson avenue in passable shape, in pursuance to a resolution adopted some time ago, and Mayor Townsend announced that the engineers engaged to investigate the trunk sewer project were now at work and would be ready with a report within a short time. A petition from Sherman Haberle for permission to build an addition to the residence at 13 Chatham street was laid over until the next meeting as it requires five councilmen to act on a matter of this kind.

In conclusion, Mayor Townsend gave a short talk on the lighting arrangements in the borough, stating that after a personal investigation he had found that, no sort of system had been maintained in granting petitions. When people of a certain section asked for a light, the chances were it would be granted and there would be three or four on one block and only two on another of the same length. Requests had ben made to him for more illumination on certain streets and when he went to see where it was wanted, he found that instead of getting more lights, one should be taken out. He asked that this matter be kept in mind in the future.

MISSIONARY AND AID SOCIETY HOLDS SEWING MEETING.

Under the auspices of the Missionary and Aid Society an all-day sewing meeting was held at Warren chapel, Thursday. The women gathered about 10 o'clock in the morning and before they completed their work for the day succeeded in making three handsome quilts. At 1 o'clock the company was served a hot luncheon, prepared and served by a committee comprising Mrs. J. H. Snyder, chairman; Mrs. Benjamin A. Moore, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Mrs. William Bacon, Mrs. William Newmiller, Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. William Hoffman, Mrs. John Higgins, Mrs. William Cornwell and Mrs. John Kane. Sixty active and honorary members were at the luncheon.

The table was attractively decorated with flowers for the occasion and in addition to the generous lunch provided, all thoroughly enjoyed the social features and the words of encouragement spoken by Rev. J. O. McKelvey. The afternoon was spent in completing the work started in the morning. The three quilts made will be placed in the missionary box to be sent away soon.

Leaves Borough for Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, who for the past sixteen years have been residents of North Plainfield will in a few days move to 806 Third place, this city. They have lived in the borough ever since they removed from Somerville, and during that time Mr. Honeyman has been a prominent figure in municipal affairs in North Plainfield, taking a prominent part in the campaign against the annexation and consolidation of the borough and city. He has also from time to time taken an active interest in North Plainfield school affairs, serving as a member of the Board of Education. His decision to move to Plainfield was only reached after a long deliberation.

Funeral of Mrs. Smith.

The funeral of Mrs. Marguerite Smith was held yesterday afternoon at her late home on East Fifth street. It was conducted by Rev. William R. Mulford, rector of All Saints church, Fanwood, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, this morning.

Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts, of Martinsville, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mayme E. Roberts, and Raymond Haines, of Steiner place, North Plainfield. The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, October 14.

YOUNG REPUBLICANS MEET TO FORM CLUB

Borough young men interested in the organization of a First Presidential Voters' Club, held a preliminary meeting in the headquarters of the Republican club, last night. The attendance was not up to expectations but considerable progress resulted.

Donald McGee was made chairman of the meeting and Harold Hegeman, secretary. A committee composed of William Barlow, Edward Brown and Ernest Powlison was appointed to perfect the plans for organization as they were outlined early in the week. The same committee will also take up the subject of forming a glee club from among the members. As soon as the organization is successfully launched, the young men will conduct a series of mass meetings independent of the established Republicans.

The membership list in the club is to be open to all young Republicans in the borough who have not yet cast a vote for a presidential candidate.

TO TEACH CHINAMEN THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION

A new department in the Sunday-school at Faith chapel will be inaugurated tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock when a Chinese Bible class will be organized under the direction of the Baraca Class. Fourten Chinamen have been enrolled for membership and the class will be taught by Frank Stewart, one of the officers of the Sunday school.

Bibles written in the Chinese language will be used and it is proposed to begin instruction according to kindergarten methods now employed in the primary grades. The members of the class are very enthusiastic over the proposition and it is expected that many more will be added to the membership soon. The Chinamen who have thus far identified themselves with the class reside in Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook and Westfield.

OPEN OR CLOSED SUNDAY?

Hudson County to Decide Question on Election Day.

On next Election Day the voters of Hudson county will decide for themselves whether they want the laws of the State enforced or defied. Thomas Connolly, the Republican candidate for Sheriff of Hudson, following the lead of Governor Fort, has announced as his platform the strict enforcement of all the laws of the State, the Bishop's law included. Among Mr. Connolly's supporters in this campaign are clergymen of all denominations, some of whom took a prominent part in having the Bishop's law passed.

James J. Kelly, a former saloonkeeper and brewery collector, is the Democratic candidate for Sheriff. He has not yet told the voters of Hudson county how he stands on the enforcement of the Bishop's law. Robert Davis, the Democratic boss, who nominated Kelly, has said, however, that he favored open saloons on Sunday.

For "Commutor Pupils."

Arrangements will be made by the P. S. C. to run a special high school pupils car every school day direct from Dunellen. The new car will be put on next Monday. It will leave the Dunellen car barn at 7:45 o'clock and will reach the Watchung avenue stand at 8:07 o'clock, and the high school at 8:15 o'clock. To connect with this car, Scotch Plain students must take the 7:45 car in order to separate the running time of local cars from that of the through.

Some Big Shows Coming.

Manager Counihan, of the New Plainfield theatre, has booked a number of Broadway successes for November. Among them are Brewster's Millions, which had a great run at the New Amsterdam; George M. Cohan in "The Royal Family," which had a tremendous run at the Gaiety and Knickerbocker; Rose Stahl in the unparalled box office record, "The Chorus Lady," which ran for a year at the Savoy and Weber's, and Richard Carle in his greatest hit, "Mary's Lamb."

In Justice to Mr. Marshall.

Contrary to report, President Marshall, at the Board of Trade meeting on Thursday night, did not censure S. W. Rushmore for his methods in pursuing his tax assessment reform campaign. He merely expressed his regret that Mr. Rushmore's sign would probably counteract the Board of Trade's publicity campaign for "The City Beautiful."

DENIES THEATRE DEAL

Owner of Music Hall Declares It Has Not Been Leased to Keith & Proctor.

RUMOR HAD IT RENTED.

Representative of Big Vaudeville Concern Looking Over the Building but Has Made No Overtures.

A rumor current in the city today that representatives of the Keith & Proctor combine had closed a deal with William M. Stillman for a lease of Music Hall and would re-open the old theatre as a vaudeville house, was denied by the owner this afternoon. When seen by a Daily Press reporter, Mr. Stillman said that Harry Sanderson, of Cranford, who is reputed to be the agent of the K. P. people, had been looking over the one-time playhouse but that no negotiations for its sale or rental had been conducted.

"It is just another of those instances that have occurred every six months since the hall was closed," said Mr. Stillman. "Men come in to get the key, look over the building and then come back. Sometimes they talk business and sometimes they don't. They come from Philadelphia and they come from New York, but the result has always been the same in the end. Mr. Sanderson, who I'm told is the representative of a big vaudeville concern, has looked over the building several times but he has made no advances that indicate business."

When Mr. Stillman was asked if it was true that Mr. Sanderson had been dickering with the Woolworth five and ten cent store people to move out of what was formerly the entrance to Music Hall, into the new Sebring building, he replied in the affirmative. The negotiations had been underway for some time, he said, and have finally been closed with the understanding that the change will be made in the event of Sanderson agreeing to take the hall.

"But that doesn't signify anything in particular," Mr. Stillman added; "those negotiations do not concern me. Personally I do not think the outcome will be the opening of the old theatre."

The Harry Sanderson mentioned in the overtures is one of the best known theatrical men in the business. He was treasurer for Tony Pastor at his Fourteenth street theatre for many years, relinquishing his position only at the death of the famous old showman a few weeks ago. His home is at Cranford.

MAY REFUSE HIGH OFFICE.

The Rev. Dr. A. S. Lloyd Has Been Offered Coadjutorship of Maryland.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur Selden Lloyd, secretary of the Episcopal Board of Missions, who lives at No. 77 Carleton street, East Orange, said yesterday that he had not yet made up his mind whether he would accept the honor conferred upon him by the Diocese of Maryland, offering upon him the bishop coadjutorship to the Right Rev. William Paret, Bishop of Baltimore.

The Rev. Dr. Lloyd has been honored in this way by Southern dioceses three times before, but he has declined, feeling that he is in duty bound to continue with the mission board.

Dies in Church After Communion.

Notwithstanding that he had been in poor health and scarcely able to make the journey to the Church of Our Lady of Grace, Hoboken, without breaking his fast, James Clarke, nearly seventy-five years old, insisted on going to 5:30 o'clock mass yesterday morning. He died near the altar rail a few minutes after receiving communion. Father Fitzgerald, who was reading the mass, left the altar and shrived the old man in the church, but before Dr. Murray arrived Clarke was dead. He lived at No. 72 Park avenue, Hoboken.

Owen Printing Concern Sold.

G. W. and H. H. Owen, doing business at 125 East Front street, under the name of the Owen Printing Concern, have sold the same to W. H. Nichols, of Morrisville, Vermont. Mr. Nichols has a well established printing business at Morrisville and the one here will be a branch. Possession was taken today.

Gives $20,000 to Asylum.

The movement started recently in Paterson to raise $100,000 for the Paterson Orphan Asylum has resulted in a contribution of $20,000 by Colonel William Barbour. Other contributions from various sources have brought the fund up to nearly $25,000.

STOKES TO ADDRESS BOROUGH REPUBLICANS

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes will probably be the principal speaker at a big mass-meeting to be held in Saengerbund hall in Thursday night under the auspices of the North Plainfield Republican Club. Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., president of the club, will announce his list of vice-presidents on Tuesday. The list will include many distinguished residents of the borough. The presiding officer has not been named, but it is possible that Chas. W. McCutchen will be asked to serve in this capacity.

State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and Assemblyman W. W. Smalley are also expected to make addresses on this occasion which promises to be the big event in the campaign in the borough. Senator Frelinghuysen, it is known, has already accepted an invitation to speak. It is not unlikely that he will refer to his position on the local option agitation and will make a report of his stewardship as the representative of Somerset county in the upper house at Trenton. Mr. Smalley will also explain what part he played in the last session of the Legislature.

HOPE'S BASKETBALL FIVE SELECTS MANAGER

The Hope chapel Boy's Club held a meeting last night at the chapel for the election of a basketball manager and a temporary captain of the squad. At the same time a new treasurer, Thomas Herron, was chosen. Bertram Smith was elected chairman of the lookout committee and Roy Belen as chairman of the invitation committee.

The club has excellent prospects for the basketball season. There are fifteen members of the squad, averaging from fifteen to seventeen years of age. The average weight will be about 115 pounds.

Practice is held every Monday and Tuesday nights. On Monday night in addition to practice, the coaches and physical directors, Stuart Simons and Brockholst K. Miller instruct the squad in dumb-bell work and on the apparatus in the gymnasium, followed by a cross-country run of a half to three-quarters of a mile after which the boys enjoy a shower bath. Arthur Hoffman, who was elected manager, would like to schedule games with the Y. M. C. A. Juniors, Holy Cross seconds, Stillman School, P. H. S. freshmen, B. H. S. sophomores and any team averaging 115 pounds.

A DOUBLE CELEBRATION.

Hope Chapel Will Observe Pastor's Anniversary and Rally Day Exercises.

Rally Day exercises and the celebration of Rev. L. R. Howard's seventh year as pastor, will be observed by Hope chapel members tomorrow. At the morning church service, Mr. Howard will continue his series of talks for the young people, the subject being, "The Purpose of the Death of Christ." In the afternoon there will be a special program of songs, recitations and addresses at the Sunday-school session and in the evening, the Y. P. S. C. E. will have charge of the service.

A cordial invitation to attend is extended to all who are interested in the work at the chapel.

J. H. Webley Bitten by a Dog.

J. H. Webley, of West Fourth street, while returning from work to his dinner at noon today was attacked and bitten by a dog at Putnam avenue and Richmond street. The dog, a small one, inflicted a small wound in the left leg. He called at the office of Dr. J. F. Lawson on East Third street, and had the wound cauterized. The owner of the dog will be instructed to keep it chained for two weeks awaiting developments.

"Nothing Doing."

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters at 2:15 this afternoon for a supposed blaze at Dr. Atwood's home, 510 West Seventh street. Apparatus was sent out and discovered a defective chimney to be at the bottom of the trouble.

Special Musical Service.

A special musical service will be held at the Congregational church, tomorrow night at 7:45 o'clock. Mrs. B. T. Barnes will preside at the organ, and there will be vocal solos by Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, Mrs. J. A. Rawson and Charles L. Lewis, with an offertory selection, violin and piano, Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnson and Miss Mabel Maxson.

Mrs. Garrett M. Conover and daughter, of Rocky Hill, have been spending the past week with relatives in Plainfield.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS BRING HIM ROYALTIES

Two compositions for piano, composed by George C. M. Smith, of Craig place, have just been published by Carl Fischer, the largest music house in this country. They are entitled "Consolation" and "Along the Nile," and both have received exceptional praise from critics in the world of music. The Musical

Geo. C. M. Smith

Observer in speaking of the works, says: "These compositions could only be written by a writer of unquestioned musical ability." According to the terms of the agreement Mr. Smith receives a life-long royalty on both compositions. Only works of the highest merit ever receive such an offer.

"Consolation" is a slow melodious movement with a deep meaning. "Along the Nile" is a tone picture, pleasing to the ear and extremely interesting in originality. Both are of moderate difficulty in execution and can be had at all music stores.

Mr. Smith is a native of Plainfield and was graduated from the North Plainfield Public School. He studied music abroad, completing a seven-year course in four and half years. Since his return home he has been a teacher of violin, piano and harmoney. Frequently he has been heard as a soloist and his work has never failed to arouse deep interest and genuine approval. His latest achievement is considered a well-deserved honor after sevral years of faithful and conscientious work.

REV. MR. KEMBLE ASKED TO CONTINUE PASTORATE.

Rev. Charles Sumner Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, was invited to remain another year as pastor of the church, at the second quarterly conference held last night, and he signified his intention of accepting. Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, the district superintendent of the Elizabeth district, presided at the meeting which marked the full resumption of fall and winter activities.

Reports from all departments of church work were received showing the spiritual and financial condition to be satisfactory. This far this year two members were dismissed by church letter and seventeen members were received by letters from other churches. Three were received on probation and seven by baptism.

Hope Chapel's Excellent Library.

The Sunday-school library from the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church which was recently donated to Hope chapel, combined with the chapel library, affords the best of reading for attendants at the chapel and others who wish to avail themselves of it. The library forms a collection of books of wide and varied interest, fiction, historical, religious and scientific. It is the hope that the members of the chapel will make use of these books. The present plan is to have the library open several nights a week and different persons will take turns acting as librarian. Hudson Burr will be in charge temporarily and will assist any one who may be appointed by Superintendent G. H. Condict. The library is in what was the game rooms, shelves having been built there for the purpose, and a window will be cut through so that books can be passed back and and forth more readily.

Narrow Escape in Auto Accident.

Mrs. J. H. Greene, of West Seventh street, narrowly escaped injury in an automobile accident on lower Broadway, New York, yesterday. The machine in which she was riding was struck broadside by a surface car near Bowling Green throwing her to the roadway. The chauffeur was also hurled from his seat but both got off with a few bruises. The automobile was badly damaged.

Return From Abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Holland and daughter, Miss Holland, of West Seventh street, returned yesterday from Europe, where they have been sojourning for several weeks.

HAD MANY FRIENDS HERE.

His Widow Returning From Europe—He Was 42 Years Old and Belonged to Many Clubs.

Clarence Austin Watson, head of the clothing rouse of George Watson & Co., of Newark, and at one time a resident of this city, occupying the property at Park and Crescent avenues, died suddenly at Allenhurst, Thursday night, aged forty-three years. He was the son of George Watson, who established the well-known Newark clothing house, and had many friends in this city. He had been ill about five years, during which time he was compelled to spend much of his time at Redlands, Cal., going to Newark for a time each fall to look after his business.

Mrs. Watson, who was formerly Miss Mabel Hill, of New York, has been in Europe for several months with her mother. She left Southhampton yesterday for her home before receiving word of her husband's death. Besides a wife, Mr. Watson is survived by a mother, two sons and a brother, George Watson. He was born in Newark and at the completion of his education, entered the store of his father, and upon the latter's death took charge of the business. He was married in New York fourteen years ago, having made a trip to Europe to bring back Miss Hill, his bride.

Mr. Watson was a member of the Essex Club, the Union Club, the Essex County Country Club and of Hope Lodge F. & A. M., of East Orange.

EXPERT STONE THROWER PICKED A LIVE TARGET.

George Martial, a boy living on Somerset street, considers himself quite some expert as a stone thrower, and yesterday attempted to show some of his friends how many times out of ten he could hit a mark. He selected Sylvanus Conklin, an aged man, for a target, as he was fixing a fence in the rear of Warnock's store, and began zipping missiles at him. Fortunately for Conklin, Martial was a little out of practice as the stones sped by him but were so close that he was scared half to death. As soon as the bombardment let up, the animated target hustled for a cop and had the expert arrested.

Martial was arraigned in the city court, this morning, and failed to give a reasonable excuse for trying to put Conklin out of business. The boy has been in court several times within the past year and Judge Runyon placed him on his last chance. He told him with every assurance of sincerity that the next time the cops picked him up, no matter on what charge, he would be railroaded to the Jamesburg Reform School.

Complainant Was Missing.

On complaint preferred by Miss Catherine Pfister, Mrs. Helen Schneiderbeck, of Plainfield avenue, appeared in the city court, this morning, to answer a charge of assault and the use of profane language. Miss Pfister failed to appear and the case was dismissed. According to the complainant when she made the charge, the trouble occurred at a house on Plainfield avenue which Mrs. Schneiderbeck and Miss Pfister's sister-in-law occupy jointly.

Evangelist Loses Purse.

Joseph B. Page, well known about Trenton as the "railroad evangelist," was about to start from the Inter-State Fair in Trenton yesterday when a polite young man helped him to a seat on a crowded trolley car. Later he discovered that he had been relieved of his pocketbook containing several dollars. He complained to the police, who could only inform him that there had been an "epidemic of nice young men with light fingered proclivities."

Mrs. Weightman's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Aubrey H. Weightman, of Philadelphia, daughter of Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street, who died at Watch Hill, R. I., will be held at Grace church, this city, Tuesday afternoon at 2:45. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rector, will be in charge. The body is now at Watch Hill but will be brought to Plainfield tomorrow. Burial will be in the Cox family plot at Hillside cemetery.

Brothers at the Hospital.

DeWitt and Lester Brokaw, of Sycamore avenue, are undergoing treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital. Both were operated upon a week ago and are now recovering rapidly.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield's Board of Education finds that the enrollment this year is so large that it will be forced to hire five rooms for temporary accommodation while the new schoolhouse is being built.

A football team has been organized by the Marathon Athletic Club of Westfield. Arthur Rowland is captain and Alden Sanders manager. The team is open for engagements.

The Democrats had a mass-meeting at the organization rooms Thursday evening. James E. Martine, candidate for sheriff, was the chief speaker.

The sewer certificates issued by Garwood Borough have all been taken by the Westfield Trust Company. The rate of interest is five per cent.

Westfield baseball team has disbanded for the season.

FAST TIME ON THE LEHIGH.

An example of sustained speed has ben furnishd by spcial train from New York and Philadelphia to Toronto via the Lehigh Valley Railroad carrying railroad General Passenger Agents to the Toronto Convention.

The special left Jersy City at 9:25 a. m., consumed 1 hour and 15 minutes in stops, and arrived Suspension Bridge 8:35 p. m.

After the train was delivered to the Grand Trunk at Suspension Bridge, that line delivered it at Toronto at 10:45 p. m.

Over some parts of the Lehigh Valley, a speed of 54 miles an hour was maintained.

This performance again demonstrates the excellence of stone ballasted road bed and system of block signals, as well as the capabilities of th locomotives used in passenger service on the Lehigh Valley.

Governor to Be at Essex Fair.

Governor Fort has accepted the invitation of the managers of the Essex County Fair to attend the exposition in Olympic Park, Newark, on Thursday, October 15, and that day has therefore been set aside as Governor's Day. This means a revival of the famous gathering of politicians which was the greatest feature of the state fair at Waverly. The Governor has named Colonel Colgate, Major Sadler, Jr., Captain Condit and Captain Gaskill as members of his personal staff for this occasion. There will be other military and civilian guests.

CONDEMNS SCHOOL LAW.

Elizabeth Educator Objects to Compulsory Clause.

In a letter to Superintendent of Schools Wilson, of Paterson, Richard Clement, the Elizabeth superintendent, condemns the amendment to the school law which makes it compulsory for children ranging in age from 7 to 17 years to attend school. Mr. Clement declares that while his officers are doing their utmost to enforce the law they find it very difficult for the reason that hundreds of children past the age of 14 are working.

Mr. Clement declares a strict enforcement of the law would overcrowd the school and that the amendment also conflicts with the evening school law. He favors its repeal.

Westfielders Escape Injury.

Harry Parker and Donald Taggart, young men residing in Westfield, narrowly escaped serious injury Wednesday afternoon while out in their automobile in search of chestnuts. They had gathered a good supply of nuts and were running through the woods on a grade toward Clark and Prospect streets, when they saw a main line trolley car westbound close by. Realizing that a collision was inevitable, the young men jumped, allowing the machine to continue on its journey. The motorman of the car shut off his power and stopped his car, just as the auto struck it. The only damage was to the rear wheel of the auto. It is said that the young men admitted afterward that they were to blame.

Admits He is a Repeater.

In the Bayonne Police Court yesterday Thomas Flynn, of Avenue E, admitted that he had voted five times in different districts at the open primaries on September 22. He refused to say at whose request he had voted. He was held for the grand jury by Recorder Lazarus, who also held Albert Roodner, of 36 Division street, Manhattan, and Nathan Rosenbohn, of 90 West Twentieth street, Bayonne, on charges of trying to vote illegally on the same day.

Making Statue of Witherspoon.

William Cooper, of Upper Mountain avenue, Montclair, has just completed a statue of John Witherspoon, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The statue is of heroic size, and will be cast in bronze at once. It is intended for the city of Washington, and will be placed at the junction of Connecticut avenue and Eighteenth street.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

In less than three weeks' time the last important golf tournament of the 1908 season, the women's national championship, will take place over the links of the Chevy Chase Club. This will make the first instance in the history of American golf that a competition, national in character, has been held so far south, and judging by recent indications the affair should prove a pronounced success. This tourney will start on Monday, October 19, and continue throughout the week.

When Chevy Chase made its application for the women's championship at the last annual meeting of the United States Golf Association, considerable opposition was raised because the women had expressed a wish to have the tourney held farther north, preferably over one of the Philadelphia courses. In fact, a petition, signed by a majority of the best players, was read to that effect, but when it came to a vote Chevy Chase won easily. Chief spokesman in behalf of the Washington application was Alexander Britton, a member of the U. S. G. A. executive committee, and at that time he stated that no stone would be left unturned to make things pleasant and comfortable for the visitors.

Recent developments show that the Chevy Chase Club, although making a decided departure from custom, will not be likely to suffer by comparison when the tournament has been brought to a close. It may also be stated that many of the women at first opposed to going there are now enthusiastic, especially as it will afford not a few their first opportunity for visiting the national capital.

The West is certain to be well represented, a state of affairs that could hardly be looked for were it not for the interest the women of the Chicago district have taken in the annual team matches between the Western and Eastern associations. The first of these was held at Brae Burn, in 1906, immediately prior to the national championship, and it was repeated last year, when the championship was decided over the links of the Midlothian Country Club. On both occasions the Eastern team came off victorious.

But to return to Chevy Chase. This club is located on the outskirts of Chevy Chase, one of the most attractive as well as exclusive suburbs of Washington. A commanding view of the course is had from the verandas to the rear and side of the clubhouse, a rambling and commodious Two-story frame building, part of which is 150 years old. The club bungalow, with its sixteen rooms, is to be turned over to the exclusive use of the women, although the intention is to have sleeping accommodations provided for the championship aspirants in the homes at Chevy Chase or in the hotels in Washington, about thirty-five minutes' ride by trolley.

FOOTBALL.

A curious series of minor accidents crept into the Yale daily football practice Thursday afternoon, no fewer than five players being put out of the game temporarily because of slight injuries. Philbin, halfback on the 'varsity, has a badly cut hand; Hobbs, tackle on the 'varsity, has a broken finger; Haines, halfback on the second team, wrenched his thigh; Bates, halfback on the second team, has a slight scalp wound, and Van Sinderen, end on the second team, completes the list with a sprained ankle.

The injury of Haines is the most serious. He had just punted when the 'varsity forwards broke through and toppled him over. They fell heavily on him and he was unable to rise. He was carried from the field and taken to the college infirmary in an automobile, where it was reported last evening that he had suffered a muscle bruise of the hip. He suffered intense pain, due to the wrenching of the nerve centres.

Haines will probably be out of the game a fortnight. He was end on the freshman team last season, but was being used at halfback for his splendid punting. He lives in Rockford, Ill.

Yale's chances in the big games were helped by the announcement from the university faculty that Brides, for two years one of Yale's most valuable players, had been declared eligible. Brides has cleared up his standing and removed all conditions. He reported Thursday for his first practice and was placed at right guard on the 'varsity. He will be used somewhere in the line this season.

Disappointment at the low scores against Wesleyan lead the 'varsity coaches to shoot the team through gruelling halves of ten and fifteen minutes yesterday. Ned Glass, the famous guard, and Clarence Alcott were the graduate coaches.

Ulyckam, who played a brilliant game in the backfield for Swarthmore last season, bids fair to be Bucknell's star punter this year. His performances against the scrubs in practice have been first class, and he will play against Pennsy today.

Knight, Lehigh's fast centre, Thursday broke his nose in a scrimmage.

Annapolis is in tip-top condition for its first game of the season against Rutgers today. The Middies lined up for the first time of the season Thursday. Richardson, who is playing fullback, carried the ball over for the first touchdown of the year.

Yale's football management announced yesterday that application blanks for the Yale-Princeton game at Princeton, on November 14, and the Yale-Harvard game at New Haven on November 21, will be issued next week, and the lists will close on November 4 and 7 respectively.

Cunningham, who is the quarterback for the Lafayette scrubs, is in line for a place on the 'varsity squad. Manager Steever has arranged a game with Stroudsburg Normal, to fill the open date of October 3.

The Cornell varsity football team failed to score on the scrubs in a twenty-minute scrimmage Thursday. O'Rourke, the big Cornell tackle, was not in the game, and Harris is laid up with a sprained ankle. The varsity team will play its first game with Hamilton today.

Football was begun in earnest at P. H. S. Thursday. Captain Phillips called all candidates out to Hope Common, where a vigorous practice was held. From the present aspect of things it looks as if the local High School boys would put a strong team out on the gridiron this fall. Daily practice is now being held.

BASEBALL.

Today begins the wind up of the local baseball season, when the Clinton Avenues will meet the fast New Brunswick team on Crescent Oval. The visitors have the reputation for being exceptionally strong and they will do all in their power to win. Rowland, their best slab artist, will officiate, and he will be opposed by Randolph, who has a fine record this year. Serry will catch and Boelzley will play centre field. Otherwise the lineup will be the same as usual.

The New York Giants are still hovering about first place and many a fan will breath a sigh of relief when the league season closes. Without doubt the race this year will stand in a class all by itself. Never before has their been such a nip and tuck struggle for the pennant. According to many fans, Mathewson is the only pitcher with the Giants that McGraw can depend upon and yet he has a string that would supply twirlers for a half dozen clubs.

Considering recent performance Chicago would seem to be entitled to the pennant. The Windy City boys have been playing a steady, consistent game and their work of taking three double-headers inside of a week will not be equalled again this season.

The Clinton Avenues will close their season next Saturday when they play the Nationals of Perth Amboy on Crescent Oval. Earlier in the season a game was started between these teams, but rain put a sudden stop to it. The Nationals are rated as one of the best semi-professional clubs in the State.

Plainfield has had a most successful season in baseball. There have been no less than a dozen or more good amateur teams playing every week in and about Plainfield and while few records have been broken in the exhibition of the national game, the fans have seen some good sport. Clifford Randolph, the star twirler for the Clinton Avenues holds the local record with a no-run and no-hit game he pitched against Scotch Plains. There are a number of other pitchers who have made good records and altogether the local players have put up a good article of ball.

Further honor came to Plainfield through the Y. M. C. A. team which won the State Y. M. C. A. League pennant. Under Manager Listman's direction the boys made a good showing and the hopes for even better results next year.

PLEASE REMOVE THAT SIGN.

Every day that Mr. Rushmore keeps his sign, reflecting on tax assessment methods here, exposed to public view, greater and greater damage will be done to the reputation of "the city beautiful" as a desirable place of residence. His purpose in drawing attention to his forthcoming pamphlet containing the assessment lists has already been accomplished and any further display of this extraordinary method of advertising it is both uncalled for and seemingly malicious. In fact he holds the community up to the traveling public as a place where "graft" and corruption exist for no other logical conclusion can be drawn from the phraselogy on the huge billboard.

That corruption in municipal administration does not exist here, we know, as does Mr. Rushmore, himself, and every other taxpayer and voter for that matter. That mistakes may have been made in the assessing bureau as in other departments of the city government is entirely another thing and we are not prepared to deny it. There may be some serious errors in tax rates, although we do not for a moment presume that they are intentional. Man is a fallable creature and public servants are ever subject to just criticism and correction, and if Mr. Rushmore proves by his pamphlet that gross error is to be found in the matter which he has investigated, he has done the property-owners and taxpayers of this city a great service.

But there are ample means for Mr. Rushmore to bring about a reform without holding up the municipality in contempt to the outside world. So far as we know, the local administration has taken no steps to treat with the discontented taxpayer and therefore in the name of a city second to none in New Jersey, we appeal to him to remove his sign. In doing this, we assure Mr. Rushmore that this newspaper will cooperate with him in arousing public opinion against any wrongfull or negligent taxing methods, should he show by his pamphlet that such an abuse exists.

Mr. Rushmore frankly says that in inaugurating his campaign he has no selfish purposes and we take him at his word, particularly as he is a resident in good business standing and is a large taxpayer. We can not question his statement that what he aims at is uniformity, a thing that all honest citizens desire, but we object to his methods.

WELL SAID, MR. SMITH!

When he declares himself in favor of the new direct primary law, Frank H. Smith, the chairman of the Union county Republican organization, merely voices public opinion irrespective of party affiliations. In truth, he sounds the keynote for good government for as he says: "This law is the best answer to Mr. Bryan's slogan: 'Shall the people rule.'" Perhaps party bosses and political machinists generally have good reason to pray for the revocation of a statute which sounds the death knell to their power for as Mr. Smith declares it is "the twentieth century improvement on the town meeting." And as State Senator Ackerman and other prominent sons of Union endowed with an independent and fearless political opinion have recently testified, Mr. Smith is a leader, not a boss.

To Lay Hospital Cornerstone.

The cornerstone of the new Bayonne City Hospital will be laid this afternoon by Mayor Pierre P. Garvem. The principal address will be given by Colonel Charles W. Fuller, and several hundred public school children will sing patriotic selections. The building will cost $45,000. The directors have $20,000, and expect to raise the other $25,000 on Hospital Day, October 10, when every resident will be asked to donate one-half day's pay or income.

Things We Shall Take Into the Other World

12th of a Series on Heaven by

REV. DR. CHARLES E. HERRING

In the parable of the talents we are told that our Lord rewards faithful service by greater opportunity for service. The men who used their talents and thereby gained other talents were praised for their faithfulness in few things, and were rewarded, not with a crown and rest, but with the opportunity for greater usefulness. They were made rulers over many things. In other words, the man to whom talents of any kind has been committed, does not bury them in the future world any more than he does in this. Our heavenly reward is not the cessation of all activity; it is opportunity for greater effort. Achievement here is the basis of achievement there. Faithfulness in the exercise of our talents and capacity here, makes possible greater faithfulness in the opportunities of the other world.

Isaac Taylor has well said that "it is a frivolous notion that the vast and intricate machinery of the universe, the profound scheme of God's government, is how to reach a resting place, where nothing shall remain to active spirits through an eternity, but recollections of labor, anthems of praise, and inert repose."

It is better to conceive of life as Franklin has suggested. To him life is "rather a state of embryo, a preparation for life. A man is not completely born until he has passed through death."

Of course, we do not know and cannot conceive of all the glory that will be ours in the other life; but our Savior assures us in the parable of the talents, that we shall take our capacity with us to that world. We shall carry over our skill and our versality for this reason, that the heavenly life will be the continuation of this life.

In the "Gates Ajar," Mrs. Ward suggests that the little girl, who, all her life, longed for a piano, would possess one in Heaven. I have no doubt that what corresponds to the piano in the mind of that little child will be there. Otherwise, Heaven would be no satisfaction to her musical soul. Had John the Divine known of pianos, he would probably have spoken of Heaven as possessing these instead of harps of gold. For Heaven will answer the children's needs as well as ours. It will satisfy each holy expectation and far exceed it.

It is said of Lorenzo de Medici that he did not want to go to Heaven because he would miss the Pitti Palace with all its treasurers of art. He feared that the artistic side of his nature would not find its proper satisfaction in that world. It probably had never been pictured to him as a human sort of place. I believe that there will be the opportunity there for the play of all the human faculties. It will not be a place for sin; but it will be a place for all holy desires.

When Professor Hill was asked what he would do in that world, he responded: "There is enough in the mathematical problems connected with the circle to keep one busy for a thousand years." Perhaps that would not be our happiness, but it would be his. Therefore Heaven must be the place that will satisfy an infinite variety of natures.

What is true for the mathematician, is true for the artist and for the musician. There will also be something for those to do who love to serve others. Socrates wanted in that world not only to converse with Homer, Hesiod and Orpheus, but to continue his search after knowledge. When H. T. Coleridge was told that he had only a year to live, he said, "I will study Sanscrit at once." Why? Would he use Sanscrit in the other world I don't know, but he believed that something would be called forth in him by the study of that language that would persist in the heavenly world.

An English divine presents this picture of the relation of this world to the other world. A boy at school is being prepared for the larger life of the world. "The boy-world is the bigger world in miniature. The arithmetic he learns in the school room, is employed in after life in the solution of real instead of imaginary problems. The book keeping is to be practiced in veritable ledgers and day books. The strict discipline of the school and mental exercise are to fit him for the battle of life. The school boy life and the business life are the same and yet different. The school life would be useless unless it were the after life in germ." Should not my life here be the heavenly life in germ?

Victor Hugo says "for half a century I have been writing my thoughts in prose, verse, history, philosophy, drama, romance, satire, ode and song. I have tried all, but I feel that I have not said the one-thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave, I can say like so many others; I have finished my day's work, but I cannot say I have finished my life. My day's work will begin again the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes in the twilight to open in the dawn." That is the utterance of the deep longing of the human heart. Victor Hugo is not the only man who has felt it. The thought that the future life and its activity grows out of the present, is the teaching of our Lord. It satisfies our reason to think that in the other world "no moral or spiritual achievement will be lost, and that what is worthy to endure will endure." We find in this world.

"Faculties displayed in vain; but born
To prosper in some better sphere."

The only rational life to live is the life that is planned on eternal lines. Sir Oliver Lodge says truthfully that this life appears as "something whose full significance lies in another scheme of things." The world's riddle, then, is answered only by the thought of another world.

A broken column in a cemetery is not the most beautiful symbol that can be placed over the grave of our departed, for the reason that it suggests that the life here has been a failure, and that our friend's aspiration has not been realized. In God's sight, this is not the record of his life. If we could imagine a column clouded at the top so that its completed form we could not see, we would have a better symbol of the life of our friend. This would symbolize that what is begun here is perfected there.

Under the picture of one of God's ancient martyrs is this verse.

"Alexamenos is not dead;
He lives beyond the stars."

Our friends are not dead; they live beyond the stars.

They have taken their capacity with them for the reward of their faithfulness in a few things in this world is increased ability for the greater things in the heavenly world.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Today marks the close of the local baseball season, the team playing a windup game with a scrub team composed of "has beens" and can "play some." The team has had a successful season. Games have been played with the strongest teams in this part of the State, the majority being played away from home. The number of games won leaves a balance in favor of the local team, notwithstanding the fact that it has been crippled nearly all the season, on account of having no regular pitcher.

Funeral services of the late Marguerite Eleanor, widow of the late Earl H. Smith, who died at her home on East Fifth street, Wednesday, were held from the home yesterday afternoon at 3:30. A number from town who had known the deceased during her residence here attended the services.

Frazee Connett, a veteran of the war of '61, has been granted a pension on account of injuries sustained doing duty at the front in those troublesome times. It is reported that the pension office has allowed him back money to the amount of $1,500.

The regular services will be held tomorrow at the Baptist church, morning preaching 10:45, B. Y. P. U., 7:15 p. m., followed at 8 o'clock by the evening sermon. Rev. Franklin Matthews, the pastor, will preach at both services.

Rev. J. E. R. Foster, of the State Missionary Society, gave an intersting illustrated talk upon the work of the society last night at the Baptist church. The meeting was well attended.

Miss Leda Russell returned to her home in Paterson yesterday after a pleasant summer vacation with Fred Happel and family.

Mrs. George Frentz, who underwent a surgical operation at Muhlenberg Hospital several days ago, is reported as improving nicely.

Only the regular routine business was transacted at the Township Committee meeting held last night in the town rooms.

Rev. W. W. Deterick will lead the weekly prayer-meeting at the Methodist church tonight.

Miss Cora Miller, of Front street, has returned from a visit with relatives at Trenton.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Rev. C. W. F. Attlee will preach in the Baptist church tomorrow morning on the subject of "Helps and Hindrances." In the evening there will be an "Ira D. Sankey Memorial Service," at which the choir will render songs and solos used by the evangelist.

There will be a fifteen cent supper at Mrs. Pierce's, of New Market, for the benefit of the Baptist church there, to which no doubt several friends from here will go, as New Market and South Plainfield are very closely related by ties of family and friendship.

It strikes the people here as being odd that every village around has been reporting the plentiful supply of chestnuts this season. There have been an abundance here too, but the fact was kept quiet and they are now safely stored away among the family cellars.

Plainfield friends, moved by sympathy for their loss of "Teddy," who was run over and killed by an auto last Sunday, have presented Mr. and Mrs. O. Thorne with a beautiful pure bred Collie pup. But their affection for "Teddie" still lingers.

A stray brown horse entered the garden of Judge W. E. Smith, last evening, and did considerable damage to the garden truck. The owner is advertised for in another column.

Yardmaster Thomas Linaberry and family are expected home this evening from a two weeks' vacation in the Niagara Falls district.

Phil Smith, "Our own pitcher," is evidently after the world's championship as a cyclist, for he has acquired a fine wheel.

The topic of the Christian Endeavor meting tomorrow evening will be "Our Vows and Their Fulfillment."

Nearly all the young folks from here went to Trenton this week and left the "Old Folks at Home" to pay their expenses.

Mr. Van Court, of Oak Tree, whose house and barn were burnt to the ground recently, is now rebuilding.

The health of Lewis Dunn is very much improved, and he is able to be around again.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The W. C. T. U. is preparing for its annual fair to be held two days early in November.

The Junior Auxiliary of Holy Cross church, will hold its meeting on Monday, October 12.

The parish house of St. Stephen's church was opened Wednesday for the fall and winter season. The new rector, Rev. Morgan Ashley will officiate tomorrow for the first time.

There will be a vesper service at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Miss Adele Kirby will preside, and Miss Nora Schenck will sing. All young women are cordially invited.

Miss Emily C. March, the well-known evangelist of this city, will conduct an evangelistic service in the Salvation Army Hall, East Second street, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. There will be good music and singing.

The Friends Sabbath-school will begin its regular sessions Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to join the school, especially those not connected with any other school.

The Lord's Supper will be observed at Warren chapel, tomorrow morning. In the afternoon the Sunday-school will hold rally day exercises. A special program of music, etc., has been prepared and the address will be made by Alexander Irvine, of New York.

Rally day exercises will be held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. There will be special music with an object sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. S. Kemble. The Sunday-school room will be especially decorated for the occasion.

All the nations having diplomatic representatives at the Vatican have notified the Holy See that they are sending special missions to congratulate the Pope on his jubilee. It is the impression in Vatican circles that President Roosevelt will either cable congratulations to the Pope or send an autograph letter through Cardinal Gibbons.

The Plainfield Sunday-school Teachers' Union meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Monday night at 8 o'clock. George E. Hall will lead the devotional exercises. The lesson for next Sunday will be taught by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. F. S. Thompson will talk on the intermediate grade in Sunday-schools.

WILL EXTERMINATE FLEAS.

When it comes to talking about fleas the writer knows just where he is at. When he was a boy the country swarmed with them, and perhaps one of the things he will remember longest will be the sleepless nights and the torments that the fleas gave him when sitting in Quaker meetings where he did not dare to scratch. For many years the people seemed to put up with them as an evil from which there was no escape, yet there was an efficient remedy growing on every farm in the shape of a modest little plant called pennyroyal, which is familiar to every country-bred boy. The odor of this plant seems very offensive to many kinds of insects, says Forest and Stream. A freshly bruised bunch of the plant in a small bag and rubbed on the bed linen and then left in the bed will evict the last flea in a very few minutes. A few drops of the essential oil of the plant, which can be bought at any drug store, rubbed on one's underclothing will drive them from the person immediately, and if sprinkled about a room infested with fleas will clear them out.

ASK FOR THE FISHER HOLDBACK

The old style holdback for blinds affords a roosting place for birds and causes ugly stains to disfigure the sides of the house under the blinds. Notice this carefully and then you will want Marguerite Vollmer, in "Our New Minister," at New Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and evening.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A thousand plays have lived and died since Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer wrote "Our New Minister," the excruciatingly droll comedy of Hardscrabble, N. H., which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. Two thousand plays have lived and died since the same pair wrote "The Old Homestead." The latter play is now in its twenty-first year, and "Our New Minister" is in its eighth. There are lessons for the threatre-goer and for the play writer in these facts, and it only needs a look at the current passing show and then at "Our New Minister" or "The Old Homstead" to glean them.

Ethel Ferguson in "Our New Minister," at New Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight.

Probably no play in the last decade has caused more comment on the part of men of science, the clergy and the laity than Oliver Herford's adaptation of Franz Molnar's sensational play, "The Devil" (Der Teufel) which Alfred B. Aarons presents at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday afternoon and night, by permission of Henry W. Savage. This production is the only authorized version and is exactly as presented at the Garden theatre, New York, where it succeeded in creating the greatest furore of any dramatic production in the history of New York theatricals. Five hours after the opening of the seat sale every seat in the house was sold. When it came time for the performance a crowd containing hundreds was mobbed about the doors unable to gain entrance. The story is intensely human and notwithstanding the flashes of wit, delightful epigramatic passages, and decidedly humorous situations the audience sits spellbound until the drop of the curtain. It deals all the way through with the endeavors of "The Devil" who calls himself Dr. Miller, a character, which the audience has difficulty in quite deciding as to whether it is supernatural or a terrestial being—to enter into the lives of clean-living people and exercise ingenious temptations. It seems impossible to imagine that the moral lesson conveyed by the play can be without its influence on those who are at all susceptible to impulse whether good or bad. Probably there has never been anything printed or acted that illustrates better the danger of hovering even near or listening to temptation. "The Devil" is decidedly a modern morality play and stands in this particular instance for the conscience that is contained in each one of us. The entire play is of absorbing interest and is pronouncedly the grandest and most novel dramatic effort of modern times.

Joseph Conyers in "Our New Minister," at New Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight.

"Irish songs will be sung the world over," says Andrew Mack, the popular delineator of Irish character, and will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night, and who further believes that the melodies dear to Erin will gain in popularity as time goes on. The splendid missionary work that Mr. Mack has been doing for the promotion of Irish music has resulted in an unprecedented interest eherein, an interest extending even to far off as Australia where his music has proved an open sesame to pronounced social honors,s as well as profession triumphs. In fact, Mr. Mack says, interest is greater in Australia than in America. In many localities a Peis Cueuil is held annually at which representatives from numerous societies and singing classes attend. A Peis Coeuils is, in the English, a musical festival, differing somewhat from the musical festivities common in this country in that the singers and instrumentalists who participate are all in competition before a tribune of music matters, which awards a prize to the best in the several classified contests. Of them Mr. Mack said: "These competitions appeal more strongly probably to the Irish than to any other race, on account of the spirit of the people. They love competition, while their pride locally is very strong, and they are all lovers of music. To the woman of Ireland the Feis Coeuils appeals as strongly as the championship baseball games do to the young men of America. They are the great event of the year. The winners are feted and honored and are usually provided with a splendid position in recognition of their accomplishments."

Fisherman Fight with Mackerel.

Fishermen employed by John I. Hennessey had an exciting adventure near the Highlands yesterday morning with a school of seven horse mackerel weighing four hundred pounds each. When the pound nets were raised the fishermen found the mackerel with the other fish. In the struggle to conquer the monsters, Alfred Johnson, one of the crew, was severely bitten on the arm by one of them. They were later shipped to Fulton Market, New York.

Hurt in Sleeping Car, Gets $850.

In the United States Court at Trenton yesterday a jury gave a verdict of $850 to Mrs. Ella R. Adams, of Pleasantville, in her suit against the Pullman company. She charged that she was injured en route to Florida in 1907, when she was sleeping in an upper berth. An iron curtain pole fell from its bracket and struck her on the head,severely injuring her.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

They Are Plainfield, and What They Say Is of Local Interest.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home, it is bound to carry weight with our readers. So many strange occurrences go the rounds of the press are published as facts, people become skeptical. On one subject sskepticism is rapidly disappearing. This is due to the actual experience of our citizens, and their public utterances regarding them. The doubter must doubt no more in the face of such evidence as this. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.

Thomas Haskard, retired, 927 South Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "During service in the Civil War I contracted itching piles and they bothered me off and on for a long time. I tried several salves and ointments but never found one that would relieve my trouble until I commenced using Doan's Ointment. Three boxes of this preparation cured me and I have never experienced a return of the affliction."

AMUSEMENTS.

The excellent programs in vogue at Proctor's Newark Theatre still continue as a partial list of the vaudevillians to appear during the week commencing Monday, October 5, will give ample testimony. Joseph Hart's successful vaudeville surprise with ten pretty girls who can both sing and dance called "The Rain Dears," is the headline feature. Daisy Harcourt, a clever little English character comedienne, will be heard in several new songs. Avery and Hart, two popular colored comedians will win plaudits with their singing and dancing. Pat Rooney and Marion Bent will be seen in their laugh producing skit in which the introduce all kinds of eccentric dancing. The American Trio, native Newarkers, have a novel act with the daintiest little comedienne in the varieties. Another European novelty will be the first appearance here of Oscar Lorraine, a protean violinist of considerable ability. A new series of animated pictures will also be shown.

James K. Hackett is scoring a great hit at the Hackett theatre in the famous Anthony Hope romantic play, "The Prisoner of Zenda." It will be remembered that this play was one of the greatest successes of a decade ago. It is a stirring drama without a moments dullness, and the good old-fashioned love story which seems to have gotten into disrepute, is to be found there in all its strength. In addition there is an abaundance of fine sword play that once marked the great actor of the old days, and even in these days has made James K. Hackett one of the leading romantic actors in America. It is hardly necessary to recall the story of "The Prisoner of Zenda," which enjoyed a vogue that few English novels had, and was the beginning of the romantic movement in this country and England. Combining the dash and vigor of the romance of Alexander Dumas with the lightness of touch and humor that belongs to our own day, Mr. Hackett created a hero in Rassendyll that will undoubtedly live for a long time. Mr. Hackett has gathered about him as many of the original cast as it has been possible, and the production, it is said, will be one of unusual excellence. Considering the fact that nearly all the popular plays in New York at this time deal with ethical problems of the under-world, this breath of romance is more than welcome.

Of all questions now agitating the public mind "The Girl Question" comes foremost and the reason is easily explained. With its dozen best songs, its interesting plot, its half a nundred dashing chorus girls and its all star cast of players, it is no wonder that Wallack's has been nightly crowded by enthusiastic audiences. Like "The Time, The Place and The Girl," the book and lyrics for "The Girl Question" were written by Frank Adams and Will Hough, and the music by Joseph Howard. The "hero" of the play is a rough, uncouth, but big hearted fellow, full of witty slang, a part in short ideal with the personality of Junie McCree, the actor who plays it. Georgie Drew Mendum, cousin of Ethel Barrymore and niece of John Drew, has a part along similar lines, while Isabel D'Armond, America's foremost soubrette, sings several songs and is carrying on a charming little romance at the same time that Miss Mendum and Mr. McCree are developing their own love affairs. The cast also includes Helen Royton, Carl George and Jack Henderson. "The Girl Question" answers itself; in short it is one of the best entertainments offered on Broadway in years and since its initial performance new numbers, new business, new costumes and new girls have been added. The popular priced matinee is a feature of the engagement at Wallack's, where "The Girl Question" will be for some weeks to come.

The stage setting for the last act of "Fluffy Ruffles," in which Miss Hattie Williams is the star, representing the interior of the famous cafe at Armenonville, was especially made at Paris by Hugo Baruch and Company, under the personal supervision of Charles Frohman.

During the coming New York season Miss Ethel Barrymore will act "Lady Berolles," in W. Somerset Maugham's play "Lady Frederick" at the same time that her uncle, John Drew, at the Empire theatre, is playing "Jack Straw" in a comedy of that name by the same author.

Miss Maude Adams will shortly sail for America from Queenstown. Her vacation abroad was spent almost entirely in a little suburb of Dublin, Ireland, where, with a girl companion, with her books and plays and ambitions, she managed characteristically to combine work and rest for three months.

Workers Check Fire.

The coolness of employees in the small parts department of the big Singer plant at Elizabethport, prevented a serious conflagration Wednesday afternoon when a benzine tank exploded. The men rushed for buckets of water and helped the company's regular fire fighters extinguish the blaze before it did much damage. John Burke, who was bending over the tank, was slightly burned.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Crane did not press the point; he understood Porter's motives throughout. He knew the master of Ringwood was an unchanging man, very set in his ways, adhering closely to his plans and opinions. So Crane went back to Brookfield without purchasing a horse, saying as he left, "I claim first privilege when you wish to sell."

Crane, driving back to Brookfield, turned over in his mind the matter of his mission. He was satisfied. He had succeeded in the main objective point. It would have been a good move to have acquired Lucretia, to have tempted her owner to part with her for ready money in sight. The money would soon have disappeared; then Porter, with a lot of bad horses on his hands, would almost certainly have come more firmly into the grasp of Crane. The offer to buy Lauzanne had been a bit of saving grace, a faint, generous impulse, begot of Allis' regenerating influence; but Crane had discovered that Porter did not at all suspect him of interest in the fraud—that was a great something. He had also established himself firmly in Mrs. Porter's good graces, as he could see. It would be indeed strange if in the end he did not succeed completely.

XII.

Shandy's escapade with Diablo had brought a new trouble to Mike Gaynor.

The boy had been discharged with a severe reprimand from Mr. Porter, and a punctuation mark of disapproval from the trainer's horn-like hand. He had departed swearing revenge upon everybody connected with that place; against Diablo he was particularly virulent.

Mike tried to secure a boy in the Brookfield neighborhood to ride Diablo in his work, but Shandy's evil tongue wagged so blatantly about the horse's bad temper that no lad could be found to take on in the stable. Ned Carter might have ridden Diablo at work, but the big black horse was a horse of many ideas. He had taken a notion to gallop kindly while acompanied by Lucretia and Lauzanne; worked alone he sulked and was as awkward as a broncho of the plains. Also he disliked Carter—seemed to associate his personality with that of Shindy's.

Mike's discontent over the hitch spread to John Porter. It was too bad; the horses had been doing so well. For three days Diablo had no gallop. On the fourth Porter determined to ride the horse himself; he would not be beaten by an ungrateful whelp like Shandy. In his day he had been a famous gentleman jock, and still light enough to ride work.

"I don't like the idea, sor; it's not good enough," remonstrated Mike.

But his master was obdurate. If Allis rode Lauzanne, why shouldn't I ride Diablo?

Gaynor would have ridden the horse himself rather than have his master do so, but he had a bad leg. Once upon a time it had been crushed against he rail. Somebody must ride Diablo. The horse, naturally high-strung, was becoming wild with nervousness through being knocked out of his work.

For three days after his discharge Shandy sat brooding with the low cunning of a forest animal over his fancied ill-treatment. More than ance he received money from Langdon for touting off to him Porter's stable matters; now in his unreasoning bitterness he contrasted Langdon and Por-

"Dick's white, he is, an' I'll go git a job from him. I gits half eat by that crazy skae, and fired without a cent for it. God drat 'em," he muttered. "I'll get even or know why. They'll put Ned on Diablo, will they? The sneak! He split on me fer beltin' the black, I know, d—n him! They ain't got another boy an' they won't git one. I'll fix that stiff Carter, too; then they won't have no boy."

He drank beer, and as it irritated his ferret mind a devilish plot came into his being and took possession of him—a plot easy of execution because of his familiarity with the Ringwood stables.

That night he slipped through the dark, like a hyena pup, to Ringwood. That the stable was locked mattered not. More than once, out of laziness, Shandy had shirked going to Mike's quarters for the keys and had found ingress by a small window, a foot square, through which the soiled straw bedding was thrown into the yard. Standing on the dung heap, Shandy worked open the board slide that closed this window, and wormed his weasel form through a small opening. He passed down the passage between the stalls and entered a saddle room at the farther end.

"The bloomin' thing used to be on the fourth peg," he muttered, drawing his small figure up on tiptoe and feeling along the wall for something. "Blow me!" and he chuckled fiendishly as his fingers encountered the cold steel of a bit, "I'd know that snaffle in hell, if I got a feel of it."

There was a patent device of a twist and a loose ring in the center of the bit he clutched, which Porter had devised for Diablo's hard mouth.

Shandy gave the bridle a swing, and it clattered to the floor from its peg. Diablo snorted and pawed the planks of his stall nervously.

"All right, my buck!" hissed Shandy, "you wait till to-morrow; you'll git the run of your life. I'm thinkin', d——n their eyes!" and he went off into a perfect torrent of imprecation against everybody at Ringwood, hushing his voice to a snarling whisper. Then he shut the door of the saddle room, sat down on the floor and pulled his pocketknife and the stub of a candle from his pocket. He lighted the latter and held the flame down until a few drops of the wax formed a tiny lake; into this he stuck the candle upright, shielding its flame with his coat. He opened the knife and, laying it down, inspected minutely the bridle which lay across his leg.

"It's Diablo's right enough," he said; "I couldn't be mistook on the bit, nor them strong lines."

He picked up the knife and holding the leather reins across the palm of his hands started to saw it gently with the blade. Almost instantly he left off. "Of all the bloomin' ijits! God drat me for a goat! He'd feel that cut the first slip through his fingers the leather took."

He gathered in the reins until he had it within six inches from the bit. There he cut, stopping many times, and doubling the leather close to the light to see how deep he had penetrated.

"There, Mr. Bloody Ned!" he exclaimed at last, as the inspection showed that only the outer hard shell of the leather remained intact. "That'll just hold till the black takes one of his cranky spells, and you give him a stiff pull. God help you then!"

From his coat pocket he next brought forth a pill box. In this receptacle Shandy dipped a forefinger, and rubbed into the fresh cut of the leather a trifle of blackened axle grease which he had taken from a wagon wheel before starting out. Then he wiped the rein with his coat tail and looked at it admiringly.

"The bloke won't see that, blast him."

He hung the bridle up in its place, put out the candle, dropped it in his pocket and made his way from the stable.

"You'll get enough of that to-morror," sneered the boy. "I hope you and Ned both break your d——n necks. Fer two cents I'd drop something in your feed box that'd settle you right now, but it's the skunk as split on me I want to get even with."

Shandy trudged back to where he nested in Brookfield and soon slept with calm restfulness, as though no evil had ever homed in his heart. In the first gray of the early morning he rose and went out to the race course.

XIII.

The course near Ringwood had formerly been a trotting track, and was still used at regular intervals for the harness horses. In its primitive days a small, square, box-like structure had done duty as a judge's stand. With other improvements a larger structure had been erected a hundred yards higher up the stretch.

It was to the little old stand that Shandy took his way.

"Ned'll ride Diablo, sure; there's nothin' else to it," he muttered. "I hope he breaks his blasted neck. I'll pay 'em for turnin' me off like a dog," he continued, savagely, the small ferret eyes blazing with fury. "I'll learn the d—n—Hello!" His sharp ears had caught the sound of hoofs thudding the turf in a slow measured walk. He peeped between the boards.

"Yes, it's Mike. And the girl, too, blast her! She blamed me fer near bein' eaten alive by that black devil of a dope horse. Hell!"

This ambiguous exclamation was occasioned by the sight of his former master spring into the saddle on Diablo's back.

"That's the game, eh? God strike me dead. I hope you git enough of him. My arms ache yet from bein' near pulled out of the sockets by that leather-mouthed brute. Gee, if the boss hasn't got spurs on! If he ever tickles the black wit' 'em—say, boys, there'll be a merry hell to pay, and no pitch hot!"

The young Arab spoke to the boards as though they were partners in his iniquity. Then he chuckled diabolically, as in fancy he saw Porter being trampled by the horse.

"That's the girl on Lauzanne," he muttered; "she's the best in the lot, if she did run me down. A ridin' that sorrel mut, too, when she ought to be in the house washing dishes. A woman ain't got no more business hangin' around a stable than a man's got in the kitchen. Petticoats is the devil; I never could abide 'em."

Shandy sometimes harked back to his early English Whitechapel, for he had come from the old country, and had brought with him all the depravity he could acquire in the last five years of his existence there.

"Ned's got the softest snap in that blasted bunch," as his eye discovered Carter on Lucretia. "He's slipped me this go, but I've noggled the boss, so I don't care. I'm next 'em this trip."

As the three horses and their riders came on to the course he pulled out a cheap stop-watch Langdon had equipped him with his touting, and started and stopped it several times.

"You'll pay fer their feed, you d—n ole skinflint," he was apostrophizing Porter, "an' I'll be next best they can do, an' stan' in on the rake-off. Gee! I thought they was out fer a trial," he muttered, looking disconsolately at the three as they cantered the first part of the journey. "I'll ketch 'em at the half, on the off chance," he added.

But though the time piece in his hand clicked impatiently, after he pressed the stem with his thumb, as Diablo's black nozzle showed past the half-mile post, the three horses still cantered.

Lauzanne was loping leisurely with the action of a wooden rocking horse. Lucretia, her long, in-tipped ears cocked eagerly forward, was throwing her head impatiently into the air as though pleading for just one strong gallop. Diablo's neck was arched like the half of a cupid's bow; his head, almost against his chest, hung heavy in the reins tight-drawn in Porter's strong hands. His eyes, showing full of a suspicious whiteness, stood out from his lean, bony head; they were possessed of a fretful, impatient look. Froth flecked back from the nervous, quivering lips, and spattered against his black satin-skinned chest, where it hung like sea-foam on holding sand.

"Whoa! Steady, old boy!" Porter was coaxing, soothingly. "Steady, boy!"

"The ease up has put the very deuce into this fellow," he flung over his shoulder to Allis, who was at Diablo's quarter. "He's a hard-mouthed brute if ever there was one."

"He'll be all right, dad," she called forward, raising her voice, for the wind cut her breath; "Shandy rode him with a heavy hand, that's way."

"I'll put a rubber bit in his mouth, to soften it," he pumped, brokenly. "Let out a wrap, girl, and we'll breeze them up the stretch; come on. Carter, get to the front with the mare."

A quarter of a mile from the finish the horses raced into a swinging stride. Diablo was simply mad with a desire to gallop; but in the saddle was his master; no horse ever did as he wished with John Porter. As a jockey, he would have been unsurpassed. It filled his heart with delight to play with the fierce, imperious animal he rode.

"Steady, my boy—no, you don't." This as Diablo stuck his neck straight out like an arrow and sought to hold the bit tight against the bridle teeth, that he might race at his own sweet will. Back came the right hand, then the left; three vicious saws, and the bit was loose and Diablo's head drawn down again close to the martingale. Lucretia and Lauzanne were pulling to the front.

"Go on!" called Porter to Ned Carter; "I want to see the little mare in her stride. Take them out at three-quarter gallop down the back stretch. I'll be treading your heels off."

By this they were opopsite the old stand, where Shandy was hiding. The boy, surmising that a gallop was on, and anxious to see them as they rounded the turn going down the back, had knocked a board loose to widen the crack. As the horses came abreast, Shandy, leaning forward in his eagerness, dislodged it at the top, and it fell with a clatter, carrying him half through the opening. The wind was blowing fair across the little stand, so the scent of the boy came to Diablo's nostrils at the same instant the startling noise reached his nervous ears. In a swerve he almost stopped, every muscle of his big body trembling in affright. Porter was nearly thrown from his seat by this crouching side step; the horse seemed to shrink from under him. Just for an instant, but the reins had flapped loose against the wet neck and Diablo felt freedom. With a snort he plunged forward like a wounded buck, and raced madly after Lucretia, who had bolted when the crash came.

Porter had lost a stirrup in the sudden twist, and the reins had slipped through his fingers as he grabbed the mane on Diablo's wither to pull his weight back into the saddle.

Now the black neck was straight and taut, flat-capped by the slim ears that lay close to the throat-latch. The thunder of his pounding hoofs reached to the ears of Lucretia and Lauzanne in front, and urged them onward. Carter had sat down in the saddle, and taken a steadying pull at the brown mare. Even Lauzanne seemed lifted out of his usual lethargy, and, wide-mouthed, was pulling Allis out of the saddle.

"Curse the brute!" gasped Porter, burying his knees in the saddle flaps, and searching for the dangling stirrup with the toe of his right foot. Once he almost had it, but missed; the iron, swinging viciously, caught Diablo in the flank—it made little difference, his terror was complete. All the time Porter was kneading the dangling reins back through forefinger and thumb, shortening his hold for a strong pull at the galloping brute's head.

"Who-o-a-h, who-o-o-ah, stead-y!" and, bracing himself against the pummel he swung the weight of his shoulders on the reins.

As well might he have pulled at the rock of Gibraltar. Diablo's head was up, his teeth set hard and the man's strength was as nothing against the full-muscled neck of the big horse. Diablo was cutting down the lead the other two held over him, galloping like a demon. Porter felt that he must loosen the bit and throw that set head down to get command of the horse. One fierce yank to the right and the black head swayed a trifle; another to the left and—God in heaven! the rein snapped, and its loose end came back, slashing the rider across the face. He reeled with the recoil, nearly bringing Diablo to his knees with the sudden swing of weight on the right rein. Porter's brain jerked foolishly for an instant; then he was the trained horseman again, and had let the remaining leather slip through his fingers a trifle.

"Go on!" he shouted to those in front; "go on—give me a lead! Hang to the course!"

He realized now that the crazed brute under him must run himself out. All he could do was to sit tight and wait till Diablo had raced himself to a standstill. To use the one rein meant a crash into the rail, and sure death. Before, he had thought only of the horse's welfare; now it was a matter of his own life. All that remained to him was to keep a cool head, a steady nerve and wait.

Freed of restraint, not battled with, the black's stride lengthened, his nostrils spread wider, the hoofs pounded quicker and quicker until the earth echoed with their palpitating beat. The other horses heard the turmoil, and they, too, became more afraid, and took up the mad rush.

Diablo's reaching nose was at Lauzanne's hip when Allis took one swift backward glance. She saw the dangling rein, the set look in her father's face, the devil eyes of the horse, and for one breath-gasp her heart fluttered in its beat. As quickly she put the fear from her and, swinging Lauzanne a shade wide, left Diablo more room next the rail.

"On, Lauzanne!" she called through drawn lips; and hitched encouragingly in the saddle.

Lucretia was still in front, her speed mocking at the swift rush of Lauzanne and Diablo. But how the black galloped! Every post saw him creeping up on the chestnut, and Allis riding and nursing him to keep the runaway hemmed in at the turns, so that he could not crash through the outer rail. No one spoke again. Each knew that nothing was left to do but keep Diablo to the course, and ride, ride.

Just in front of Lauzanne, with swinging stride, raced the brown mare, waiting till the chestnut should drop back beaten, to take up the running with Diablo. That was Carter's good judgment; and he rode as though it were the Derby, and he was nursing his mount for the last call at the finish.

At the three-quarters Lauzanne and Diablo were neck and neck; at the half the black was lapped on Lucretia; another furlong and she was laboring to keep her place, nose and nose with him.

"I'm done," panted Carter, feeling the mare swerve and falter; "I'm done—God help us!"

Still there was no check in the black's gallop; he was like a devil that could go on forever and ever.

They had turned into the straight with Lucretia a neck to the bad, when Carter heard the girl's voice faintly calling: "Pull out, Ned!" The boy thought it fancy. Lauzanne the Despised couldn't be there at their heels. He had thought him beaten off long ago. But again the voice came, a little stronger: "Pull out, Ned!"

This time there was no mistake. It might be a miracle, but it was his duty to obey. As he galloped, Carter edged Lucretia to the right. Without looking back he could feel Lauzanne creeping up between him and Diablo. Soon the chestnut's head showed past his elbow, and they were both lapped on the black. Halfway up the stretch Allis was riding stirrup to stirrup with her father. Porter's weight was telling on Diablo.

"She's got him. Lauzanne'll hold him if he doesn't quit," Carter muttered, as he dropped back, for Lucretia was blown.

Past the finish post Lauzanne was a head in front, and Diablo was galloping like a tired horse.

"He's beat!" ejaculated Carter. "Hello! that's it, eh? My word, what a girl!"

He saw Allis reach down for the slack rein running from her father's hand to Diablo's mouth. "Missed! She's got it!" he cried eagerly. "The devil!"

As Allis grasped Diablo's rein, the horse, with sudden fury at being drawn toward Lauzanne, his old foe, snapped at the chestnut. As he did so, thrown out of his stride, his forelegs crossed and he went down in a heap with the rider underneath. The force of his gallop carried the black full over onto his back. He struggled to his feet, and stood, shaking like a leaf, with low-stretched neck and fear-cocked ears, staring at the crushed, silent figure that lay with its face smothered in the soft earth.

XIV.

In a dozen jumps Allis stopped Lauzanne, threw herself from the saddle, and leaving the horse ran swiftly back to her father.

"Oh, my God, he's dead, he's dead!" she cried, piteously, the nerve that had stood the strain of the fierce ride utterly shattered and unstrung at sight of the senseless form.

"He's not dead," said Carter, putting his hand over Porter's heart. "It's just a bad shake-up. Mike's coming, and we'll soon get him home. He'll be all right, Miss Allis—he'll be all right," he kept muttering, in a dazed manner, as he raised her father's head to his knee.

"Take Lucretia and gallop for the docthor, Miss Allis," commanded Mike, coming up on the run. "We'll get yer father home in the buggy."

"In God's mercy, don't let him die, Mike," and bending down she pressed her lips to the cold forehead that was driven full of sand. "Get him home quick, and try not to let mother see. I'll take Lauzanne."

Mike had followed her and was standing waiting, his big eyes full of a curious concernment. Mike lifted Allis to the saddle. As he drew back his hand he looked at it, then up at the girl. "Don't cry, Miss," he said, struggling a little with is voice that was playing him tricks; "yer father's just stunned a bit. The docthor'll brace him up, all right."

"It's bad business, this," he continued, as Allis galloped on her errand, and he helped Carter lift the injured man. "There, that's roight; jist carry his legs; I'll take him under the back."

"What broke the rein?" he asked of Carter as they neared the buggy; "what started thim goin'?"

"Somebody was in the old stand," Carter replied, as putting his foot on the step he raised himself and the dead weight of the limp man.

"There, steady, Ned. Pull the cushion down in the bottom. Now ye've got it. Bot' t'umbs! it's as good as an ambulance. I'll hold his head in me lap, an' ye drive. Here, Finn," he continued, turning to the boy, who had caught and brought up Lucretia, "take the wee filly an' that divil's baste back to the barn; put the busted bridle by till I have a good look at it after. Go on, Ned; slow; that's it, aisy does it. When we get to the turnpike ye can slip along."

BASEBALL.

The Highland Athletic Club, of Jersey City, would like to hear from all teams averaging 90 to 95 pounds in and around Plainfield. The managers of teams desirous of making arrangements for a game with the above team are requested to correspond at their earliest convenience with Harold C. Chapman, manager, 17 Duncan avenue, Jersey City.

Today's Baseball Games.

The local baseball games scheduled for today are as follows: Clinton Avenues against New Brunswick on Crescent Oval; Plainfield A. C. against West Ends, on Clinton avenue grounds; St. Marys against Monroe Avenue A. C., at Hope Common; Scotch Plains against Pirate A. C., at Scotch Plains; Dunellen F. C. against Highland A. C., at Dunellen.

Snow in the Adirondacks.

Tupper Lake Junction, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Several inches of snow fell yesterday in the North Creek district on Seward, Ampersand and other mountains. A curious atmosphere effect was produced by the mingling of the snow and the clouds of smoke from the forest fires. All serious danger from the burning woods is evidently past.

SMASHED POUND; FREED 38 DOGS WITH HIS OWN.

For demolishing Elizabeth's dog pound with an axe and liberating thirty-eight imprisoned canines, including his own dog, Joseph Cammerato, who lives in Peterstown, Elizabeth, was arraigned yesterday in police court before Judge Mahon, on complaint of Charles Hazard, the Elizabeth dogcatcher, and was fined $20.

Cammerato was enraged over the seizure, on Wednesday afternoon, of his pet bull pup by Hazard's men, and arming himself with a shotgun and accompanied by a friend, he went to the pound, overawed the watchman with the gun and then set the animals at liberty.

In addition to this they thrashed a man whom they fancied was coming to the watchman's assistance. The fine imposed was promptly paid. The dog catchers scoured the city yesterday afternoon looking for the animals that were freed.

Ingenious Jerseymen.

Patents that were issued to Jerseymen, reported by Drake & Co., solicitors of American and foreign patents, 800 Broad street, Newark: Bellows package for distributing powder, S. S. Adams, Plainfield; connection for electric conductors, F. H. Ball; North Plainfield; rotary press, I. Broome, Trenton; puzzle, C. C. Burr, Jersey City; cartridge loading machine, W. I. POLITICAL NOTES.

Colonel Legage Pratt, of East Orange, was unanimously renominated by the Democrats of the Eighth Congressional district at the convention held in the Kreuger Club, Newark, last night. Walter I. McCoy, of Belleville, presided.

The Roselle Park Democratic Club will raise a banner this afternoon at Westfield avenue and Chestnut street, Roselle. Among the speakers will be General Dennis F. Collins, nominee for Mayor of Elizabeth; the three Assembly nominees and James Martine.

Former Governor Stokes says that Taft will carry New Jersey by 40,000 to 80,000; Congressman Fowler says by 75,000. The Daily Press ventures the guess that all these are are far too optimistic.

MARKING THE CLOTHES.

The most satisfactory method of marking clothes that go to the laundry is with a rubber stamp bearing your name, each separate article may thus be stamped with the least possible trouble, and the result will be a legible marking. What a help this is for the business girl, who lives away from home, who has no time to take particular pains in the care of her clothing? The name need not be put in a conspicuous place; in fact, it might be tucked away in some odd corner, where it will not show, yet is sure proof of ownership. The stamp is inexpensive and one may buy a pad and indelible ink at small cost. It is a very economical idea, for both ink and marker will probably outlast the girl who owns it.

To Tell of First Curved Baseball.

J. M. Mann, who was the first amateur to use the curved baseball, will tell about the incident at a big smoker of Princeton men at the Essex County Country Club next Friday night at Montclair. Mann used the curve in a game against Yale in 1874, and it proved so puzzling that not one of the opposing batsmen reached first base. Another speaker at the smoker will be Arthur Pell, the last pitcher of Princeton to use the straight ball. The entire Montclair association will attend the smoker, which will be conducted by the Princeton Alumni Association of the Oranges.

Monmouth's Prosecutor Resigns.

In order that he may be in a position to give all his time to the duties of commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, to which office he was recently elected, Henry F. Nevius yesterday resigned as Prosecutor of Monmouth county. Governor Fort appointed as his successor John F. Applegate, of Red Bank.

State W. C. T. U. Convention.

The annual State Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Atlantic City on October 5, 6, 7, and 8. Entertainment will be provided delegates and they are requsted to write to Mrs. J. L. Sutrees, of 24 Delaware avenue, Atlantic City.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Real love is not the feeling that seeks to receive pleasure, but that which seeks to give pleasure.—Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, Congregationalist, Worcester, Mass.

Spark of Godhood.

There is a spark of Godhood left in everybody. The meanest man on earth has a divine spot in him.—Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Pittsburg.

Chief Clerical Function.

The chief function of the preacher should be to set forth the spiritual food, of which the Bible contains such exhaustless abundance.—Rev. R. F. Hurbert, Methodist, Burlington, Ia.

No Use For Grossness.

Refinement turns away from grossness, but does not indulge in unmanly or unmannerly triumph over it.—Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, Baptist, New York.

Surface Religion.

Too much of our religion is on the surface. We do not dig deep enough. We are satisfied with a mud hut when we might have a palace.—Gypsy Smith, English Evangelist.

What Truth Will Do.

Truth will enable us to take off the corruptible and put on the incorruptible, make us free and put a new song in our mouths.—Rev. J. H. Accove, Methodist, Boston.

Beware of Fault Finding.

Healthy criticism is one thing, but ceaseless fault finding and a tirade of abuse that kills reverence and breeds lawlessness is another thing.—Rev. G. B. Vosburgh, Baptist, Denver.

Love In the Home.

Blessed is the home that is established on the basis of love, and no home can be a home, however attractive or comfortable or abundant its material environment, where love is not the regnant principle, the unifying bond.—Rev. William C. Stimson, Reformed, New York.

Unity of Nations.

We are recognizing today as never before perhaps that we are members one of another and debtors one to another; that neither languages nor customs, widely as they may vary, interfere with the strange oneness of the community of nations.—Rev. K. B. Tupper, Baptist, Philadelphia.

Love.

Love is supposed to be a very simple, garden thing; as a matter of fact it is so hard to attain that few have the courage to try it; so slow of growth that few persevere to learn it, and so rare that few even know what it is when they see it.—Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, Congregationalist, Worcester, Mass.

The Ministry of Pain.

Christ teaches the race that pain has a ministry; that men often come through pain as a means of promotion to higher spiritual attainments, even as Joseph passed through a prison on the way to promotion. Pain teaches men the evanescence of this world.—Rev. A. C. Smither, Disciple, Los Angeles, Cal.

Where There Is No Scheming.

Heaven is fixed, stable, immutable. It is safe. If a treasure or fortune is accumulated there, that fortune or treasure is safe always. On earth there are always scheming individuals ready and waiting to get other people's treasures. In heaven all are honest. There is no scheming. All is safe and pure and holy.—Rev. J. G. Baldwin, Lutheran, Akron, O.

Luck and Pedigree.

Every life saved and every work done has somewhere its sufficient explanation. God has never yet permitted an accident in his world. Every deed has its pedigree. So much producing energy in the cause means so much energy in the effect. There is no such thing as luck. Every life has its pedigree.—Rev. R. A. McFadden, Presbyterian, Danvers, Mass.

The Disciples as Our Guides.

We might as well clothe ourselves in seamless robes and, like our Lord, have no dwelling place on earth that we can call home as to take one characteristic of his life or one particular doctrine of the gospel and make that the sole end and aim of our lives. Jesus' disciples were closer to him than anybody else. They are believed to have known what he wanted them to do. They ought to be our guides.—Rev. Frederick E. Hopkins, Congregationalist, Chicago.

Where to Read Man as He Is.

What a man really is in his secret heart appears most clearly under his own roof tree, at his own dinner table and fireside. In the street, shop or market his real self is often hidden under company manners. But in his home company manners go into the dark closet with his dress coat, while the real man gets photographed and his principles published. Guests and children do not fail to find him out and read him as he is.—Rev. Rush R. Shippen, Unitarian, Atlanta, Ga.

What Christianity Is.

The essential doctrine of Christianity is that God will help men to be righteous if they will accept him. Christianity is help to the wrongdoer. The doctrine that there are three persons in one God is no essential part of Christianity. What is essential is that we worship no longer at the altar of an unknown God. Paganism had said, "God is righteous, and he demands righteousness of his children, and that is all." The doctrine of Christ is, "God not only demands righteousness, but will help his children to be righteous." The message of Christianity is the message of spring to the earth. It is the message of the waters pouring down from the mountains to the desert plains. It is life.—Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Dearth of School Tteachers.

A shortage of 1,200 school teachers is reported in Oklahoma. The cause is said to be the small salaries of women teachers. The club women declare that if the salaries of women teachers were mad to equal those of the men the shortage would cease to exist.

HEBREWS' DAY OF FASTING

Yom Kippur, Most Solemn Observance of Jewish Year, Rigidly Kept Here.

THEIR STORES ARE CLOSED.

Neither Food Nor Drink Taken by the Faithful—Services in the Synagogue.

Every Hebrew place of business in Plainfield is closed today. The Day of Atonement, which is known generally by its old Hebrew and Biblical name of Yom Kippur, is the the most solemn in the Jewish year, and probably no body of Christians keeps Good Friday with the rigid observance paid by Hebrews to Yom Kippur. It began last evening, and for twenty-four hours no drop of water, no crumb of bread, may pass the lips. The members of the Synagogue of The Children of Israel will spend today in the synagogues from morning until evening. There being no meals to interfere, the services will follow each other in unbroken succession. Sachris, or morning prayer, was immediately followed by Musof (the additional service for the day), and this, in turn, by Mincha, or afternoon prayer, and N'ila (the closing service), which will end with the blowing of the shofar.

Many are spending the twelve hours from morning until evening in the synagogue worship. Many will be dressed in white, symbolic of the purity called for by the holy day, and will remove the shoes from their feet in token of humiliation and reverence. During the prayer of adoration, "Wa 'anachnu Koreim" (We bow the head, we bend the knee), members of the stricter organizations where possible will prostrate themselves until the forehead touches the ground, according to ancient custom, in which worshippers fell upon their faces before the Lord. In reformed synagogues the rabbis, in place of the congregation, will do this act of homage.

The ancient ritual of the day is contained in Leviticus xvi. On this day alone, throughout the year, did the high priest enter within the veil into the Holy of Holies, and, before the ark and the mercy seat, make the yearly atonement for the sins of the whole people. Before venturing into the most holy place he made atonement for his own sins in order that he might enter undefiled. He also wore the dress of white linen, symbolic of purity and righteousness. On this day he made confession of the sins of the people over the head of the scapegoat, which he sent forth by a messenger into the wilderness as a token that God had put away and forgiven the sins of His people. "On this day shall atonement be made for you to cleanse you. From all your sins shall ye be clean before the Lord. It is a Sabbath of solemn rest unto you and ye shall afflict your souls. It is a statute forever."

Services were held at the Synagogue last evening. The principal observance of Yom Kippur, however, is in the services today.

Civil Service Examination.

A civil service examination for positions of clerk and letter-carrier at the local postoffice will be held here on November 21. Applications must be made not later than October 19. Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 45, not less than five feet four inches and weigh not less than 125 pounds. Further information regarding the examination can be obtained from W. B. Sharp at the postoffice.

Local Men as Life-Guards.

Charles Hurrt, of West Front street, who is better known as "Fat," and Adam Dunham, of West Third street, left this morning for Jacksonville, Fla., where they have been engaged as coast life-guards for the winter season. Hurtt was one of the guards at Asbury Park during the past summer and established a record of saving fourteen lives.

New Members at First M. E.

These persons were received into the First M. E. church, at the communion service yesterday morning: George R. Cornwell, Julia M. Cornwell, John L. Cornwell, Elizabeth Cornwell Allen, Mary F. Randolph, May F. Randolph, Edith F. Randolph, Florence E. Roundey, Carrie Tingley, Ella M. Winter, Mary Katherine Blimm and Mary A. Meiers.

In the City Court.

Edward Burke was picked up at North and Park avenues by Sergeant Overbaugh, Saturday night, for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He pleaded guilty in the city court, this morning, but as it was his first offense he was let off on suspended sentence.

PROMOTE JOHN J. LANE AFTER 33 YRS. SERVICE

John J. Lane, an active figure in Union county Democratic politics for many years, who has been in continuous service of the Lackawanna Railroad for thirty-three years, has been promoted from general division superintendent at Summit to the position of freight agent at the Lackawanna terminal in Hoboken. The position to which Mr. Lane has been assigned, says the Railroad Employe, is one of much responsibility, being considered one of the best and most important in the Lackawanna's freight department on the Morris and Essex Division.

John J. Lane was born in Poughkeepsie in 1865, and moved to Summit in 1870, where he began work for the Lackawanna Railroad, as messenger, October 4, 1875. When only 13 years of age he began as an operator, and worked at various stations as relief operator, and also in the dispatcher's office in Hoboken until 1883, when he was appointed agent at Summit. He remained there until September 1, this year, when he was transferred to Hoboken.

HOWARD F. RHOADES TO WED MISS ETHEL WALSH.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Howard F. Rhoades, of Bank place, and Miss Ethel Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Walsh, of 45 St. Felix street, Brooklyn. The ceremony will take place Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Walsh is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Tier, of East Front street, and has a number of friends here.

Mr. Rhoades, who is head bookkeeper in the office of the New York Press office, has been a resident of Plainfield about twelve years, seven of which he has spent at the home of John H. Tier on Bank place.

AUTO ON A RAMPAGE.

Got Away from Driver, Leaped a Curb and Branged Into Resturant Window.

While William R. Sweeney, of Trenton, formerly of this city, was turning his big Rambler around on North avenue at 1:45 yesterday afternoon, the mechanism took a sudden cantankerous spell. The car got beyond his control and leaped the curb, then drove head-on into one of the windows of the Belmont restaurant. The collision stopped the machine's funny business and it was backed away.

Mr. Sweeney was badly shaken up by the impast and severely wrenched an ankle but otherwise escaped injury. The front of the auto was slightly damaged but not so bad but what he could run it to Trenton.

Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Staats, of Bound Brook, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Naomi Staats, and Henry Elliott Cruser, also of Bound Brook. The event will be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Wednesday afternoon, October 14, at 4 o'clock. Miss Staats was formerly night chief operator at the local exchange of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and has many friends in this city.

Enjoyed a Clam Bake.

Local young men to the number of sixty enjoyed a country dinner and clam bake at the Plainfield Driving Park grounds, yesterday. E. Y. Neighbor was the chef and further increased his reputation as a bake artist. Previous to the serving of dinner, the attendants enjoyed quoit matches and an informal program of field sports.

Observed Eighth Anniversary.

Assessor and Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh and daughter, Marjorie Van Emburgh, of East Second street, spent yesterday with Mrs. Van Emburgh's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Kline, of Elizabeth, and at the same time Mr. and Mrs. Van Emburgh observed the eighth anniversary of their wedding.

Funeral of Mrs. Kiley.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Kiley, wife of James Kiley, of South avenue, was held in St. Mary's church, this morning. The mass was said by Rev. Father Bogan. Mrs. Kiley was forty-five years old and had been ill but one week. She was the mother of ten children

Another Shade Tree Violation.

George Wooden tied his horse to a tree on Liberty street, Saturday, and the eagle eye of a cop took note. Wooden was haled to the city court, this morning, and told he had violated the shade tree ordinance. He promised to never do it again and was let go.

NEW RECTOR OFFICIATES

Rev. Morgan Ashley Takes Charge of Sunday Services at St. Stephen's Church.

ADDRESSES HIS PARISHONERS.

Rev. A. S. Peck's Successor Formerly of Orange—Twenty-seven Years Old and Unmarried.

Rev. Morgan Ashley, the new rector of St. Stephen's church, officiated at the services yesterday for the first time since he became the successor of Rev. A. S. Peck. He conducted the high celebration and preached the regular sermon at 11 o'clock in the morning, and was greeted by a large congregation. Hereafter the regular services will be held, early celebration at 7 o'clock; Sunday-school at 9:45, high celebration and sermon at 11 o'clock, evening service at 7:45.

Mr. Ashley, who is about twenty-seven years old, was formerly of Orange, but recently had a charge at Butler. He was a member of Grace church parish, Orange. Prior to his sermon yesterday morning he addressed the congregation in an informal manner, asking for the united support of the members of the parish which he felt sure would help him for a successful pastorate. The new rector then delivered a strong sermon, in a most earnest manner. He speaks extempore, possesses a pleasing and distinct voice. His remarks were well received by all who heard him.

Mr. Ashley is unmarried and will take up his residence at once at the parish house. Within a few days he will complete his plans for the fall and winter work.

EMPLOYE AND SERVANT HAVE A LIVELY SCRAP.

Daisy Singh, a colored girl, appeared in the city court, this morning, in answer to a charge of disorderly conduct preferred against her by John G. Lindsay, of Central avenue. It grew out of a disturbance at the Lindsay home, Saturday night, in which the girl and her employer slapped and clawed each other. When a cop arrived in response to a summons, he found the head of the house pretty well used up and the servant taking refuge in the cellar.

Lindsay failed to appear when Judge Runyon called the case and the story of the affair was told by Miss Singh. She said Mrs. Lindsay started the trouble and that her husband took it up, calling her vile names and assaulting her. The magistrate dismissed the complaint.

TELLS OF INFLUENCE OF BOOKS ON CHARACTER.

The fall series of men's meetings was inaugurated at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, yesterday afternoon, when nearly two hundred men listened to an address of compelling power by Alexander Irvine, on "The Influence of Books on Character." The speaker showed how his own life had been influenced by four great books, "John Halifax, Gentleman," "Adam Bede," "Les Miserables," and chiefly the Bible. He characterized the Bible as God's finger-pointer for man that he may not stumble or go astray.

It was announced that the service on Sunday, October 11, will be addressed by Dr. Harvey G. Furbay, General Secretary of the Industrial Christian Alliance, of New York.

Tract Distributors Arrested.

E. Woodworth English and Benjamin Boulton English, representing a religious society, were arraigned in the city court this morning for distributing circulars in violation of the local ordinance. They explained that the circulars were tracts and that they thought they were doing no harm in spreading the gospel in this way. Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Chinese Class Organized.

The first session of the Chinese Sunday-school class was held at Faith chapel, yesterday morning, with Frank Stewart as teacher. Four of the fourteen members enrolled attended ann excellent progress was made. The other members have signified their intention of being present next Sunday and thereafter.

A Mark of Respect.

Owing to the funeral of Mrs. Weightman, the missionary meeting announced for 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon in the parish house of Grace church will not be held.

Special School Car.

The special school car running from Dunellen to the Plainfield High School was put in commission this morning and carried fifty-six High School pupils.

HOPE CHAPEL HOLDS DOUBLE CELEBRATION

Hope chapel's congregation held special services morning, afternoon and evening, yesterday, in the joint observance of rally day and Rev. L. R. Howard's seventh anniversary as pastor. The attendance on each occasion was very large while at the Sunday-school session there were 440 scholars present. The singing was a feature through an augmented choir rendering appropriate anthems and a profusion of cut flowers formed the decorations. These were arranged by the flower committee of the Y. P. S. C. E.

At the morning service, Rev. L. R. Howard was in charge and gave the fourth talk of his series on the Christianity of St. Paul, his subject being "Paul's conception of the purpose of the death of Jesus Christ." It was prefaced by a short talk directly to a large number of children who were present. At the close of the sermon, Mr. Howard made reference to his seven years pastorate, dwelling upon what had been accomplished in that time. He expressed the hope that the day would be the starting point for the better, greater and nobler aims for the years to come.

The Sunday-school had charge in the afternoon and in place of the usual lesson, rally day exercises were held. Superintendent G. Herbert Condict presided and the program comprised songs, recitations and addresses. Rev. Mr. Howard gave a talk on immigration work at Ellis Island and a special offering was taken for this purpose, the school making a generous contribution. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, and Mr. Condict. Dr. Zelie related a number of experiences he had while abroad the past summer and in closing left a thought with the scholars to the effect that Hope chapel's work in the past twenty years had prospered so greatly because it was founded on faith and belief in Christ Jesus. The recitations and drills were given by members of the beginners' class.

The evening service was in charge of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, the president, Miss Bertha Jones, acting as leader. Most of the time was taken up with a discussion of the topic, "How can the society better the church?" At the conclusion, the members united in reading the pledge and renewing their vows of consecration to the service of the Lord. The service was much enjoyed by the large congregation present.

FOWLER TURNED DOWN.

Trenton City Hall Commission Rejects His Bid for Marble.

Ferdinand W. Roebling, General C. Edward Murray and formed Senator Jonathan Blackwell, members of the Trenton City Hall Commission, have finally signed the contract calling for the erection of that structure by Doak & Co., Philadelphia builders. The commissioners first secured all of the sub-contracts for Trenton builders, as well as a pledge from Doak & Co. that Trenton labor and Trenton material would be given preference in whatever work they might do for themselves.

The commission rejected the bid of Congressman Fowler for marble, and awarded that part of the contract to a Vermont concern. The new city hall will cost upward of a million dollars, and will be completed in about four years.

Rally Day at Warren Chapel.

Rally day exercises were held at Warren chapel yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school. The chapel was elaborately decorated with flowers and potted plants by the flower committee from the Christian Endeavor Society. A special program was prepared for the occasion, consisting of recitations by children from the Junior department and there were short addresses by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor, and Rev. Alexander Irvine, of New York. A feature of the program was a tenor solo by G. Elmer Stricklett, formerly of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church quartet. There was an unusually large number of children and teachers in attendance and all thoroughly enjoyed the exercises.

Special Musical Service.

A large congregation attended the special musical service held at the Congregational church last night. The program included an instrumental prelude, organ, Mrs. B. T. Burnes; soprano solo, "Come Unto Me," Mrs. Thomas MacDonald; offertory, violin and piano, Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnson and Miss Mabel Maxson; contralto solo, "Abide With Me," Mrs. J. A. Rawson; address, "Three Places for Religion," Rev. C. L. Goodrich; baritone solo, "Jerusalem," Charles L. Lewis.

Rasores to Meet.

The Rasores will meet tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. B. O. Bowers, on Franklin place.

FAIR ACRES' FINE MEET

Card at Plainfield Driving Park Proves Exceptionally Interesting.

FOUR EXCITING EVENTS SEEN.

Class "B" and "C" Undecided and Will Be Run-off at an Early Date—Prizes are Given.

The matinee race-meet at the driving park, under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club, attracted a good crowd Saturday afternoon, and all enjoyed the fine sport. There were four events on the program, three trotting and one half-mile running race. In Class A, Lady Onward won handily, taking all three heats in good time. The last heat was made in 2:28. Joe McGregor finished second.

It was impossible to finish the Class B and C events, and these will be run off on Saturday. In Class B, Frank Irving's "Fred V.," finished first in the third and fourth heats, and John Osborn's "Half Moon," went under the wire first in the second heat, while C. C. Brower's "Oracle," won the first heat.

Three different horses finished first in each of the three heats in the Class C event and this will have to be run off. "Polly Watt" won the half-mile running race, easily, taking both heats. Prizes consisting of harness and whips were awarded the winners in the several events. The summaries:

MRS. EMMA L. WOODRUFF DIES AT PARENTS' HOME.

Mrs. Emma L. Woodruff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Stratton, of Elizabeth, died at the latter's home Saturday afternoon, after an illness of eight months. She was formerly Miss Emma Stratton, of this city, residing with her parents on East Fifth street, until four years ago. She had many friends in both the city and borough. She is survived by her husband and a little daughter, one year old.

The funeral will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stratton, 355 Morris avenue, Elizabeth, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The interment will be at Elizabeth.

A TRANSCONTINENTAL TOUR.

Local Man Will "Blaze the Trail" for "Gay New York's Trip to the Pacific Coast.

Joseph Lane, the well known Plainfielder who is connected with the executive staff for the Wiswell & Barton theatrical firm, is in the city today arranging for the appearance here of "Gay New York," a big musical production put out by his employers. It will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night

The show is one of the largest controlled by Wiswell & Barton and though Mr. Lane is the youngest of their agents he has been designated to pilot it on a transcontinental tour. After playing a few dates in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the company goes directly west and thence by the northern route to the Pacific coast. It is booked to be at Portland, Oregon, shortly after Thanksgiving. Mr. Lane is "to blaze the trail" all the way and is counted upon to make a good showing. He was appointed to the important position because of good work with "The Shoemaker" last season.

Entertained Friends at Whist.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Price, of 57 Sandford avenue, entertained a company of friends, some from out of town, at their home, Saturday evening. Whist was the feature, there being seven tables. Mrs. F. S. Cutter won the first prize for the women and Mrs. Ernest Lowe the second prize. Charles I. Nash received the first prize for the men and A. T. Runyon the second prize. After the play refreshments were served and a general good time was enjoyed.

MERCHANTS ACCUSE WOMAN AS SHOPLIFTER

Charged with shoplifting in both the A. E. Force and Woodhull-Martin department stores, a woman giving her name as Mrs. Charles Wyckoff, of Dunellen, was arrested by the local police this afternoon. She was taken to headquarters and a formal charge will be made against her by the Merchants' Association, which has undertaken to stamp out this practice in the city.

Mrs. Wyckoff was detected in the Force store as she was seen going away with a sweater over her arm. When question about it, she said she had picked it up absent-mindedly but the suspicions of the store people became aroused and she was asked to step into the office. There it was found, according to her accusers, that she had a quantity of dress goods concealed beneath her skirt and gloves and other articles in a handbag. When asked about the latter she said she had bought them at the Woodhull-Martin store, but when taken there she admitted that she had stolen them.

The police were called in and the woman was formally placed under arrest. A companion who was with her in the Force store will probably be held as a witness.

COLORED MAN RESCUED FROM DANGEROUS POSITION.

A local colored man whose name is said to be Scott Gibson, narrowly escaped serious injury, if not death, while gathering chestnuts on lower Grant avenue, near the Watchung Hunt Club grounds, Saturday. While high up in a tree, he lost his hold and fall down but was caught by the feet in a crutch branch when near the ground. He was held fast despite frantic efforts to free himself and was in an exhausted condition when his cries were heard by Andrew McDowell, an employe at the Hunt club.

With the aid of a rake, McDowell was enabled to get Gibson in an upright position and eventually to release himself. As soon as the hold was loosened, the colored man dropped to the ground in an exhausted condition. But for McDowell's timely arrival, it is probable that he would have fared badly by the rush of blood to the head.

MISS ELLA HEDDEN, BRIDE OF ROBERT E. CROSSON.

Miss Ella Hedden, daughter of Mrs. Albert Hedden, of West Fifth street, and Robert E. Crosson, of West Fourth street, were quietly married at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of the bride's mother, by Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church. The affair was attended only by the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, owing to the recent death of the former's father, Albert Hedden.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Crosson left for a short wedding trip. They will return the latter part of the week and make their home at 122 West Fifth street. Both the bride and groom are well-known here where they have a host of friends. Mr. Crosson is engaged in business in New York as an electrotyper.

First Chase of the Season.

The Watchung Hunt Club held its first weekly chase of the season Saturday afternoon, when fifteen members of the club met at 3:30 o'clock at Dog Tavern and enjoyed a ride of about five miles over the nearby country after the hounds. The hunt was a successful one and there was only one spill, that of Harry Finch, who failed to take one of the jumps. The hounds worked out well and altogether the run was a good one. Wednesday morning the members will start from Oak Tree at 6:15 for a hunt in another direction.

Aged Man Killed by Street Car.

While crossing Main street, East Orange, Saturday afternoon, Julius Kauffman, fifty-six years old, of Orange, became confused when he saw a street car bearing down upon him. The car hurled him to the pavement, fatally injuring him. He leaves a wife, son and daughter.

Presbytery Meets Tomorrow.

The stated meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery will be held in the Presbyterian church Basking Ridge, tomorrow, and the local churches of that denomination will be represented by the pastors and regularly-appointed delegates.

POLITICAL 'PANACEAS' LABELLED SOCIALISTIC

Rector of Holy Cross Church Warns Flock of Promised Remedies for Nation's Ills.

REFORMERS TOO MEDDLESOME.

"What We Need," Says Rev. Geo. A. Warner, "Is a Policy of Non-interference.

Having in mind the effect of utterances by certain office-holders and office-seekers in producing an unsettled financial condition in this country and their tendency in blinding the people by golden promises of an ideal era should their promised panaceas be used, Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, preached a powerful sermon yesterday morning. He compared the "meddling" methods of modern reformers with those of Christ and implored the people "to consider well the attitude of Christ towards reforms political and social."

Rev. Mr. Warner's text was "Master speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me; and Christ said to him: Man, who made me a judge or a divider over thee." His sermon of absorbing interest follows:

"Here are words from the Master's own lips which puzzle and perplex us, and demand something more than surface reading. Did not Christ proclaim and constantly reaffirm that He came as a king, a ruler sent from God and that He should be the great judge of all the world? Surely, this is true and not one but countless readings from the new Testament assert Christ's sovereignty and right to judge. But a right to judge in the moral world may be quite distinct from interference with established political government. We find in Christ a deep reverence and respect for the powers that be; for the government of the world as he found it, not for the moral acts of the men in authority or their examples he had stern condemnation for them, but a deep and abiding respect for law, order and government. Men constantly tried to make Christ into a popular king after the stamp of King David and King Solomon. At the very outset we find the prince of evil laying before Him the outward glory of kingdoms of the world and appealing to his imagination of how all might be Christ's to govern, to exercise lordship over all after the fashion of earthly kings, if only He would bow down and serve Satan. It was a dazzling prospect which Christ utterly refused. No great lordship of the kind of Alexander or Napoleon at the sacrifice of a single principle.

"Later in the Saviour's life we find men after the exhibition of his tremendous powers and gifts, eager to have him and trying by force to make him a king. We find his respect for constituted authority in the midst of his rightly indignation, when he laid bare the hypocrises and deceits of the Pharisees. "Do ye not after their deeds, their moral acts,' he says, 'but whatsoever they bid you do, that observe and do, for they sit in Moses seat.' Respect you see for constituted authority.

"When the lepers came to him for cleansing, he sent them to the officials who could pronounce upon their cleanliness. 'Go show yourselves unto the priests.' He is careful to pay the tribute money, and we find Him saying render unto Caesar the things that be Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's. Before the Roman Governor he disclaims any thought of attempting to overthrow the existing form of government. 'My kingdom,' he says 'is not of this world; if it were, then he says would my soldiers fight.'

"With these assertions before our minds we are ready I think to see in our Lord's actions and words a keen appreciation and reverence for the powers of government as he found them as ordained of God. He came to establish a moral kingdom in the hearts of men which should make them regenerate human society and modify existing conditions not so much by change of government in its outward official aspect and rearranging social conditions, but by working changes in men themselves under the then existing forms of government.

It is noteworthy of careful consideration on our part that confront-

VALUE OF GOOD WATER.

People not infrequently come home from a summer vacation if not with typhoid at least with bad malaria or stomach disorders.

This is often caused by impure water and it is well, especially in going ipto the country where wells are used, to know a few simple tests by which the condition of the water can be told.

About the simplest is one that is well known, called the Hirsch test. Buy a pint bottle of clear glass, preferably with a glass stopper. Fill it two-thirds full with water to which is added a half teaspoonful of granulated sugar.

Cork the bottle tightly and stand in the light in a warm room for forty-eight hours. If at the end of that time the water is cloudy or milky looking it is unfit for use.

Arthur V. De Hart has returned from Newark, where he has been visiting relatives.

WESTFIELD.

The Children's Country Home at Mountainville was closed for the season on Thursday. The management of the home hoped to be able to keep it open all winter, but the funds at the disposal of the committee at present will not warrant it.

J. J. Wicker, an evangelist, of Northfield, Mass., commenced a series of special meetings at the Westfield Baptist church yesterday morning. The meetings will be continued each evening during the week.

The young people of Holy Trinity church, Westfield, will hold a fair at the Westfield Club Hall, to last a week, beginnnig October 24.

The Public Service Corporation is opening an office on Broad street, Westfield.

Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., will initiate several candidates tonight and Cranford Council, No. 62, has been invited to be present.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Rev. R. H. Hall, for forty years pastor of the Presbyterian church at Columbus, has given up preaching and retired.

The large Birkhead Mills, at Beverly, which have been closed for a year, will be opened in two weeks by the Standard Combed Thread Company of Camden.

Believing the historical parade of founder's week in Philadelphia will be of great value to the pupils, the Woodbury Board of Education has declared a holiday for Friday next.

Bishop Scarborough Saturday ordained William C. Wherry to the ministry, at St. James P. E. church, Trenton. Mr. Wherry has been acting rector of the church for some months.

Falls City Lodge No. 14, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Paterson, observed its silver anniversary Friday evening at Entre Nous Hall with an excellent entertainment and reception.

Struck by a trolley car while on a motorcycle Friday night, Frank Grant, of 123 North Georgia avenue, Atlantic City, was badly cut about the head. He was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Atlantic City was "dry" in more than one way during September, according to reports of the local weather bureau, which shows that only five rainy days were recorded during the thirty.

Run down by an automobile while riding a bicycle Friday night, Joseph Middleton, ten years old, of 426 Market street, Camden, sustained lacerations of the head and was cared for at Cooper Hospital.

Members of the crack Morris Guards Company, of Atlantic City, will leave Friday next for their annual camp, which is to be pitched at Hagerstown, Md., and to be known as "Camp Stokes," under command of Captain Harry Smith.

Magistrate Gallagher at the Eleventh and Winter streets police stations, Philadelphia, Saturday, sent James Keefer to Camden, where he is wanted for robbing a Catholic church. He is also accused of plundering the home of W. C. Bennett, of Riverton, of jewelry valued at $300.

Chief of Police Scull, of Ocean City, was surprised when he went to the city lockup yesterday with food for "Jeff" Young, a colored lad, a prisoner, to find that the boy had pried his way through two bars in the window and escaped through an aperture only nineteen by nine inches.

Noonday political meetings, to reach business men and mechanics, are planned by the Republicans in Atlantic City. There will be gatherings in places where many men are employed. The experiment will be made this week. Saturday the Republicans had speeches and a parade with fireworks when they raised a Taft and Sherman banner.

Hugh C. Leadrim left his spirited horse in front of the Second National Bank building in Paterson, Saturday, and when he returned a few minutes later the rig was missing. Two hours later it was found in the possession of twelve-year-old Harry Cadmus, of 256 Spring street. With another lad of his own age, young Cadmus had enjoyed a drive about the city.

Orville Vanderslice, of South Camden, pleaded guilty Saturday to a theft of jewelry and other goods to the value of $800 from Gately & Hurley, who keep a department store and was sentenced in the Camden Criminal Court to two years in State prison. Vanderslice was married not long ago.

THE TOILSOME PROCESS OF TAKING NOURISHMENT.

Eating is not an ignoble function. The human machine might be kept running just the same if the required motive power in the shape of so many carbohydrates, so much protein and the proper portion of fats and salts were all condensed by scientifis processes into one ugly little capsule and shot down individual aesophaguses when the indicator called for more steam.

What a saving there would be in dishes; in getting things on the table and off again; in toiling over the stove; in running down cellar and into the garden. All we would need would be our individual bottle of "calories" and a self-registering indicator. But if much weariness of the flesh might be saved by this dietetic reform, what a lot of genial companionship, of the refinement of living, yes, even its poetry, we should miss. If we could only learn to simplify our methods of living, differentiating between essentials and nonessentials, much would be gained.

Scientific men who are trying to enlighten people as to what they should or should not eat are advocating a more general use of cereals as food and a decreased use of flesh. "Wheats," says Dr. Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, "are easily digested and furnish an abundance of energy soon after consumption, but it is not retained in the digestive organism long enough to sustain permanent muscular exertion. Cereal foods, on the other hand, are more slowly digested and furnish the energy necessary to digestion and the vital functions in a more uniform manner. Everything necessary to supply the waste of the body and to give heat and energy to the system is supplied in the cereals. The workingmen of this country should consider this point, and should learn more the value of cereals as food. When cereals are properly prepared and served they are as nutritous as meat, and their judicious use would gradually diminish the undue craving for meat."

Aunt Mahaly's Expedient.

"These stockings are so full of holes that they are worthless," Aunt Mahaly," said a lady to an old colored woman with a large family, who was a pensioner of her family.

"No'm dey ain't," replied Aunt Mahaly, calmly appropriating them. "Rastus en' Verbena got such black laigs dat de holes won't show, nohow, en' dem chilluns what got yaller meat kin wear two pairs at de same time; en' you knows, Mis' Jo, dat de holes in all dem stockings ain't gwine hit de same places."—Youth's Companion.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

WHY WE SHOLD EAT MORE RAW APPLES.

Many persons fancy that raw apples are indigestible and only endurable in the early morning. Doubtless the old adage that fruit is gold in the morning, silver in the middle of the day and lead at night is to some extent answerable for this (to my way of thinking) erroneous impression.

Dietitians tell us that ripe, raw apples contain more phosphates in proportion to their bulk than any other article of food, fish not excepted. A recent writer on this point boldly declares that in this lies the secret of healthful longevity. They correct billiousness and act as a sedative upon racked nerves and allay insomnia.

"Eat uncooked apples constantly, although, of course, in moderation, and drink distilled water only, and years will be added to your life, while the evidences of age will be long in coming."

This argument is based on the supposition that, as age advances, the deposits of mineral matter in the system increase, and that aging is little more than a gradual process of ossification.

Phosjhoric acid contains the least amount of earth salts, and for that reason is probably the nearest approach to the elixir of life known to the scientific world.

If you want to live long, to retain your youth at the same time and to increase your brain tissue, eat plenty of apples, drink plenty of distilled water and eat as little bread as possible.

Tart apples are far more wholesome than sweet, and all, like potatoes, should be fully ripe when eaten.—Weekly Globe Democrat.

Plainfield, N. J., October 5, 1908.

Will Charles N. Fowler spare enough of his time to put himself on record concerning his vote for speaker should the Fifth district return him? Will he vote for Cannon?

It's not at all strange that the people of Elizabeth should be so enthusiastic over the candidacy of Captain Robert Kirkland. As he has been a life-long resident of that place, his fellow-townsmen have had abundant opportunity ot get a correct estimate on him as a business man and otherwise. He is a most capable man and would make an ideal sheriff.

Now that Union county's Board of Freeholders has completed the macadamizing of Terrill road to the county line it is but fair that Somerset's Board should do its part toward macadamizing from the county line to Mountain avenue, above which on the crest of the Watchung mountain stands Mt. St. Mary's College, a structure which besides being the home of a splendid institution of learning, is a highly ornate and costly building.

Here is a common-sense opinion as expressed by the Paterson News: "Bishop Lines' remarks and views will appeal with great force to the great mass of citizens who are not extremeists on either side of the controversy. They are eminently safe and sane. The people desire to have the liquor traffic regulated by law for the greatest good to the greatest number. Prohibition, as in Maine, and in Ocean Grove and Asbury Park, does not prohibit. It only drives the sale underground and makes evasion popular, while it cuts off all revenue except to Uncle Sam, who always get his, whether in Maine, or the dry spots in New Jersey.

The New York Times which scored a big "beat" when it published an article purported to have been written by the late Grover Cleveland, endorsing Mr. Taft, finds itself in a sorry plight. Mr. Ochs' paper is crying out now for proofs that the statement is not authentic. "All the Times asks or desires is real evidence or truth about the article," is that paper's pleading announcemen; today.

Has not the Times placed itself in a most ridiculous light in the newspaper world by flaunting such a story as a "beat" and then, confessing its inability to show the genuineness of the article, calling on a district attorney and the accusers in the newspaper fraternity to prove its innocence?

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will hold its first fall meeting in the chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 o'clock and all the members are requested to return their mite boxes.

Blonde Women's Advantage.

"Blonde women have their photographs taken just about twice as often in the long run as brunettes," remarked a photographer. "The reason is easy; blondes take better pictures than brunettes. The lighting effects are better when the subject is a blonde. A blonde girl may get a photograph that will flatter her, where one of a brunette, taken under the same conditions, will not even do her justice."

Squelched Eccentric Poet.

One day Charles Baudelaire, the eccentric French poet, came to Maxine du Camp's rooms with his hair dyed green. Du Camp affected not to notice it. Baudelaire did all he could to direct attention to it and finally, as his friend persisted in not noticing it, he burst out: "Don't you see anything strange about me to-day?" Du Camp answered: "Not at all; lots of people have green hair." Baudelaire left at once disgusted

Vocation.

Every man has his own vocation. There is one direction in which all space is open to him. He has faculties silently inviting him thither to endless exertion. He is like a ship in a river; he runs against obstructions on every side but one; on that side all obstruction is taken away, and he sweeps serenely over a deepening channel into an infinite sea.—R. W. Emerson.

Would Welcome Such Gems.

The legal tangle that has resulted from the pretensions of a man that he could make diamonds is interesting to women who hope that the man can prove his ability to manufacture the crystalline form of carbon, as the real gems are growing scarcer every year, and the price threatens to become prohibitive.

A Handicap Now.

"What sort of telescope do you use for seeing things on Mars?" The eminent astronomer, habituated to scanning the heavens at magazine space rates, stayed his pen but an instant. "I have learned," he replied, "not to rely on any telescope. The best of them badly hampers the play of the imagination."

French Wives in Business.

Wives of French business men, as is well known, quite commonly assist in their husbands' commercial affairs, and for such wives it is claimed that they "afford much help by being, even 'after hours,' always willing to talk 'shop.'"

Has Trained Bull at Work.

Thomas Hill, a Lawrenceville (N. J.) farmer, has trained a bull to run a treadmill, which pumps water, churns butter and does all of that kind of work. The bull, Hill says, beats a windmill or gasoline engine.

In Pawn, We Suppose.

Church to Be Built of Paper.

Paris is to have a new church made entirely of paper, rendered impermeable by means of a coating of quicklime mixed with curdled milk and white of egg. It will accommodate 1,000 people.

Irish Hospitality.

An Irishman needs no requital for his hospitality; its generous impulse is the instinct of his nature, and the very consciousness of the act carries its recompense along with it.—Charles Phillips.

Real Cause for Divorce.

In seeking absolute divorce man testifies that his wife gave him hash for breakfast and provided the corespondent with cocktails and soft shell crabs. That's adding insult to alleged infidelity.

The Limit.

Howell—"I don't mind getting a lemon now and then, but—" Powell—"But what?" Howell—"I think it is overdoing the thing when the lemon has been squeezed."

Disastrous Reaction.

"I was awfully worried about Johnny when he had that last sick spell," said Mrs. Lapsling, "and when the doctor told me he was going to get well I went fairly deleterious with joy."

The Difference.

The man who saves when he has little is called stingy. He that saves when he has much is said to be judicious.

Congested New York.

The world's population could be contained in Delaware if it was as congested as 11 New York city blocks, at the rate of 1,200 people to the acre.

PASTOR DECRIES SOCIALISM

ing Christ was the great problem of human misery rising from inequality of social conditions that exist in much the same form today. The very rich in their opulence, the aristocratic Romans of vast domain and 'predatory wealth' existed, and the poor creditor was in jail; the very rich the very poor whom Christ said we always have with us, and likewise there were the sick, the social outcasts, the man down in his luck, the beggar, the criminal. Has it never struck you then as strange that we hear from Christ, the foremost reformer of the age, not one word of suggested political reform, nothing of legislation, no suggested drastic laws or remedial operation, no hint of paternal control.

"In the midst of modern reforms and the tinkering with legislation and suggested change of goverment, the golden age of equality is promised, but it behooves Christian people to put their Christianity to a practical test and to consider well the attitude of Christ toward reforms political and social.

"To me, at least, it looks as though the modern reformer had begun at the wrong end of the problem. Beginning at the top and working downward, instead of at the bottom upward. We would tinker with government ownership, interference, legislative acts, municipal control, etc., we would dally with socialism, reduce swollen fortunes, put people on an equality, take competition out of the market and lo the golden age is reached! But government under whatever form, while it may punish and prohibit, cannot control human ingenuity, or put man's passions out; it may make him more deceitful and crafty, but it can't control his greed, his covetousness and the things which are strictly personal and belong to his hidden and moral life which are beyond the observation of men or the power of any man made law to exercise sway over.

"I am conscious of having preached this same truth from the pulpit before, but it remains a truth to be iterated and reiterated especially at a time when socialism with its glitterings but specious arguments is making such headway and presidential aspirants are filling the country with promises of changes of government and reforms by way of interference.

"My dear friends what we need most of all in governmental life today is this very policy of non-interference, a time of rest and recuperation, where a man may judge his business life and relations not by the fear of prohibitive law, but by the fear of God. Today men are crying out over the land for a division of the inheritance, 'speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me;' and the answer which I respectfully commend to those high in authority is: 'Man who made me a judge or divider over thee.' When the fear of God, when the moral kingdom of righteousness reigns in the hearts of men, then only will the inheritance be divided justly and equitably. Congressional acts and political suffrage will never do it until then. We are all of us full of humanitarism but lacking I think in Christianity. We are tinkering, doctoring, meddling, only too often with outward agencies which we are sure are a great panacea for human ills, while as a matter of fact the great festering sore of social ills is untouched. We are bettering conditions but too often at the expense of a heart and soul untouched. All sorts of agencies are in existence for leading men and women to go to church. I will have nothing to do with any such.

"In my round of calls on parishioners I make it a rule to get better acquainted with people. I do not ask, neither do I urge them to come to church as much as I long for their presence there; grown men and women have consciences, views, opinions all their own. God has laid upon them a solemn responsibility for their own lives. I will help wherever I am asked, wanted or desired, but I will not force myself upon, nor try to use a can't phrase to rescue someone who does not want to be rescued according to my methods of rescue. The policy of non-interference is one that is recognized by parents in the children's world, as well as by nations, it might be well for some of the most zealous of us to confine our activities to the sphere where they are demanded and not to mix or meddle where our efforts may arouse only antagonism.

"The Roman Catholic clergy visit almost solely the sick and needy when sent for and their other visits are most limited. They lose something I think by it, but they gain much. There is no drumming up of people to go to church, but they are taught from childhood their duty in that respect and their omission to attend to that duty is a sin, like any other sin of omission. When you see them go to church you realize that theirs may be the best method after all.

"I know I shall have flung at me by critics 'go not into the by ways and hedges and compel them to come in;' and also to 'go seek and save that which it lost.' But I venture that the going out into the high ways and hedges and compulsion may mean something quite different from any such application and the lost are certainly not among the people in a community where Christianity is lived in the houses even if the members don't attend church. It is a much longer question than any such narrow application would limit it to be. In conclusion don't meddle, don't interfere, mind your own business: as consistently as you can, the seed which is planted let grow; don't pull it up to see if it has proper roots. To your boy or girl leave a large amount of liberty, don't nag, don't force confidences and leave them free to a part of their life where you can't penetrate and parental control is obnoxious and hurtful, rather lay deep as Christ did, the principles and let them work upward and outward to control the life and thus fit itself to the family environment where it finds itself.

"Christ dealt in great truths and principles which should have sway and dominion over the individual man; governmental panaceas. I find no where offered as a solution for human ills.

"I again ask all of you to read a most suggestive article by Hugo Munsteberg in a recent publication, the article being a discussion of temperance in which with sanity and reasonableness the author deals with the principle of non-interference. Again I commend to you in this month's Atlantic Monthly an article entitled: "Education and the Socialistic Movement." It deals succintly with the claims of socialism as a panacea for human ills and at a length impossible for me to quote adequately or incorporate into a sermon.

"The non-thinking or the unthinking are forcing upon us the question of interference and to what extent we are our brothers keepers, and we need to remember when one spoke to the judge of all the world asking Him to be the arbiter, that he refused to make any arbitrary ruling, but he declared a great principle instead. 'Take heed and beware of covetousness.'"

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock when a paper on "Mohammedanism" prepared by Mrs. James Middledith, who will be unable to be present, will be read by Mrs. Robert Lowry. The devotional exercises will be under the direction of Miss May Howlett.

A Baptist mission was opened at Orange yesterday, in the heart of the Italian settlement, and a few doors from the Catholic church, the pastor of which complained a few week ago of alleged proselyting going on among his parishioners. The charges of proselyting are hotly denied by members of the North Orange Baptist church, under whose auspices the mission was established, declaring that they have made no efforts to wean away members from the Roman faith.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINFIELD AND FANWOOD.

The local ball season closed Saturday with the game between the scrub and the representative teams. The scrubs put up a good game but were outclassed, the representatives winning by the score of 6 to 2. Hand and Mooney was the battery for the scrubs; Baldwin and Albert for the regulars.

Enemies of Freeholder John Robison are circulating the report that he was opposed to the macadamizing of Terrill road, whereas he voted for the object and always advocated it. Mr. Robison has made a good freeholder and there is no doubt but that he will be re-elected.

"Our Vows and Their Fulfillment" was the topic of the monthly consecration meeting of the B. Y. P. U., held last night in the church parlors. Mr. A. D. Becken led the meeting.

Mrs. Robert Walpole has returned from Kearny, where she was called on account of the death of her sister, Mrs. Isaac Oliver.

Mrs. Rogers and daughter, Miss Stella, of Brooklyn, spent Saturday with Mrs. Rogers' father, Alvah Ryno, of Front street.

The regular monthly communion was held at the close of the morning sermon at the Baptist church yesterday.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Sr., entertained friends from out of town yesterday.

Mrs. George Stellgen was the guest of friends in Plainfield over Sunday.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Ira D. Sankey memorial service held at the Baptist church last evening was well attended. The pastor, Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, gave a short sketch of the evangelist's life and told the story of each of the singer's favorite hymns before they were sung by the choir. Solos, duets and quartets were beautifully rendered.

Patrick Collins, of Chicago, who has been visiting his relatives here, has decided to make his permanent home in the village, and has taken a situation in Jersey City. He will spend each week end with his family.

Adelbert Tappen, of New Durham, is recovering from his recent illness and was able to drive to the morning service at the Baptist church, yesterday.

Robert Horn visited Mr. H. Mundy at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon and reports that his condition is slightly better.

Sadie and Fourie Randolph are on a visit to their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wyckoff, of Westfield.

Marjorie Voorhees, of Asbury Park, is staying with her aunt, Miss Emma Manning, of Lakeside.

NEWSPAPER PRINTED BY AUTO.

When Publisher's Engine Broke Down Constant Reader Came to the Rescue.

An automobile played an important part Saturday in the publishing of a newspaper at Bloomfield. The engine used to run the press in the office of The Bloomfield Citizen broke down when only a few copies of the paper had been run off. Mechanics were sent for to make hasty repairs, but an inspection of the engine showed that at least twenty-four hours would be required to put it in order.

Abram Day drove up in his automobile just at this time. Learning of the publisher's dilemna he ran his auto to the rear of the printing office, connected the machine with the press by the belting, and thus furnished power enough to run off the edition.

In a brief editorial the publisher assured his readers that he believed he was supplying them with the first newspaper ever run off by an automobile.

CAN'T SELL CANNED SPEECHES.

Edison Company Enjoins Auction of Taft Records.

On an application from the Edison Phonograph Company, a Justice of the Supreme Court Saturday issued an order at Paterson restraining the sale of 1,300 records of William H. Taft's election speeches at a price under the regular rate.

The records and several phonographs were taken in part payment for a house and lot in Rutherford. Mosley & Co., auctioneers of Paterson, had advertised the records for sale when the restraining order was served upon them.

The Edison Company has an agreement with all jobbers that none of their records shall be sold for less than 35 cents. The Mosley Company, it is understood, will return the records to the original owner.

What Becomes of Them?

An old friend informs me that worn-out billiard balls are cut up into dice. Worn-out footballs are hung on walls as relics. Worn-out baseballs fall into the hands of the street urchins, who ultimately tear them apart and play with the rubber insides. Worn-out moth balls are used to keep the tarnish off silver. Worn-out golf balls are lost.—New York Press.

Present Appreciation.

We ought daily or weekly to dedicate a little time to the reckoning up of the virtues of our belongings—wife, children, friends—contemplating them, then, in a beautiful collection. And we should do so now, that we may not pardon and love in vain and too late, after the beloved one has been taken away from us to a better world.—Jean Paul Richter.

Don't Nag.

SEEK LIQUOR DEALERS' AID.

Hudson County Pastors to Ask Them to Vote for T. P. Connolly.

The Rev. John L. Scudder, pastor of the First Congregational church, Jersey City, delivered last night a prelude to his sermon in which he said the ministers of Hudson county were considering the propriety of appealing to the liquor dealers to support Thomas P. Connolly, the Republican candidate for Sheriff.

He said that Mr. Connolly had pledged himself to enforce the Bishops' law and he and other ministers believed that the better class of liquor dealers were in favor of closing on Sunday and would gladly comply with the law if its enforcement could be made uniform.

A Dream.

"I should wake right up," was the unexpected reply.—Circle.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

At the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight will be seen the much heralded European and New York success—"The Devil." The production will be exactly the same as given at the Garden Theatre, New York and is presented by Mr. Alfred E. Aarons through special arrangement with Henry W. Savage. Probably in twenty years New York has not had a dramatic production that created the interest, enthusiasm and comment that this powerful play by Franz Molnar has called forth; and which has accomplished the almost unprecedented feat of packing two theatres nightly.

Andrew Mack, the Irish actor and singer, who will appear at the New Plainfield theatre Thursday night, writes all of his own songs. During the engagement here he will sing for the first time, a new waltz song called "Somewhere." It is regarded as the most tuneful "whistling" number Mr. Mack has ever written.

A production of Harriet Beecher Stowe's famous novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," is always welcome, for it serves to once more recall one of the oldest and most popular of the old southern plays. For many years Al. W. Martin's name has been associated with an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" show until now he has the best and leading production of the kind on the road, which he will present at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night.

Many thrills are promised in the piece, for who cannot remember the "tickling sensation" they experienced when they saw good, old Ebenezer, the Quaker, telling the slave driver a story, while Eliza is escaping through the back door, or of the excitement that prevailed when she was crossing the ice-flooded river with her babe in her arms, pursued by the human vultures of slave-drivers, and gaunt, ugly-looking bloodhounds. Then, again, there is the incident of George Harris' brave stand at the rocky pass and his fight for the safety of his family. Of course these are mere stage incidents, but they never fail to interest. A chorus of twenty dressed and blacked to represent the plantation darkies of long ago, render many beautiful songs and participate in the old plantation pastimes, and the various scenes invariably please the eye, particularly the grand transformation scene in the last act, showing little Eva, on a high pedestal clothed in the garments of Divinity; surrounded by a halo of beautiful lights, with Uncle Tom kneeling at her feet. This is a beautiful and striking tableau and each season sees more perfection in the light effects.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Money is the sugar that sweetens matrimony.

Most lazy men blame it on a lack of opportunities.

After acquiring a business of your own learn to attend to it.

A mirror, unlike some people, never forces its reflections upon us.

It's the unexpected that happens when a man makes a fool of himself.

What puzzles some people is how some of their acquaintances make a living.

Few people are capable of appreciating a great work of art or a great man.

If a man doesn't flatter a woman she imagines that it is because he doesn't understand her.

How a man does dislike to meet people who persist in recalling incidents that he is anxious to forget!

Once in a great while a woman can succeed in reforming a man, provided she doesn't let him know she is trying.

At last we have discovered the difference. The clothes of a stylish man are shaped to him; while a stylish woman is shaped to her clothes.—Chicago News.

Yawning and Exercise.

The next time a bore drives you to yawns, instead of biting your lips off or carefully adorning your face with your hand, cease to be apologetic and say boldly: "I am practising the new nerve cure!"

Formerly we thought we yawned because of nerves; now we yawn to cure them. Rudely stretch and yawn for fifteen minutes at a time, it will empty your brain, rest your body and is generally relaxing.

Raising both arms while you open your mouth is the approved method of taking this latest nerve rest.

A Gentle Hint.

"Are you 'Boots?'" blustered the big Londoner in the American hotel.

"Nope," replied the bellboy, "They call be 'Scales.'"

The Londoner seemed mystified.

"Scales, eh? That's a blooming queer name. What do they call you 'Scales' for?"

"Because I get tipped so often. That's the reason, boss."—Chicago News.

Lifelong Lesson.

"It takes a baby mos' two years to learn to talk," said Uncle Eben, "an' den it takes de res' of its lifetime to learn to keep f'um talkin' too much."—Washington Star.

THEFT THAT HE COULDN'T DENY.

Story of Boyhood Days That Came Out in Court.

The attorney for the defense looked keenly at the witness who was testifying for the prosecution. "Your name, if I understand you correctly," he said, "is Horace Hinsey. Is that right?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever live at Nashua?"

"Yes, sir."

"And in Wilmington before that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Mr. Hinsey, have you ever been arrested on a criminal charge?"

"No, sir!" indignantly answered the witness. "Never."

"Did you ever commit an offense for which you might have been arrested?"

"Never, sir."

"Mr. Hinsey, is it not a fact that you once stole from your own father?"

Here the attorney for the prosecution interrupted, but the witness chose to answer.

"No, sir!" he exclaimed. "Never in my life!"

"Now, Mr. Hinsey," said the lawyer, "suppose I should tell you that I know of a case when you did steal from your father."

Instantly the witness' brow cleared.

"Gentlemen," he said, turning to the jury, "he's right. I remember now. When I was about eight years old I stole half a dozen eggs from my father's grocery store, took them down under the bank of the creek, cooked them and helped eat them. This lawyer, who was a boy then, not only helped me steal those eggs, but put me up to stealing them. How are you, Jim?"

The judge and jury joined in the laugh that followed and the rest of the examination was conducted on more friendly lines.—Youth's Companion.

WAS THE BURGLAR'S UNDOING.

Marauder Stepped on Squeaky Board, and the Rest Was Easy.

At the top of the stairway in the Grigson dwelling there was a board that emitted a loud creak whenever anybody stepped on it. Mr. Grigson was always intending to "have the thing fixed," but never did it, and by common consent the members of the family usually stepped over it, particularly when the head of the family had gone to bed.

One night, very late, just as Mr. Grigson was dropping off to sleep, somebody stepped on that board, and it gave forth its customary loud protest.

"There you go again!" he angrily called out. "That's you this time, John! Pretty time of night for you to be getting to bed!"

John, the eldest son, made no response, but instead there was a rush and a jump down the stairs that brought the whole household into the hall just in time to hear the front door slam. A hurried investigation disclosed a bag of valuables which a frightened burglar had left.

The board still squeaks.—Youth's Companion.

A True Story.

"On my travels in Venezuela," said a New York man, "I stayed in a hotel with a young man in whose family there was the taint of leprosy, though he apparently did not have it. One night sitting at dinner he became angry at a waiter and brought his hand down on the table with full force. He instantly realized that he did not feel the blow, and sat looking at his hand, his face whitening with horror. 'Give me your knife, Bob,' he said to his chum. He grabbed the pocket knife in a frenzy and stabbed the side of his hand with vicious cuts from finger tip to wrist. You may not know that leprosy appears in the side of the hand, numbness being a sign. The man did not feel the cuts. He arose from the table, knocking over his chair, rushed out into the courtyard of the hotel, and we heard the quick tang of a revolver shot, telling us how he had conquered the leper's curse by ending his life."

Got His Sizes Mixed.

"Aye, fellow citizens!" thundered the orator, shaking his hairy fist at the zenith; "peace and prosperity will come again to our beloved land when with a firm purpose we rise in our might and crush the trust microbe—"

"Microbe!" interrupted a spectacled man with an expansive forehead. "I beg pardon, but did you not refer to it a few moments ago as a boa constrictor?"

A husky bouncer fired the rude person bodily out of the hall, and the eloquent orator resumed his speech.

A Watch Tip.

"So you lost your watch in the crush on the Atlantic City boardwalk, eh?" the detective sneered. "Well, I'm ashamed of you. You ought to know, after your long friendship with me, that there's only one safe way for a man to carry a costly watch—in the right-hand vest pocket, with the chain running into the right and left pocket both. The thief always snatches at the left pocket, and, of course, by my system, he gets only a key or a cheap compass."

To All Intents.

"Housekeeping is a circus, and I can prove it," said the man who makes his living compiling facts. Read this in the abridged dictionary:

"'Menage: Housekeeping; household affairs and administration; domestic economy; training of animals, as of horses; a collection of animals for exhibition; a menagerie.'"

LIBRARIAN SPOFFORD AND HIS WONDERFUL MEMORY.

I read in the Herald, the other day, an account of the wonderful memory of the late Ainsworth R. Spofford, the Librarian of Congress. May I add to this article, writes a contributor to the Boston Herald, an experience of my own with this remarkable man?

About twenty years ago, after the death of my father, the Rev. Richard Newton, D. D., I had occasion to go to Washington to get a list of the title pages of his twelve volumes for a copyright for a new edition of his works. Going to the Congression Library I discovered Mr. Spofford sitting among some decayed volumes, mending the covers with mucilage and a large glue pot. He looked like Hans Sacks in Wagner's famous opera. Telling him my errand he remarked, "Which one of Dr. Newton's boys are you, R. Heber or William Wilberforce?" I told him who I was and then inquired where I could find the twelve volumes whose title pages I had come to verify.

"Do you see that spiral staircase over yonder?" inquired Mr. Spofford. I said "Yes, sir." "Well," he replied, "go up two flights on that staircase, go to the end bookshelf against the wall on your left; go all the way down the alley; go to the thirteenth shelf from the door, and at the tenth volume from the shelf's end where the window is you will find all your father's books, beginning with 'Rills from the Fountain of Life.'"

I put those items down on paper, thinking the librarian was having a little fun at my expense. Going to the place indicated on my table of directions, however, I discovered the twelve volumes just at the spot marked on my card. I never came across a human being with such a memory. He was like a mechanical calculating machine.

SOME GEMS FROM THE SCHOOLS OF BOMBAY.

The art of producing examination "howlers" is one of those which the Oriental has learned without difficulty. A paper on "Unconscious Humor," published in a Bombay magazine, gives a few perpetrated by candidates in the Bombay matriculation examination of 1906. Here are one or two:

Chicken is the diminutive of child.

Vixen in Old English was the plural of fox, now it is used for an unmarried woman.

The termination—en in oxen shows that a man has passed his certain examination of the University of Oxford.

WHAT ONE WOMAN DID.

A group of mothers were lamenting about the carelessness of children and men in eating, and the drain these hard times of big laundry bills.

"My family scarcely spot the cloth any more," laughted one of the mothers. "They find it too expensive! I used to have a tablecloth a day in the wash and then could scarcely keep them respectable looking.

"The laundry bills were huge, as my one girl could not possibly do them at home, and the wear and tear on the linen was as bad.

"Finally I hit on the plan of making each member who made a spot cover it with money, pennies for the children from their own allowance and silver for the grownups.

"We voted what to do with the money. I was for the hospital, but the rest preferred to devote it to something for the table, so we started a fund to buy new table linen and china. For the first month or so we had a flourishing bank, but now all have grown so careful that our fund grows slowly."

It is to be hoped that for the moment at least, we are getting away from the odious fashion of decorating our persons with dead bodies, eyes and claws complete, the death agony being the only thing left to the imagination, says a humane woman. I remember distinctly a few months ago being completely put out of countenance for a whole hour by the glassy and somewhat ironic stare of a large parrot on the hat of a lady sitting immediately before me. There was something so personal in it as to make it an unpleasant recollection.

When they had turned into the road he spoke again to Carter. "Ye were sayin', Ned, there was a guy in the ould stan'."

"Yes," replied Carter; "somebody was toutin' us off. A board broke, an' that frightened the boss' mount."

"I t'ought I see a b'y skinnin' off the track," commented Gaynor. "First I t'ought it was Shandy, but what'd he be doin' there? Did ye see his face, Ned?"

"I was too busy takin' a wrap on Lucretia; she was gettin' a bit out of hand."

Mrs. Porter saw the slow-moving conveyance crawling up the broad drive, and instinctively felt that again something terrible had occurred. That Allis was not there added to her fear.

Her face was white, and in her eyes was the horror of a great fear, but from her lips came no cry; her silence was more dreadful than if she had called out.

"We'll carry him, ma'am," Mike said, as she came down the steps to the buggy, and clutching the wheel rim, swayed unsteadily. "Jest git a bed ready, Misses." Gaynor continued, softly; "git a bed ready, an' he'll be all roight afther a bit. He's just stunned; that's all—just stunned!"

"Let me help," pleaded Mrs. Porter, speaking for the first time.

"We'll carry him, Misses—he's just stunned," repeated Mike in a dreary monotone. He and Carter bore the still senseless form into the house. The wife had got one of the battered hands between her own, and was walking with wide, dry, staring eyes close to her husband.

"Oh, John, John! speak to me. Open your eyes and look at me. You're not dead; O God; you're not dead!" she cried, passionately, breaking down, and a pent-up flood of tears coming to the hot, dry eyes as the two men laid Porter on the bed that Cynthia had made ready.

"There, misses, don't take on now," pleaded Mike. "The boss is jest stunned; that's all. I've been that way a dozen toimes meself," he added, by way of assurance. "Where's the brandy? Lift his head, Ned; not so much. See," he cried, exultantly, as the strong liquor caused the eyelids to quiver; see, misses, he's all roight; he's jest stunned; that's all. There's the dochtor now. God bless the little woman! She wasn't long!"

The sound of wheels crunching the gravel, with a sudden stop at the porch, had come to their ears.

"Come out av the room, ma'am," Mike besought Mrs. Porter; "come out av the room, and lave the dochtor bring the boss 'round."

"Ah, a fall, eh," commented Dr. Rathbone, cheerily, coming briskly into the room. Then he caught Mike's eye; it closed deliberately, and the Irishman's head tipped never so slightly toward Mrs. Porter.

"Now, 'clear the room,' as they say in court," continued the doctor, with a smile, understanding Mike's signal. "We mustn't have people about to agitate Porter when he comes to his senses. Perhaps you'd better wait, too, Gaynor. Just take care of your mother, Miss Allis. I'll have your father about in a jiffy."

It seemed a million years to the wife that she waited for the doctor's outcoming. Twice she cried in anguish to Allis that she must go in; must see her husband. "He may die," she pleaded, "and I may never see his eyes again." Once Mike came out and said: "He's jest stunned, ma'am. The dochtor says he'll be all roight by an' by."

There was another long wait, then Dr. Rathbone appeared.

"Porter will be all right, madam, it'll take time; it'll take time—and nursing. But you're getting used to that," he added, with a smile, "but—" and he looked fixedly at Allis, "he must have quiet; excitement will do more harm than the fall."

XIV.

After Dr. Rathbone had left Mike and Carter went down to the stables.

"I'll jest have a look at that broke rein," said Gaynor; "that sthrap, was strong enough to hang Diablo. If there's not some dirty business in this, I'll eat me hat. T'umbs up! but it was a gallop, though. The black kin move whin he wants to."

"But what do you think of old Lauzanne?" exclaimed Carter. "He just wore Diablo down, hung to him like a bulldog, an' beat him out."

"It was the girl's ridin'; an' Lauzanne was feared, too. He's chicken-hearted; that's what he is. Some day in a race he'll get away in front av his horses, an' beat 'em by the length av a street. He'll be a hun'red to wan, an' nobody'll have a penny on."

When they arrived at the stable Mike headed straight for the harness room. He put his hand on Diable's headgear, and bringing it down carried it through the passage to the stable door, where he examined it minutely.

"Just what I t'ought. Look at that," and he handed it to Carter for inspection.

"The rein's been cut near through," replied Carter. "I wonder it held as long as it did."

"A dirty, low-down trick," commented Mike. "I'll hang it back on the peg just now, but don't use it again fer a bit."

As he reentered the saddle room briskly his heel slipped on the plank floor, bringing him down. "I'd take me oath that was a banana peel, if it was on the sidewalk," he exclaimed, after a gymnastic twist that nearly dislocated his neck. "Some of ye fellows is pretty careless wit' hoof grease, I'm thinkin'."

More out of curiosity than anything else he peered down at the cause of his sudden slip. "What the divil is it onyway?" he muttered, kneeling and lighting a match, which he held close to the spot. "Bot' t'umbs!" he exclaimed, "it's candle grease. Have aither of ye b'ys been in here wit' a candle? It's agin the rules."

"There isn't a candle about the barn, an' you know it, Mike!" cried Carter, indignantly.

Mike was prospecting the floor with another light.

"Here's two burnt matches," he continued, picking them up. "An' they were loighted last night, too. See that, they're long, an' that means that they wasn't used for lightin' a pipe or a cigar—jest fer touchin' off a candle, that's all. I know they was loighted last night," he said, as though to convince himself, "fer they're fresh, an' ain't been tramped on. This wan didn't light at all hardly, an' there's a little wool fuzz stickin' to it. Gee! that manes some wan struck it on his wool pants. Git the lantern, Ned, p'raps we'll fin' out somethin' more. The light from that high up winder ain't good enough fer trackin' a bear."

When the lantern was brought, Mike continued his detective operations, nose and eyes close to the floor.

"What's that, Ned?" he asked, pointing his finger at a dark brown spot on the boards.

Carter crouched and scrutinized Mike's find. "Tobacco spit."

"Roight you are; that's what it is. Now, who chaws tobaccie in this stable?" he demanded of Carter.

"I don't."

"Does Finn?"

"No; I don't think so."

"Didn't Shandy always have a gob of it in his cheek—the dirty pig?"

"Yes, he did, Mike."

"I t'ought so; I t'ought it was that blackguard. But how did the swine get in here? The stable was locked, an' I had the key in me pocket."

Carter took his cap off, ran a hand reflectively up and down the crown of his head. Suddenly he replaced his cap and whistled softly. "I know, Mike; he crawled through the dung window. I've seen him do it half a dozen times. When he was too lazy to go for the keys, he'd wriggle through that hole."

Mike said nothing, but led the way to the back of the sable. There he climbed up the pile of rotting straw, and examined closely the small, square opening, with its board slide.

"Good! I t'ought so!" he ejaculated: "Here's more tobacco spit."

Looking down, his eye caught the glint of something bright deep in the straw. He dug his hand down in the mass and brought up a knife.

Carter looked at it closely. "Shanday's," he answered; I'll swear to that. I've borrowed it from him more than once to clean out the horses' hoofs."

"Bot' t'umbs up! I'd hang that b'y to a beam if I had him here. He cut that rein as sure as God made little apples," declared Mike, vehemently. "An' the gall av him to go an' sit there in the ould stand to watch the black run away wit' somewan an' kill 'em. Now jest kape yer mouth shut, Ned, an' we'll put a halter on this rooster. By Hivins! whin I git him I'll make him squale, too!"

XV.

The seriousness of Porter's accident became clearer to Dr. Rathbone the following day. He imparted this information to Allis; told her that in all probability it would be weeks before her father would be strong again.

"In the meantime, little woman, what are you going to do with these hungry horses on your hands?" he asked.

The girl's answer came quickly enough, for she had lain awake through all the dreary night, thinking out this problem.

"I'll look after them," she answered the doctor, quite simply.

A smile of skepticism hovered about his full lips, as he raised his eyes to the girl's face, but the look of determination, of confidence that he met put his doubts to flight. "I believe you can do it, if any man can," and he put his big hand on her slight shoulders, as much as to say: "I'm behind you; I believe in you."

The first thing to be done was to get rid of Diablo. Mrs. Porter was too gentle to ask that he be shot, but he must go, even if he be given away. She would willingly have sacrificed all the horses. Always with their presence had come financial troubles, spiritual troubles; now the lives of those dear to her were in actual peril.

In her depression she somewhat startled Allis by insisting that they must send for Mr. Crane at once. After all, it was not so unreasonable; with the master of Ringwood helpless, who else could they consult with over their entangled condition? For the past year Porter had found it necessary to keep in constant touch with the bank; so they must become familiar with the with the details of the entanglement.

Mrs. Porter had come to have the utmost confidence in Crane's friendship and ability; he was the one above all others to have Diablo taken off their hands. So Philip Crane, to his intense delight, was summoned to Ringwood.

The matter of Diablo was settled in a minute; he would buy the horse himself, and the price could be arranged when Mrs. Porter was able to disucss the matter; in the meantime he would pay a thousand for him. He understood Porter had bought him for that price. With a touch of kindly humor, Crane declared that he would have a small bet on the horse for Allis the first time he started.

Beyond parting with Diablo, Allis would not go farther in the matter of selling the horses. Had she known that her father had entered Diablo in the Brooklyn handicap she might even have refused to part with the horse. As it happened, Porter had entered both Lucretia and Diablo in the Brooklyn a day or so before his accident.

Crane assured Mrs. Porter that she need not distract her mind over money matters, the bank could easily carry their load until her husband was himself again.

Crane had meant to defer any protestation of regard for Allis until a propitious future, but with his quick perception he saw the psychological moment had been moved forward by the sudden effacement of the master of Ringwood. If he spoke now to Mrs. Porter it would give her a right to call upon his services. He would appear in the light of a debtor; it would break down barriers which might seem to exist because of their nonrelationship.

So the banker spoke to Mrs. Porter of his strong love for Allis; so delicately, and with so much sincerity that she was completely won over. Though strong in spiritual matters, the good woman was not without worldly instinct. She was pleased with Crane personally; he was not by any means a racing man; a rich banker, who would make a most desirable husband for her daughter. Of course, it would rest with the girl herself. Mrs. Porter would not coerce her.

To the mother's suggestion that he speak to Allis he put forward a plea of delicate consideration for the girl; he would rather deny himself; he would wait patiently until her mind was in a happier condition. Cleverly enough he knew that Mrs. Porter was now his ally, and would plead his cause with less chance of failure than if he startled Allis by the sudden fronting of life's great problem.

Almost immediately Mrs. Porter transmitted to the girl what had come to her of Crane's declaration.

"It seems almost like an answer to my prayer," she said to Allis; "not, of course"—she interrupted herself—"that I've been praying for a husband for you, but this wicked racing has warped my life; it seemed inevitable in the strength of its contaminating atmosphere that you would be wedded into it."

"Then you've settled it, mother!" Allis' big eyes took on a dangerous look of rebellion.

"No, daughter; you must choose for yourself; only you will be wise not to go contrary to your parent's wishes. I did—"

"But you are not sorry, mother?" there was reproach in the girl's voice.

"Not for having wedded your father, but because of his racing life. I should have been firmer, and asked him to give it up before I married him. He might have done it then. Mr. Crane is a gentleman, Allis; and he loves you most sincerely. Words often mean very little, but one can tell from a man's voice whether he is in earnest or not. I suppose it is very worldly to speak of his riches, but in poverty one can do very little, very little good. The dread of poverty is a nightmare; it wears one's life threadbare. To the young, buoyed up by confidence in the rosy future, this may seem sordid, but this feeling of insecurity mars many lives which might otherwise be happy.

"You see, Allis," her mother continued, "I know you are heart whole, so I can't cause you any misery by my well-meant advice. Mr. Mortimer is, I dare say, a gentleman, and I must confess I was afraid that you might mistake a feeling of generosity to him for something stronger; but that was only an idle fancy, I see. It would have been unfortunate if it were otherwise, for he is very poor indeed. His small salary must be all taken up in keeping himself, his widowed mother and a younger sister."

Allis gave a sudden start. She had not known these particulars of Mortimer's life; but they carried certain explanations of his conduct. Quite casually she had formed an impression that he was penurious. Unwittingly her mother was pleading the cause of two men.

"I wouldn't have spoken to you of this matter while your father is so ill if it weren't for the fact that our position is very precarious. I can't understand just how badly off we are, but if anything were to happen your father, I hardly know what would become of us."

"And Mr. Crane has promised to help us if—if—" There was a hard ring in the girl's voice as she spoke.

"There is no 'if' about it, daughter. Mr. Crane is our friend, your father's friend, and he is going to help us; and he only spoke of his regard for you by way of an excuse—it was delicacy on his part, thinking that I would have less compunction in accepting his good offices. All I ask, girl, is that you will try to like Mr. Crane; if you can't, well, you won't find me making you unhappy. But I can tell you this, Allis, unless matters mend, and how the change is to come I can't say, your father will lose Ringwood and it will belong to Mr. Crane. Even if the horses were sold off, the money would not clear the debts; besides, I think even the horses are encumbered."

Allis stood in indecision for a little, thinking deeply; then she went up to her mother and, taking her face in her hands, kissed her.

"I understand, mother," she said, "you are worrying over the dear old place, over my future, and over father, and it is nothing but worry, worry, worry all the time. But I'll save Ringwood for you, mother. I hope father will soon be well again and that luck will change, but anyway, mother, I promise you that no matter what effort it costs me you shan't sacrifice the dear old place."

XVI.

Journeying back to New York, Crane reviewed in detail his interview with Mrs. Porter. He congratulated himself upon his wisdom in having instituted his love suit by proxy. With all his masterfulness he was very considerably in awe of Miss Allis. But he had made great progress with the mother, the one above all others to be placated; adversity, continuous as it promised to be, would probably settle Porter's influence in his favor. His plan of action plainly was to be often at Ringwood to familiarize the household with his presence. The acquiring of Diablo would facilitate that.

Diablo—a skate. He laughed to himself over his purchase. Certainly Langdon would laugh at him, too. What an influence this girl had over him, to be sure! Any man who had endeavored to sell him a bad horse would have had a hopeless task; with but a nod of encouragement from Allis he would have bought every horse—all the useless crooks they had; the stable was full of them, Lauzanne among the rest.

On his arrival in New York he sent for his trainer.

"I bought a horse at Ringwood. I want you to look after him, Langdon," he said. "Their man, Gaynor, will send him direct to your stables."

The trainer's face brightened. "Did you get Lucretia, after all?"

"No, I bought a big black, Diablo."

The look of delight faded from Langdon's eyes quickly. "The devil!" he exclaimed.

"That's what I said; that's his name."

"But he's the most uncertain brute that ever wore a set of plates. You'll get no good of him, sir; he's bad clean through. It's come down to him from his second sire, Robert the Devil, without a bit of the good, either. He'd break a man that would follow him."

"He won't break me," answered Crane, quietly; "nor you, either, Langdon—you've got too much sense."

This subtle tribute mollified the trainer.

Crane proceeded: "I remember the horse quite well. Four thousand was paid for him as a yearling; as a two-year-old he was tried out good enough to win the Futurity; but when it came to racing he cut it and finished in the ruck."

Langdon had the highest possible opinion of his master's astuteness and began to waver in his antipathy to Diablo.

"You think he's really good, then, sir; did he show you a fast trial?"

"I didn't even see the horse," Crane answered, looking dreamily out of the window. "I bought him to—"

He paused in reflection; he couldn't tell Langdon why he bought him. He continued, shifting the subject-matter a trifle. "You did John Porter up over Lauzanne last summer, Langdon—"

"Me?" questioned the trainer. Was Crane forgetting his share in the matter?

"Yes, you!" affirmed the other, looking him steadily in the eye. "You sold him Lauzanne, and Lauzanne was loaded."

Langdon said nothing. What the devil was coming?

"Well," drawled Crane, "Porter's badly hurt; he's out of the race for some time to come. They're friends of mine. I offered to buy Lauzanne back, just to help them out; but the old man's daughter has got the chestnut for a hack and she won't sell him. It was Diablo's fault that Porter got the fall, so they were willing to part with him, and I took the brute."

This was certainly a new role for Crane to play, Langdon thought; his employer helping people out when they were in difficulties was a revelation. The trainer felt inclined to laugh. No doubt there was something back of it all; some tout must have given Crane information of a fast gallop Diablo had done. Langdon tried to remember what Shandy had said about Diablo, or whether the boy had mentioned his name at all.

"I wonder what condition he's in?" the trainer remarked, questioningly.

"Physically I think he's all right; it seems he galloped something under forty miles with Porter before he came a cropper. But I understand they had an imp of a boy, Sheedy, or Shaney—" "Shandy," corrected Langdon.

"Yes, that's the name," affirmed Crane, drawing a semicircle in the air with his cigar, "and he's a devil on wheels, by all accounts. Diablo's no angel, as you've said, Langdon, and this boy made him a heap worse. You've handled some bad horses in your time, and know more about it than I do; but I'd suggest that you put Wesley—he's a patient lad—to look after the black; give him quite a bit of work, and when you've got him right, try him out with something, and if he shows any form we'll pick out a soft spot for him. Let me see, he's a maiden—fancy that, buying a four-year-old maiden!"

Langdon laughed approvingly. Crane was evidently coming back to his view of the case.

"Well, as I've said, he's a maiden, and we'll try and graduate him out of that class. It will be a great chance for a killing if we can round him into his early two-year-old form; and you can do it, Langdon, if anybody on earth can."

"Now I've got him on his reputation," thought Crane, idly brushing specks of cigar ashes from the front of his coat.

"Just as I thought," mused Langdon; "the old man's got a horse after his own heart. Everybody thinks Diablo's no good, but the boss has found out something, and is on for the biggest kind of a coup."

"How's The Dutchman coming on?" asked Crane, intimating by the question that the subject of Diablo had been closed out, for the present, at least.

ELEVEN INNINGS AND TIE

New Brunswick and Clinton Avenue Teams in an Exciting Contest.

MIDDLESEX NINE GETS SCRAPPY

Captain Nolan Takes His Men from Field but Later Resumes Game—The Contest In Detail.

Captain Nolan and his scrappy bunch of ball players from New Brunswick came to Plainfield Saturday afternoon determined to defeat the Clinton Avenues by hook or crook. Although the locals failed to get away with the game, they played their opponents to a standstill and the contest had to be called at the end of the eleventh inning with a tie score, 3 to 3.

The contest was marked from beginning to end by kicking on the part of New Brunswick, and in the last half of the fourth inning, the aggregation from along the Raritan river threatened to go home because Umpire Moynihan allowed Schott to take his base for being hit by a pitched ball. They left the diamond and said they would not continue the game. After a half hour's delay Captain Nolan took his men back to the field, not wishing to lose the guarantee.

The visitors resorted to all sorts of tactics to win. In the third inning Nolan deliberately walked into a pitched ball and got his base. This trick combined with a hit, a free pass and a bum throw by Randolph, in trying to catch a runner at third base, gave New Brunswick her only three runs. For ten innings they were blanked and finding it impossible to connect with Randolph and to overcome the fine playing of the locals, they started into to scrap. Every few minutes they threatened to leave the grounds, but finally were persuaded to stay until the end of the eleventh inning when it was so dark that the game had to be called.

Clinton Avenue scored one run in the third, one in the fifth and again in the eighth and in the tenth they almost got a man over the plate, but the necessary hit was missing. A young man called Rowland, who sometimes pitches under the name of Masterson, and who has the reputation of being a Princeton student, occupied the slab for New Brunswick, and despite his deceptive curves, he was touched for twelve hits. But they were of the scattering sort. He used an underhand ball that worked fine and he had his opponents chopping the air in painful fashion.

Randolph was right there with the goods, however, and he pitched a strong game throughout, and should have had a victory by a score of 3 to 0. He fanned nineteen men and held his opponents to six hits. Rowland or Masterson had sixteen strikeouts to his credit. With the exception of the third inning, a bad one for Clinton Avenue, Manager Dorflinger's colts outplayed their opponents. Umpire Moynihan's work which has heretofore been satisfactory, was a factor. He was decidedly off on several decisions. A ball that was clearly a foul, he called fair, and on balls and strikes his hitherto keen eye was lacking. Most of the close decisions favored New Brunswick.

Emery, Jack Martin, Boelzley and Randolph led in the hitting, the four players getting a total of nine hits. For New Brunswick Harkins, son of the only John Harkins, of Somerville fame, led his team in batting, touching Randolph for three hits, including a three and two bagger. Van Vechten got two hits, including a two bagger, while Nolan got the other hit. Despite the constant kicking on the part of New Brunswick, the contest was one of the best witnessed on the local diamond.

Another dispute on the part of New Brunswick occurred in the seventh inning when W. O'Rourke, another past master in the art of kicking, took first base on a third bunt strike, and insisted on holding the base until Captain Nilan ordered him off. This caused another delay of fifteen minutes. The score:

Somerville Wins 2 to 1.

The West Ends, of Somerville, defeated Bound Brook, at Somerville, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 2 to 1, in a well-played an exciting contest that was witnessed by 1,200 people. Phil. Smith and Jimmie Montross both pitched fine ball, the home team having a little the advantage. Each team has now won a game and the deciding contest will be played Saturday.

Women's One-Day Tournament.

The women golfers of the Metropolitan district will hold another one-day tournament at the Plainfield Country Club, on Wednesday. It is expected that a large number of women from the various clubs in the district will engage in the play. At the last one-day tournament held at Hackensack, Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, of the Plainfield Country Club, won the event.

LARGEST FIELD YET ON THE P.C.C. COURSE

The largest field of the season was out at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday afternoon, and many took part in the weekly play for the Fall Handicap cups, for Classes A and B. Although many competed for honors, only a limited few posted their scores. The course was well crowded throughout the day, the weather being ideal for the game and the links were in fine condition.

In Class A, Arthur Murphy won the first three points with a net score of 75, while E. T. Willson finished second with a 79 and S. D. Lounsbury third with an 80. The Class B players returned good scores, LeRoy Gates finishing first with a net score of 84, A. E. Barclay, second with an 86 and W. F. Merrill third with a 92. The cards returned by the point-winners were as follows:

Class A—Arthur Murphy, 84, 9-75; E. T. Willson, 93, 14-79; S. D. Lounsbury, 89, 9-80.

Class B—LeRoy Gates, 111, 27-84; A. E. Barclay, 107, 22-86; W. F. Merrill, 115, 23-92.

SATURDAY COMPETITIONS AT THE PARK GOLF CLUB

Ideal weather conditions attracted a large field of players to the Park Golf club, Saturday, when the play for the challenge trophies and the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club cups were the attraction. In the play for trophy number two, W. R. Faber, holder, defeated Charles B. Morse, challenger, by 3 up and 2 to play, and for the Hydewood Park cup, W. V. Gano, challenger, defeated W. C. McNaughton, holder, by 4 up and 3 to play.

In the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club trophies, these scores were posted:

W. E. Lough, 103, 15-88; W. V. Byard, 100 11-89; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 92, 2-90; Louis K. Hyde, 102, 9-93; W. R. Faber, 98, 5-93; Charles A. Reed, 99, 4-95; Charles B. Morse, 109, 12-97; W. V. Gano, 97, 0-97; E. L. Suffern, 133, 30-103; Walter C. McNaughton, 111, 6-105.

TROJAN ATHLETIC CLUB DEFEATS DUNELLEN A. C.

The Dunellen A. C. football team, who last season won the championship of Middlesex county, was defeated at Elizabeth, Saturday, by the Trojan Athletic Club. The final score was 2 to 0, the result of a safety in the last three minutes of play. The Trojans were outweighed fifteen pounds to a man and Dunellen was conceded an easy victory before the game began, but the spectators had failed to take into consideration the gameness and pluck of which the Elizabeth players were possessed.

The first half ended with the ball in the Trojans possession on the thirty-five yard. The Trojans earned their victory through straight old-fashioned football tactics, without any forward passes or trick plays of any kind. The elevens lined up as follows:

Bound Brook Eleven Defeated.

At Bound Brook, Saturday, the home club was beaten in a league cricket game by the Union county eleven, 70 to 32. S. Pearson's 11 was the best score made by Bound Brook. For Elizabeth, James Larnette got 18 and R. Goddard 16. In bowling E. F. Goddard took five wickets for 9 runs and A. H. Gibson four for 7. On Saturday a postponed game will be played between these teams at Waverly.

Plainfield Soccer Team Defeated.

The Plainfield Soccer Club was defeated by the New Brunswick eleven at the latter place, Saturday afternoon by a score of 1 to 0. At the end of the first half neither side had scored, but in the first ten minutes of play in the second half, New Brunswick kicked a goal and this was sufficient to win the game, which was considered the best witnessed on the home grounds.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Republicans of Montclair are planning a big rally to be held in the Montclair Club hall on Thursday evening, October 15. Governor Fort and Colonel Joseph L. Barbour, of Connecticut, will be the chief speakers at the rally.

The nomination for Congress in this State have been completed, with no changes of real importance. The renomination of Mr. Fowler in the Union county district will be unpopular and he may be defeated.—Newark Call.

Chairman James R. Nugent, of the State Democratic committee, has been officially informed through national headquarters that William Jennings Bryan will spend two days in this State during the week of October 19, appearing at Trenton, in Jersey City, Hoboken, Elizabeth, Paterson, Phillipsburg and Washington, and as many other places as possible while en route.

John W. Kern, the Vice-Presidential nominee, will address a meeting to be held in the Kreuger Auditorium, Newark, some day next week, and is also scheduled to appear in Paterson and Jersey City during the same week.

Resolutions were adopted at the all-day session of the executive committee of the State Federation of Labor at Newark yesterday that in view of the continued bitter opposition and antagonism of R. Wayne Parker, of the Seventh Congressional district, to labor legislation, nothing be left undone to bring about his defeat at the coming election.

PERSONAL.

Miss Onderdonk, of Philadelphia, is stopping for a time at Truell Inn.

Russell Johnson, of New York, spent Sunday with his brother, Andrew W. Johnson, of Duer street.

Paul Scarborough, who has charge of a school in New York, spent Sunday at the home of his parents on Mountain avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sweeney, of Trenton, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Sweeney's mother, Mrs. M. Sweeney, of Liberty street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Little, and daughter, Miss Little, of Sandford avenue, have returned home from a pleasant visit of three weeks in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ball, of Sycamore avenue, have removed to Summit, where Mr. Ball is in the employ of the Commonwealth Water and Light Company.

Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson and his daughter, Miss Marguerite Johnson, of New Brunswick, were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue.

Miss Elizabeth McGee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, of Rockview avenue, left today for the Ingleside boarding school at Farmington, Mass., where she will be a student.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hopler, of East Fifth street, were agreeably surprised yesterday by a party of friends. They included Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Johnson, Mrs. F. Day and Mrs. Smith, all of Newark.

The steamship Cedric that arrived in New York at the week end, had among its passengers Mr. and Mrs. James F. Parker, of Grove street, and Frederick Harrington and his daughter, Miss Helen Harrington, of Rockview terrace. The latter has been in Europe since the spring.

NINETY-SIX CONVERTS.

Confirmation by Bishop O'Connor at Newark Church.

Bishop John J. O'Connor administered the sacrament of confirmation to ninety-six converts, men and women, in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church at Newark yesterday afternoon. He was assisted in the services by the Rev. Charles Smith, chancellor of the Diocese of Newark. The candidates for confirmation were given instruction in Catholic doctrine by the Fathers of the New York Apostolate for two or three weeks, studied the catechism and had the Catholic baptism, confession and communion explained to them.

After the candidates said they understood all that had been explained to them, including the solemn and sacred service of the mass, and that they desired to become members of the Roman Catholic church, they were baptized after which they went to confession, and yesterday morning received communion at an early mass. After they were confirmed Bishop O'Connor welcomed them into the mother church and he gave them his blessing.

CALL REV. MR. TOWNSEND

Minister-in-Charge Becomes First Rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest on Clinton avenue, which was established as a mission at a meeting held in the parlor of a private residence in 1877, held its first service last Sunday as a self-supporting parish, with Rev. Charles Townsend as rector. Although the members of the parish have been working earnestly for thirty-one years to attain this end, it was largely through the ministrations of Mr. Townsend, who was the officiating priest up to the first of June of this year, that it was accomplished.

Prior to his work of last fall to engage in other work in another State, which work he recently undertook, Mr. Townsend realized that the parish work was of such importance and as he had made many friends here, he was prevailed to accept a call as rector which the congregation extended and he accepted.

This action places the parish beyond the jurisdiction of the Associate Mission of Trenton, which has heretofore supplied the ministers for the church. The congregation on Sunday was a large one and extended a hearty welcome to the rector.

On Thursday night a reception will be tendered to him in the parish house. Prior to coming to Plainfield Mr. Townsend was attached to The Associate Mission of Trenton.

NEW PRIMARY SCHOOL BLDG. TO COST $55,000

Announcement was made at last night's meeting of the Board of Education that steps have been taken to erect a new primary school building in the West End to cost $55,000. The site has already been purchased at a figure said to be $7,500 and the Board of School Estimate will be asked to provide the necessary funds at once in order that the work of construction may be commenced by early spring. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy late in the fall of 1909.

The new building will be located on Dunellen avenue just east of Clinton avenue. The property was secured from Mrs. Anna D. Thompson after negotiations that have been pending for two years. She inherited it from her father, William B. Tyler, who died a short time ago. The plot has a frontage of 310 feet on Dunellen avenue and extends 700 feet back to Green brook, making it the largest school site owned by the city.

According to the tentative plans, the new school will have eight rooms, four on each of its two stories. There will be no auditorium. Brick will be used in the construction and the building will be made strictly fireproof throughout.

With the new building in use, it will give the West End three primary school, the Irving and the new Washington, now in course of construction, being the other ones.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL WILL OBSERVE ITS ANNIVERSARY.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will celebrate its twenty-second anniversary Thursday night. The event will not be observed in an elaborate manner, the members deciding to provide a quiet time in honor of the occasion. Franklin Council is the oldest one of that order in the city, having been instituted on October 6, 1887, in the old Sons of Temperance Hall, which at that time was located on the top floor of the City National Bank building.

Today the Council numbers considerably over three hundred members and is constantly growing. The treasury is in an excellent condition and every claim has been met. Since organization, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield councils have been instituted, each one now having members who were at one time identified with Franklin Council.

Informed of Father's Death.

Mrs. A. F. VanHorn, of Central avenue, received word today of the death of her father, Jabez G. Smith, of Delaware, Warren county, which occurred at his residence there this morning. He had lived in that vicinity all his life, conducting a big farm that had been in the family eighty years until he sold it a short time ago. Beside Mrs. VanHorn, he is survived by a wife and four other daughters.

WELCOME MAJOR MARTIN

Former Captain of Co. K. Describes Olympic Games and Bisley Shoot.

Major W. B. Martin was a welcome guest at the first fall meeting of Co. K, last night, when the weekly drills were resumed under the direction of Captain H. B. Kitchell. The champion shot was given a rousing reception as it was his first visit here since returning from abroad with the American rifle team.

While abroad Major Martin witnessed the Olympic games and was an eye-witness to the finish of the Marathon race, which he declares was fairly won by Hayes, the American. In a speech last night he said that it was a pitiable sight to see Dornando, the Italian, trying to win the race. He was repeatedly assisted to his feet and made every effort to get over the line first, when Hayes had already been declared a winner. In speaking of the Carpenter-Haswell incident, he said that it was his honest opinion that Carpenter was fouled and that he did not foul the Englishman.

Referring to the matches on the ranges at Bisley, Major Martin spoke in complimentary terms about the treatment accorded the members of the American team, possibly due to the fact that they were defeating the representative teams from other countries.

In addition to the interesting talk by the former captain of Co. K, an entertainment was provided by Prof. Irving, a magician, and Sandford, who related humorous stories and gave impersonations. After the drill, and the evening's entertainment the non-commissioned officers provided refreshments and there was a social time. The full membership of the company was out and the drill was the most satisfactory held in a long time.

Major Martin told the company that there was no doubt but that it would go to Pine Plains next year with the regular army for the customary week in camp. This information was received with enthusiasm by the soldier boys who have always been anxious to drill with the regulars.

ANDY PARSONS BARS SALUTE OF "HELLO, KID"

If what Matthew McNair told Judge Runyon in the city court, this morning, is true, folks accustomed to using the familiar address of "Hello, Kid," had better not direct it toward Special Officer Andy Parsons, who is the General Bingham of Cottage place. McNair says he did it smply because he has known the emergency cop so long he thought it would be received in the proper spirit but it wasn't, and the resulting argument landed him in the jug.

McNair, who syles himself the "Cottage Place Tiger,' probably because he wears service stripes on his sleeve, declared in court that he was holding a friendly conversation with Edward Neal when Parsons chanced along. The "Tiger" drew himself up and said, "Hello, Kid," the breezy salutation prevalent among close friends. Somehow or other, it didn't sit right on Andy's shoulders and he told the "Tiger" in a very few words that he was an officer of the law, that he wouldn't stand for such familiarity from a mere citizen and that the proper way to address him was "Mr. Parsons." The fact that McNair was arrested shows how he accepted the ultimatum.

Parsons was unable to be at court this morning so Judge Runyon was unwilling to accept the prisoner's story about "Hello, Kid." He released him in his own recognizance until Saturday when an attempt will be made to get the special cop's version of the affair.

RASORES CLUB MEMBERS TELL SUMMER EXPERIENCES.

The Rasores Club held its first fall meeting this morning at the home of Mrs. B. O. Bowers, on Franklin place, when the members related their summer experiences, which is always the program at this meeting. In the absence of the president, Mrs. I. C. Pierson, Mrs. Ruth Leonard occupied the chair.

It was agreed to discuss Emerson at the next meeting to be held Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs. W. W. Howland. The members are requested to furnish quotations from the writings of the author. Later the club will discuss "Dawson," the English writer.

Election Board Meeting.

The Union County Election Board met at Elizabeth yesterday to fill several vacancies on district boards. It will meet again on Monday, October 19.

EUROPE FAVORS BRYAN

Senator Ackerman Says Idle Workmen over the Sea Hope for Free Trade Here.

New Jersey is essentially an industrial state, and the many thousands of artisans who have enjoyed prosperity under Republican rule are beginning to realize what Bryan's election would mean to them. Bryan wants to abolish the tariff and have free trade, and what free trade would mean to the American workingman is perhaps better told by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, head of a large cement manufacturing company, who has just returned from a tour of Europe.

"In almost every country I visited," said the senator, "the number of men out of employment was enormous, and they are all watching this country, hoping for Bryan's election.

"They want to see the protective tariff abolished and free trade take its place, for that would mean the opening up of their factories and workshops and the closing of the American ones. Just as soon as the protective tariff is removed Europe is ready with her wheels and furnaces to glut the American market with the products of cheap labor, and that means that American factories will shut down."

Present indications and computations based on presidential election returns for several campaigns show that Taft and Sherman will carry New Jersey by a plurality of not less than 40,000, and probably 60,000.

A review of the popular vote of 1900 and 1904 is interesting. In 1900 McKinley polled 221,707 votes in New Jersey, while Bryan had only 164,808. Four years later Roosevelt received 245,164 votes, while Parker had a total of 164,506, or about 300 less than Bryan. It is easy to see that while the Democratic vote remained decreased, the Republican vote increased some 24,000 over the preceding presidential year, due mostly to new voters in the state. In 1904 there were 409,670 votes polled in the state, but last year in the election for governor only 380,613 voters went to the polls, of which Governor Fort received 194,313, and Frank S. Katzenbach 186,300.

Last year there were some 29,000 voters who cast their ballots for president who did not vote for governor; but it is safe to assume that this stay-at-home vote will be in evidence on next election day. The contest for governor last year was on local issues, and Fort's majority was 8,000. But by giving the Democratic candidate the vote of Katzenbach, which was 22,000 more than Bryan or Parker polled, and adding Fort's plurality to the stay-at-homes, who only come out to vote in presidential years, a plurality of 37,000 for Taft and Sherman is obtained. This, of course, does not take in the normal increase of voters in the state. From 1900 to 1904 this increase was 24,000, so that is is a fairly safe prediction that Taft and Sherman will have a plurality of not less than 40,000, with the chances that it will be nearer 60,000.

P.S.C. TROLLEY SERVICE FAR FROM SATISFACTORY

That the local trolley schedule as changed and put in effect on Sunday, September 27, does not meet with the approval of patrons was shown at the October meeting of the Common Council, last night, when a protest was received from Stuart H. Patterson and others. The petitioners asked that the cars on the Arlington avenue line be put back on the schedule in operation prior to the above date so that commuters can connect with the 8:30 morning express to New York.

It was also suggested that if the change was made to accommodate school children from Netherwood that a special car be operated for their benefit; that the cars on the Arlington avenue line be run on a fifteen minute schedule until 11:30 o'clock at night as alleged to be required by the franchise; that the company be compelled to run the cars on time and that a suitable waiting room be established at Fourth street and Watchung avenue for patrons of the road.

The matter was referred to the Public Affairs committee, which has been conferring with the P. S. C. regarding improved trolley conditions.

WANT MORE MONEY FOR POLICE "BUNGALOW"

The Councilmanic police board is confronted with a perplexing problem in connection with the work at the new police station at East Fourth and Sycamore streets, and just now it is impossible to figure out where it can obtain the extra $1,347.50 required. The work to be done includes the laying of sidewalks on Fourth and Sycamore streets, paving the court-yard with an artificial stone, installing the necessary drains and making the excavations for a cesspool, etc.

The matter came before the Common Council last night through a resolution offered by Councilman Frank Randolph, chairman of the police board, in which Alexander Milne, the contractor on the building, had received a bid of $1,347.50 to do this work, and he moved that the bid be accepted. Why this work was not provided for in the original appropriation of $25,500 no one seems to know, but the fact remains that it is a necessity and especially before winter sets in and puts a stop to the laying of artificial stone.

As soon as Mr. Randolph presented the matter, Mr. Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, declared: "Happy idea! but where are you going to get the money? You cannot get it out of the general fund, so how are you going to get it?"

Mr. Randolph insisted that the work is a necessity, that the grounds about the station are now a mud hole and unless the walks are laid it will be almost impossible for the patrol wagon to drive in and out.

Mr. Hall hastened to the rescue of Mr. Randolph and attempted to show how he could get the money. "Why your building cost $17,510," said Mr. Hall, "the extras amounted to $1,000, the land cost $7,000, the architect's fees were $1,000 and that makes $26,510, which with an appropriation of $30,000 gives you enough money."

Just then someone informed Mr. Hall that the appropriation was $25,550, and he suddenly awoke and replied: "Where did I get the idea that it was $30,000?" "Why, you were dreaming," interjected Mr. Mygatt.

"Can't we borrow some money in anticipation of taxes?" was Mr. Montgomery's query. "Why, you can take the money we intended spending for arc lights, transfer that to the general fund and then to the police fund." Mr. Buxton ventured the opinion that that could not be done.

It was Mr. Mygatt's idea that the matter was altogether too important to dispose of in so short a time and he advised less haste. He suggested that the finance committee be given an opportunity to lay the matter over until Friday night, when an adjourned meeting will be held. The resolution offered by Mr. Randolph was referred back to the finance committee and in the meantime the members will see what can be done.

HER DEATH RECALLS FIRST CATHOLIC WEDDING

Mrs. Bridget McDonough, widow of William McDonough, of Scotch Plains, and for nearly sixty years a resident of this section, died yesterday at the home of her son, James McDonough, of Montclair, with whom she had been living for the past three years. Paralysis was the cause of death.

Mrs. McDonough was born in Ireland in 1826 and came to this country in 1850, locating at Scotch Plains. Her maiden name was Bridget Murphy and her marriage to William McDonough in 1852 was the first Catholic ceremony of the kind ever taking place in Plainfield. It was performed in the parlor of the Verdon homestead on Somerset street, the newly formed parish which eventually led to St. Joseph's and St. Mary's then worshipping in the barn on the premises. Father McDonough was the celebrant and it was on Christmas morning after the regular mass. Mr. McDonough died at Scotch Plains eight years ago.

Mrs. McDonough is survived by three sons, Peter McDonough, of this city, and James and William McDonough, of Montclair. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church, the borough, Wednesday morning at 10:30.

Electric Lights at Berkeley.

As predicted by William Jeffery, the "bungalow man," the electric light service was inaugurated in New Providence Township, Saturday night. This includes Berkeley Heights, where Mr. Jeffery has built several bungalows. The event was appropriately celebrated by the residents of that village. The Commonwealth Water and Electric Company, of Summit, furnishes the current.

UNION CO. COURT OPENS

Justice Bergen Charges Grand Jury and Calls List of Cases for Term.

When the October term of the Union County Courts were opened at Elizabeth, this morning, with Justice J. J. Bergen on the bench, the court was thronged with interested spectators, including a large representation of members of the Union County Bar. The address of Judge Bergen was short and very much to the point. He charged the Grand Jury particularly regarding the drowning of a boy at Elizabethport last month, an illegal operation performed on a girl at Summit and in general as to alleged excise violations. He said that other laws are being violated and he charged the jury to thoroughly investigate conditions.

The members of the Grand Jury from Plainfield are Henry Leifke and B. Frank Coriell, and the Plainfield members of the Petit Jury are as follows:

Edward Caldwell, Frank O. Reinhart, Jesse A. Dayton, Charles Drake, George Finger, Floyd D. Fuller, W. J. Johnson, Fred V. L. Jones, Isaac Shrager, Walter Wikoff, Ralph Young, Charles L. Lewis, John M. Lewis, Arthur McVoy, W. B. Marchant, Robert H. MacCready, John Morton, U. G. Pierson, Cornelius van Herwerden and Stuart H. Whitney.

The following Supreme Court causes of interest to Plainfielders are listed for the term:

John Long and others against Central Real Estate Agency, on contract; Reed & Coddington for plaintiffs and Paul Oliver for the defendant; Annie Miller against Annie Miller, administratrix, on contract, G. W. V. Moy for plaintiff and Abe J. David for defendant; Anna M. Matthews against Public Service Corporation, in tort, Codington & Swackhamer for plaintiff and A. A. Clark for defendant; Garret T. Dunham against Public Service Corporation, in tort, G. W. V. Moy for plaintiff and A. A. Clark for defendant; Kussel Sachar against Nathan Sachs, on contract, F. J. Blatz for plaintiff and W. L. Hetfield, Sr., for defendant; George Voehl against Cornelius Smith and others, on contract, Francis J. Blatz for plaintiff, and R. S. Terhune for defendant; V. W. Nash, Jr., against W. H. Longstead, on contract, William Newcorn for the plaintiff and Nelson & W. N. Runyon for the defendant.

The following cases are all in tort and seek to recover damages for the drowning of Laura Peterson, colored, and W. H. Gray, of this city, at Boynton Beach last summer: W. G. DeMeza adminisrator of Laura Peterson, deceased, against Albert B. Boynton and others, J. A. Kiernan for the plaintiff and Theodore B. Booraem for the defendants; same against Gorham L. Boynton and others; same administrator of W. H. Gray, deceased, against Gorham L. Boynton and others; same, administrator of W. H. Gray, deceased, against Albert B. Boynton and partners.

The following Plainfield causes are listed in the Circuit Court:

James Calloway against W. H. Bohl, in tort, Codington & Swackhamer for the plaintiff and F. J. Blatz for the defendant; Mary I. Hewitt against W. D. Martin, on contract, H. K. Gaston for the plaintiff and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.; Alexander Kane against John H. Doane, in tort, F. J. Blatz for the plaintiff and G. W. V. Moy for the defendant.

REV. DR. ZELIE TO SPEAK AT COLLEGE INAUGURAL.

A notable erucational event is to take place tomorrow at Williamstown, Mass., on the occasion of the installation of Prof. Harry A. Garfield, of Princeton, as president of Williams College. Seventy-nine college presidents have already accepted invitations to be present at the inaugural ceremonies.

Among the speakers at the installation exercises are Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, '87, who acs as representative of the alumni. Other graduates of Williams who reside in Plainfield, are I. W. Travell, Rev. L. R. Howard, Fred Squires, Lewis Squires, Alden E. Moore, Brockholst Miller, Kerro Knox, Harold Fenno, and Harold Nomer, several of whom will attend.

Foresters to Entertain.

HELD AS A SHOPLIFTER

Dunellen Woman Held in $600 Bail on Charges Made by Local Merchants.

Mrs. Charles Wyckoff, of Dunellen, who was arrested yesterday in the A. E. Force department store, was arraigned before Judge Runyon yesterday afternoon on two charges of shoplifting, one preferred by the proprietor of the place where she was detected and the other by J. V. E. Vanderhoef for the Woodhull-Martin Company. She waived examination on the latter accusation but demanded a hearing for the former. Her request was complied with and after taking the testimony of several witnesses, the magistrate thought the evidence sufficient to hold her for the Grand Jury. Bail was fixed at $300 in each case, the amount being furnished by her brother, Patrick Traynor, of this city.

Mrs. Wyckoff's arrest was brought about by her attempt to take a sweater from the Force store. One of the saleswomen noticed it on her arm as she was leaving the place and summoned the manager, J. J. Varley. Mrs. Wyckoff was stopped and when her explanation as to where she got the article proved unsatisfactory, she was invited into a private office. There she was searched by two of the store women and various articles of dress goods were found concealed beneath her skirts and in her waist, while a small bag she carried contained $30 worth of gloves and other things afterward learned to have been taken from the Woodhull-Martin store earlier in the day. The employes who searched her testified at the city court hearing.

The store people made the complaints in order to put a stop to the shoplifting practice that has been prevalent in the city for the past six months. Several of the merchants have suffered heavily through it and on two occasions before the women have been caught but not punished. The Force concern seems to have been the favorite stamping ground. At the last meeting of the Merchants' Association, the matter was thoroughly discussed and it was then decided that drastic measures should be taken instead of letting the culprits go after returning the stolen goods. The detection yesterday is the first that has occurred since then.

Mrs. Wyckoff is about forty-five years old and is the mother of six children. Her husband was recently convicted of illegal liquor selling in New Brunswick and served a term in the Middlesex county jail besides paying a heavy fine. She formerly resided in the West End, where she has several brothers and sisters.

SENATOR THURSTON TO SPEAK IN BOROUGH

Former United States Senator John M. Thurston will address the Republican Club of North Plainfield on Thursday night on the issues of the Presidential campaign. On that occasion a big rally will be held at Saengerbund hall, the club's headquarters, and many prominent members of the party both in Somerset and Union counties will be present.

State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Assemblyman W. W. Smalley and the other Republican candidates in Somerset county as well as those in the borough will be seated on the platform. Senator Frelinghuysen, and no doubt also Assemblyman Smalley, will make brief remarks.

As yet the chairman for the meeting has not been announced by President Benjamin A. Hegeman, who has, however, named the vice-presidents, Charles W. McCutchen, William G. Besler, Henry A. McGee, Charles A. Reed and Edwin S. Hooley are the vice-presidents for North Plainfield, while Union County Chairman Frank H. Smith, former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, City Clerk James T. MacMurray and Mayor Charles J. Fisk, will represent Plainfield's Republicans. Dr. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, is also included in the list.

Music Hall Rented.

Harry Sanderson, of Cranford, yesterday obtained from William M. Stillman a copy of a lease on old Music Hall which he aims to turn into a vaudeville house. It is expected that Sanderson will sign it today. Charles P. Sebring has signed a lease for his large store in West Front street at the request of the Woolworth Company which desires to locate there if the Music Hall is rented. Woolworth's place occupies the old entrance to the hall. The proposed change is contemplated for November 15.

G. O. P. RALLIES IN UNION

Many are Already Announced and Others Will Be Arranged by Committee.

Arrangements for a stumping itinerary throughout the county will be made tonight at a meeting of the Union County Republican Committee at Elizabeth, which will be presided over by Chairman Frank H. Smith, who has recently returned from an extended vacation. It is planned to hold at least one big meeting at the New Plainfield theatre here during the latter part of the month. An effort will be made to get Governor Fort to speak with State Senator Ackerman in whose campaign as well as that of Mr. Colby he has evinced much interest.

The first of two big meetings at Elizabeth will be held at the Lyceum theatre on Thursday night at which Senator Ackerman will be a speaker. Another one will be held at that place on Saturday night, October 31. Tonight Senator Ackerman speaks at a rally in Rahway; tomorrow night at Westfield and on Friday night at Garwood. Summit, Roselle, New Providence, Springfield and Cranford will also be the scenes of large rallies before the end of the month.

The Democrats are principally relying on James E. Martine for their political thunder, but almost every night he is stumping in other sections of the State notwithstanding the fact that he is a candidate for sheriff. Martine volunteered his services as usual to the State committee and it has given him a long list of dates. As is his custom, the farmer-orator is going down in his own pocket for carfare, hotel expenses and the like.

ARRESTED MEN CLAIM TO HAVE BEEN HELD UP

The customary stillness along East Second street near fire headquarters was rudely shattered about 9 o'clock, last night, by some of the most unearthly yells ever let loose on an unsuspecting public. They were a cross between the high C of a Missouri mule and the concluding gurgle of a gasping giggle, punctuated now and then by cries of "murder" and "police." Patrolman McDonald heard the racket and hustled around from Park avenue as fast as he could but before he reached the scene of action, all the firemen were out and seven-eighths of the residents in the block.

McDonald located Henry and Edward Donnelly as the disturbers, both of them somewhat intoxicated, but when he asked for an explanation they declared they had been held up by an unknown man. He met them near the Hand stables, they said, and asked them to buy a drink. When they refused, he hauled off and struck both on the point of the jaw. The cop made a hurried search of the neighborhood but could locate no one answering the description given by the brothers.

McDonald took both men to headquarters and they were arraigned this morning on a drunk and disorderly charge. They were insistent, however, that they had been assaulted and Judge Runyon thought there might be something in the story. He accordingly adjourned the matter until Saturday to give the police a chance to make a full investigation.

Y. W. C. A. Classes' Registration.

The registration in the various classes has begun in earnest at the Y. W. C. A., and the secretaries hope that all who intend to identify themselves with one or more classes will arrange to do so during the week of October 19. In the gymnasium there will be two afternoon classes for young girls, one to meet on Monday and another on Friday. Early registration is desired so that all may start with the first meeting. Physical examinations will be given Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Miss Mosher will be in charge of the physical department.

Thanks to George Luhr.

There is much rejoicing in Dunellen over the special trolley service afforded to children of that borough attending the Plainfield High School. George Luhr, superintendent of the Plainfield Division for the P. S. R., acted as motorman on the first car which carried fifty-four pupils on Monday morning in record time to the high school building.

The Nationals, of Perth Amboy, will play the Clinton Avenues, Saturday. This will be the last game of the season for Clinton Avenue. The Nationals have the reputation of being almost as scrappy as New Brunswick and a lively game is anticipated.

Captain Nolan and his aggregation from New Brunswick must have thought he was playing in a country town on Saturday and that what he said must go. It is said that the team don't dare play that kind of ball at home.

Rowland or Masterson, who pitched for New Brunswick Saturday, is a good one, but he wants to learn to control his temper.

We do our own work at

A. A. Brown's, 218 West Second St.

Miss Sarah Watters, of New York, spent Sunday with friends in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Findlay and daughter, Janet, of Jersey City, have been the guests of relatives in this city.

Vincent Carroll and John Townley, of the local fire department, accompanied by their wives are attending the firemen's parade at New Brunswick, today.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., October 6, 1908.

The New Brunswick Times approves of our suggestion that Samuel W. Rushmore remove from his factory that ugly sign which gives the traveling public a most erroneous idea of "the city beautiful" as a well governed municipality. The Middlesex paper in condemning the protesting taxpayer for his strange methods says:

"The Plainfield manufacturer who has made his local grievance against a local political machine the basis for a wide-spread attack upon the fair name of his city, is pursuing the wrong course. If he has been wronged, let him complain to his fellow citizens, let him make a campaign issue of the matter, but take down that sign which warns the general traveling public that Plainfield is a bad place to settle in. There is too much civic pride in any town, no matter where located, to stand such a thing as that."

As strange as the action of Mr. Rushmore, is the fact that at last night's meeting of the city fathers the matter was entirely ignored. It appears to the average man who takes just pride in his home town that the local administration should not delay in doing what it can to have the objectionable billboard removed.

Is not an absurd condition of affairs presented when the Common Council is inclined to make an additional appropriation for the completion of the new police "bungalow" rather than to expend some of the people's money in giving the East End proper fire protection? For months, the city fathers have been pursuing a procrastinating policy regarding the proposed, and much needed, fire house for the Netherwood district. Unfortunately they have not profited by the lesson taught in the Letcher fire and today that valuable and well assessed portion of the municipality is compelled to depend on a fire house a mile away for its safety. This important improvement may wait, it seems, while more money is expended in completing a structure which looks more like a bungalow or rich man's auto barn than a police headquarters. Already $25,500 has been used to build this "bungalow" and now the patient taxpayer is told that at least $1,300 is wanted to do some other work in that connection. How long will Mr. Propertyowner put up with this policy of municipal government?

The capitalist and wage-earner alike will be interested in the observations of Union county's solon concerning the attitude of Europe in the present campaign in this country. According to him, and as his interesting and instructive fund of timely knowledge is drawn from direct study while abroad this summer, thousands of idle men in England and on the Continent will naturally welcome free trade, which means a return to "soup-house" times in America and prosperity in lands that would be benefited by a removal of our protective tariff system. Attention is directed to the interview which, as the Trenton State Gazette today says, "will be of interest to our wage-earning readers.'

John F. Bulmer.

John F. Bulmer, until ten years ago a life-long resident of Plainfield, died yesterday at the Soldier"s Home at Kearney. He was eighty years old and served in the Civil War as a member of Company I, Third N. J. regiment, under Captain Leonard Regur. He leaves one son, Albert Bulmer, of the East End. The funeral will be held at Cole's undertaking rooms tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in the Methodist cemetery.

Mrs. Lucy A. Spearin.

The death of Mrs. Lucy A. Spearin, for forty years a resident of Bayonne city, occurred this morning at the home of her son in Fanwood with whom she had resided for the past three months. She was seventy eight years old and beside her son, leaves one daughter, Mrs. Alice Lungren, of Bayonne. The funeral will be held at her late residence Thursday morning at 11.15 and buirial will be in the Moravian cemetery, Staten Island.

Republican Banner.

The huge campaign banner, provided by the Republican City Committee as told in this paper some days ago, was swinging to the breeze today. It is strung between the Daily Press office to the Stirling building on Park avenue and contains portraits of Taft and Sherman and the names of the party candidates. It cost $100.

Mrs. Levi Bird and family have removed from Somerset street to 34 Manning avenue.

CITY FATHERS TRANSACT MUCH ROUTINE BUSINESS

As a protection against fire which frequently breaks out in the dump at Dunellen and Compton avenues, W. R. H. Hardingham and other residents in that part of the city, petitioned the Common Council, last night, for a fire hydrant at that point. The petitioners complained that at present it is necessary to run a line of hose fully 1,000 feet to reach the dump, the nearest hydrant being at West Front street and Compton avenue. The request was granted upon motion of Mr. Buxton, of the fire and building committee.

In this connection a petition was received from residents in the neighborhood of the dump, protesting against a stagnant pool allowed to exist there, which was considered as a breeding place for mosquitoes, typhoid fever and other diseases. The petition was signed by Frank W. Weed and many others. Drs. Fred Hughes and C. B. Lufburrow were quoted as authority on the undesirable condition of the surroundings. The petition was referred to the fire and building committee.

Boice, Runyon & Co., was given permission to move a one-story brick building from Park avenue near the railroad through Park avenue and West Second street to the firm's land on the latter place.

A petition for a fire hydrant at East Second street and Terrill road, was referred back to the fire and building committee for further consideration, it being the purpose of the committee to learn more definitely about the number of hydrants ordered and not located by the water company. It was stated by Councilman C. C. Randolph that hydrants ordered in 1907 had not yet been located and a similar condition exists in the West End. The committee proposes to ascertain why these hydrants have not been established. A motion by Mr. Buxton and carried, instructed the fire and building committee to ascertain from the water company what orders received have not been carried out and to notify the committee by the next meeting and that a report be received from Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department for comparison.

Residents petitioned for two lights on Terrill road, between East Second and Third street, and it was referred. The agreement between Nathan Meyers and the city, in which the former states that he will be responsible for any damages resulting from the moving of a building from East Second to East Third street, was received and filed.

Building Inspector Doane reported that twenty-three permits were granted last month. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the district court, reported receipts for the past month to be $176.54, expenditures of $153.74, leaving a balance of $22.80.

Through Councilman Buxton, a report was received from Corporation Counsel Marsh regarding a petition from W. D. W. Miller regarding a personal tax. It was stated that the collector had made a mistake in using a 1904 tax bill instead of 1905, and he was instructed to send Mr. Miller a corrected bill for $500 personal tax.

A resolution offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted, provided that sidewalks be laid in certain streets and a lien be placed on the properties for the payment of the work.

On motion of Mr. Buxton, the fire and building committee was authorized to purchase one barrel of carbolene at a cost not to exceed ninety cents a gallon. Another motion by the same member authorized the committee to sell the old hook and ladder truck, now in No. 3 House, for a sum not to exceed $250. He explained that the city has no need for the truck and is desirous of making use of the room it now occupies. The money received from the sale of the apparatus, according to law, will go into the firemen's pension fund.

Upon motion of Mr. Montgomery of the light committee, one light was ordered placed on West Sixth street, three hundred feet east of the corner of Clinton avenue, and the petition of L. Kornfield for one light on Spruce street, was granted on his motion, after remarks in favor of the improvement were made by Councilmen Mygatt and Buxton. The request for lights on Denmark road and Dixie Lane was referred for the reason that Mr. Montgomery could not find the names of those thoroughfares in the book of ordinances and he desired to look into the matter further.

An ordinance was offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted on two readings, providing for the extension of Johnston avenue, from North to South avenues, and another one for the extension of Kensington avenue, from Prospect to Park avenues. The necessary maps were filed and Monday night, November 2, was fixed as the time when a public hearing will be granted prior to adopting the ordinances on third and final reading. On motion of Mr. Gloak an ordinance providing for the repair of sidewalks was adopted on third reading and is now in effect.

A duplicate bill for $208.48 from the Consumers' Coal Company, was ordered cancelled on motion of Mr. Buxton, and a resolution by the same member provided for the borrowing of $5,000 for sewer improvements. This was adopted as was also another resolution borrowing $8,000 on account of the fire fund and $2,000 on account of the poor fund, for three months.

Mr. Mygatt offered a resolution which was adopted, which provided for an extra appropriation of $25 for the use of the special sewage commission.

More Complaints About City Dump.

Following numerous complaints that have been received regarding the terrible condition of the city dump on Dunellen avenue, Chief T. O. Doane ordered some of his men to that place yesterday, where from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a steady stream of water was played on the dump to extinguish the fire which has been smouldering there. The attention of the Board of Health has been called to the matter and if necessary the residents in that neighborhood will go to the State Board of Health to accomplish their purpose. There are residents on West Front street and adjoining thoroughfares who, it is said, have been made ill by the maintenance of the dump, and it is said that everything including garbage has been left there by scavengers. Official action concerning the nuisance will probably be taken soon.

Mrs. John Derst, of Savannah, Ga., returned home Saturday, after spending five weeks in Plainfield and Westfield with her brothers, George and Lewis Hartfelder.

CITY FATHERS CONSIDER BUILDING PERMIT MATTER

The question as to whether George H. Stagaard, of East Front and Church streets, should be permitted to make certain alterations in his building, caused a lengthy discussion at the October meeting of the Common Council, last night. It seems that the matter has been before the fire and building committee for some time, but the members have failed to agree as to what was best to do.

It was stated by Mr. Suydam that it was decided by Chief T. O. Doane, building inspector, that the building is within the fire limits, and the proposed changes were undesirable. On the other hand, Mr. Buxton declared that he had examined the building inside and out and in his opinion it would be a better fire risk after the improvements are made. While Mr. Hall at first opposed to the petition, he changed his mind after further investigation. Councilman C. C. Randolph held that if Chief Doane recommended the improvements, which it is said he did later, the Common Council had no option, as the authority was invested in him. He suggested that the matter be referred to the chief. Mr. Montgomery was of the same opinion.

It was the opinion of President Tolles that the changes would be an improvement and the petition should be granted. Mr. Suydam still persisted in opposing the petition, adding that the building stands opposite the proposed site for the new post-office building and besides, Mr. Hibbard, chairman of the fire and building committee, recommended that it be denied. An amendment to refer the matter back was lost, by a vote of nine to one, Mr. Suydam viting in the negative, and then the petition was granted by the same vote. Mr. Stagaard wants to extend the front of his building five feet, using cement blocks.

The discussion brought out the fact that the Council had always passed on cement block work and it would be proper to do so now or until the proposed changes in the building code decides the authority in such matters.

SHADE TREE COMMISSION ASKS FOR MORE MONEY

The Shade Tree Commission having nearly expended its appropriation for the year, there being but $399.87 left out of a total of $2,779.19, including appropriation and all receipts for the remaining four months, asked the Common Council, last night for an extra $500 with which to carry on its work during the coming season. The communication cited the fact that the commission had been in operation almost a year, and it was for the Council to determine whether the work is to continue along as it had during the year or take it up along more definite lines.

It was stated that the commission had only been able to trim trees where they shaded electric lights and to undertake certain other restricted lines of work. It was considered fortunate that the services of R. P. Gay, a forester of ability, were available and the necessity of keeping him here was pointed out. The expenditures thus far this year were reported as $2,379.82, which of course includes the purchase of tools, trimming, and spraying, as well as the removal of trees. The extra appropriation of $500 was then requested.

In connection with this Mr. Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, presented an opinion from Corporation Counsel Marsh, in which the latter stated that although he had made a careful search he was unable to find any law on the statute books that would permit the city to make the extra appropriation, and the city clerk was instructed to forward the commission a copy of the opinion.

COUNCIL PROCRASTINATES

That Much-Needed Fire House in the East End is Still a Visionary Proposition.

The proposed East End fire house proposition was unexpectedly resurrected at the October meeting of the Common Council last night, when Councilman Buxton, of the fire committee, presented a set of plans, prepared by Harold Hall, architect, brother of Councilman R. E. Hall, and also offered a resolution providing for the issuing of $15,000 worth of bonds with which to complete the improvement. When he offered the plans he moved that they be adopted and filed.

This was objected to by Councilman Mygatt, who confessed that he had not examined the plans, and before voting on the question he wanted to know more about them. He said he realized that the fire and building committee had spent a great deal of time on the matter, but nevertheless he could see no reason for haste. In explanation Mr. Buxton said that the committee had approved the plans and it was now up to the Common Council to decide whether it wanted to build or not.

There was some objection as to the suggested method of issuing bonds. The resolution called for thirty coupon bonds of $500 denomination each to run from December 1 for thirty years, and the appointment of a sinking fund commission. Some were displeased with the sinking fund idea, and if there is any way of escape it will be followed.

It was stated by Mr. Hall that Corporation Counsel Marsh had informed him that in issuing bonds for the improvement, the building and equipment must be included, for that reason the committee proposed to install a combination chemical and hose wagon, to be either driven by horses or electric or gasolene power. He had estimated the cost of building at about $9,500 and equipment at $5,200.

President Tolles explained that in issuing bonds it was the general custom to retire one or more each year, but he was informed that this issue must run the full thirty years as provided by the law under an act passed in February, 1907, which also provides for a sinking fund commission.

Mr. Mygatt wanted Mr. Hall to state how it was proposed to equip the fire-house, and the latter said that the committee might put an auto combination chemical and hose wagon there or it might be decided to use horses for the apparatus and later it might be thought wise to place an engine in that part of the city.

"I am opposed to the passage of this resolution," said Mr. Mygatt, "or the adoption of these plans tonight. I know the committee has worked hard, but we are now up against the bond issue question. The committee has not fully decided how it proposes to equip the fire-house and I myself want to investigate the matter further and learn more about the plans."

Again Mr. Hall suggested that later on it might be thought best to locate a steamer in the Netherwood district. This could be done if the city purchases a new one for the business section, as the old one now in use could be transferred there.

"I object to running things off the reel in this fashion," replied Mr. Mygatt. "I don't know what I am voting for at present. Let us find out first where we are at and then consider the proposition fairly." Mr. Mygatt then moved that the whole matter be placed on the table for the present and the motion prevailed.

Mr. Suydam declared that he approved the plans and also recognized the necessity for a fire-house in the East End, but he opposed the bond issue, especially that feature providing for a sinking fund commission. Anyway he thought it to be a bad time of the year to start such an improvement. In concluding the discussion Mr. Hall said that he realized it might be a mistake to present a resolution instead of an ordinance, something which could be passed on first and second reading, followed by a public hearing. He said that he proposed to see Mr. Marsh and ascertain whether this could be done.

POLITICAL NOTES.

In ten cities of the State this is second registration day for the voters who are to have a part in the Presidential election. Under the law, the second registry day is four weeks before election day in all cities of 30,000 population or over. There are just ten of the State's municipalities that qualify according to the figures of the census of 1905, made under the supervision of the Legislature. They are Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Hoboken, Elizabeth, Camden, Trenton, Bayonne, Passaic and Atlantic City. For all the rest of the State, other than ten ten municipalities listed, the last chance to register will be Tuesday, October 27. The last chance for the big cities will be Tuesday, October 20.

Charles W. Fairbanks, vice-president of the United States, will address a mass meeting at Taylor Opera House, Trenton, next Tuesday evening. Although the event will be under Republican auspices the public in general will be invited to hear the distinguished statesman talk on the issues of the day.

Miss Gertrude Hunter, a junior at Barnard College, has returned to her studies after spending the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hunter, of West Fourth street.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Since the famous Irish classic, "The Wearing of the Green," was first sung many years ago it has been repeated thousands of times by various singers. It has remained for Andrew Mack to offer an entirely new version of the famous old Irish classic, and during his engagement in this city Thursday night, he will sing "The Wearing of the Green" in "Arrah na Pogue" as only Mr. Mack can sing it.

Mr. Edgar L. Benn, who will essay the part of the "Lawyer Marks" in the forthcoming production of Uncle Tom's Cabin, under the management of Al. W. Martin, at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, arrived late one night at a small village hotel and asked for a room. He was told that the only vacant one was next to that of a very nervous man whom he must be careful not to disturb. After going to his room the newcomer thoughtlessly let fall one of his shoes; then, recalling the warning he had received, placed the other very carefully on the floor. He had put out the light and retired when there was a knock on his door. Opening it, he faced the nervous occupant of the adjoining room, who demanded excitedly: "Why in thunder don't you take off that other shoe?"

"Gay New York," likewise styled a musical comedy, will offer an opportunity at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night to judge in how far it has deserved the exceptionally fine favors that have been showered upon it, and in all probability it will demonstrate quite conclusively that a musical comedy with a real plot can be more than friendly towards the engagement of pretty girls in conjunction with comedians of ability and skill, and in the same spirit allow for novelty features and grandeur of costumes and stage effects.

In the new Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert comic opera, "The Red Mill," which Mr. Charles Dillingham will present at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night, local theatregoers will be privileged to witness a musical offering which was undeniably the one great success of New York's most brilliant theatrical season, as also Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

The scenes of "The Red Mill" are laid in the picturesque and quaint country of Holland of the present day, the atmosphere lending itself to a faithful portrayal of the dykes, canals and the little red mills of the small Dutch kingdom, with the peculiar costumes of the officials and peasants which are relieved by tourists from America and England.

The story has to do with two venturesome spirits who are "doing" Europe on their nerve rather than their purse, but who strike a snag in a little Dutch town, where they are caught in the act of leaving the hotel by the window, with their board bill unpaid. They are sentenced by the Burgomaster (the Mayor), to work out their debt to the innkeeper. One acts as the porter and the other as the waiter. In these disguises they find themselves the harmless victims of extraordinary circumstances, having to assume innumerable disguises before funds arrive from America and they settle their indebtedness. Mr. Blossom has rounded out his interesting story by bringing into the play two young lovers who are so timely helped by the touring pair.

Richmond Street, from the southerly crosswalk of Putnam Avenue to the northerly crosswalk of Watchung Avenue;

Kensington Avenue, from the southerly crosswalk of Watchung Avenue to the macadamizing already constructed on Prospect Avenue;

Division Street, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fifth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Sixth street;

John Street, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Seventh Street;

West Second Street, from the southwesterly curb line of Liberty Street to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield Avenue;

Randolph Road, from the centre line of Arlington Avenue to the bridge over Cedar Brook;

Arlington Place, from the southwesterly curb line of Park Avenue to the northeasterly curb line of Arlington Avenue;

Cottage Place, from the northeasterly curb line of Washington Street to the southwesterly curb line of Richmond Street;

Park Lane, from the easterly curb line of Woodland Avenue to the westerly curb line of Belvidere Avenue;

Elmwood Place, from the southeasterly curb line of West Front Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Second Street;

College Place, from the southeasterly curb line of West Eighth Street to the northwesterly crosswalk at West Ninth Street;

Denmark Road, from the present macadam on Berkeley Avenue, southeasterly 381 feet;

Sycamore Street, from the southeasterly curb line of East Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of East Fifth Street;

Hillside Avenue, from the present macadam at Evergreen Avenue to a point 540 feet south thereof;

West End Avenue, from the northwesterly crosswalk at West Front Street to the bridge over Green Brook;

under the ordinances of said city entitled

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Painfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved Dec. 15, 1905;

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved July 5, 1906;

"A Supplement to an ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits,' approved July 5, 1906," approved April 1, 1907; and which ordinances were adopted under and by virtue of the act of the legislature entitled, "An act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same," approved June 13, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto, having made and filed in the office of the clerk of said court, a report in writing of their estimates and assessments, accompanied by surveys and maps prepared by the city surveyor under their direction, showing lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, respectively, the cost of the whole work under said ordinances, the portions assessed upon the city at large, and the names, so far as ascertained, of the owners of the said lots or parcels of land and real estate, and the amount of the assessment to each owner for each of said lots or parcels of land and real estate for the said benefits, and the excess thereof to be paid by the city at large, and raised by general tax, and the other matters required by said acts of the Legislature, as by reference to said report and maps will more fully and at large appear.

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved May 16, 1907;

Notice is hereby given, that the said Union County Court of Common Pleas has fixed the Twelfth day of October, 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as the court can attend to the same, at the court house in the city of Elizabeth, as the time and place for hearing before said court any objections that may be made to such assessments, when and where all parties may be heard, and has directed the publication of this notice.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Copyright, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"Great. He cleans up his four quarts three times a day, and is as big as a cart horse. I never had a better doer in my hands. If he keeps well, and I think he will, you have a great chance with him for the Brooklyn Derby."

"That's encouraging. There are some good horses in it, though. White Moth and others. However, I'll back The Dutchman to win fifty thousand, and there'll be ten thousand in that for you, Langdon, if it comes off."

The trainer's mouth watered. Money was his god. Horses were all right as a means to an end, but the end itself was gold. He would stop at nothing to attain that end; his avaricious mind, stimulated by Crane's promise, came at once to the disturbing element in the pleasant prospect, Shandy's report of Lucretia's good form.

"Did you find out anything about Porter's mare, Lucretia? I know White Moth's form; both fit and well. The Dutchman holds him safe over the Derby journey."

"No; I didn't hear anything about Porter's mare."

"I have," said Langdon, decisively. "I paid a boy to keep an eye on her, and he says she'll be hard to beat."

Crane frowned. "What boy?" he asked, abruptly.

"Shandy."

"Well, just drop that; chuck that game. John Porter has his own troubles. If he can win, let him. He can't if The Dutchman keeps well; but anyway, our own horses will keep us fully occupied."

Langdon was dumfounded. If Crane had opened the Bible and read a chapter from St. Luke he would not have been more astonished.

All at once, however, a light dawned upon him. Crane was doubling on him. He saw it like a flash. His employer had a tout on the ground himself; that was how he had got next some good performance of Diablo's. My, but it was clever; he could appreciate it. Crane rose in his estimation again.

Quite humbly he answered: "Very well; it's not my funeral; I'll bring The Dutchman to the post fit to run the race of his life. If Lucretia beats him it won't be my fault. I thought perhaps you might want to hedge a bit on Porter's mare."

"I don't think it. I'll stand The Dutchman; there are too many in to start backing them all. Let me know if the black gives you any encouragement, and I'll see about placing him."

After Langdon had gone Crane lighted a fresh cigar and let his thoughts circle about Allis and Diablo. It would be just like the play of Fate for the horse to turn out good, now that John Porter had got rid of him.

Some time after the purchase of Diablo Jakey Faust, reading his Morning Telegram, came with much interest upon the entries for the Brooklyn Handicap, published that day. They were all the old campaigning handicap horses, as familiar to Faust as his (Faust's) fellow members of the betting ring. As his eye ran down the long list a sudden little pig grunt of surprise bubbled up through his fat throat. "Gee, Diablo; Oh, ho, Mr. Crane!"

He tore out the list and put it in his pocket; then he sat for a time, thinking. The result was a run down to Gravesend to pay just a friendly visit to Langdon.

The trainer and the bookmaker were like two burglars suddenly coming upon each other while robbing the same house; they were somewhat in a condition of armed neutrality toward each other.

Faust hoped that Langdon would talk about Diablo; but the trainer was like most of his guild generally, a close-mouthed man, so Jakey had to make his own running.

"What's the boss goin' to do with Diablo?" he asked Langdon.

"Must 've bought him for a work horse, I guess," the trainer answered.

"Is he any good?"

"He can eat; that's all I see from him yet."

"What did he buy him for?"

"To help a snoozer that was sittin' in bad luck."

Faust had an odd habit of causing his fat sides to ripple like troubled water when he wished to convey the impression that he was amused; he never laughed, just the rib ripple.

"What's funny?" Langdon asked, eying Jakey with querulous disfavor.

"Crane buying a horse to help a man," answered the Cherub, wondering if Langdon was so devoid of humor as to take it seriously.

"Crane told me so himself," said the trainer; "Porter's hurt, an' I guess they're in a hole, an' the boss took over Diablo."

"Say, Dick," and Faust edged close enough to tap the other man's ribs with his thumb, "were you born yesterday? I say," continued the Cherub, for Langdon had turned away somewhat impatiently, "what's the good av givin' me that gup; you didn't stand for it yourself—not on yer life. The old man's pretty slick; buys a bad horse to help a poor mutt, an' enters him in the Brooklyn, eh?"

"The Brooklyn!" exclaimed Langdon, thrown off his guard.

With corpulent intensity the Cherub melodramatically drew from his pocket the Telegraph clipping and tendered it to Langdon, watching the latter's face closely. "That's the pea, Dick, eh?" he asked.

Langdon was thinking. Was Crane doubling on him all around? Why the devil hadn't he told him?

"Now you ain't talkin' in that fairy talk of Crane's any more'n I am, Dick. Why can't we do a bit for ourselves over this; it won't hurt the boss none. Won't throw him down. This horse was a good youngster, an' Crane didn't get him without sayin' him do somethin'. You jest keep me posted, an' if he shapes good I can back'm fer an old-time killin', see? I'll divvy up straight."

Langdon didn't answer at once, but finally, in the glamour of Jakey's talk of untold wealth to be acquired, Langdon, swayed by the cupidity of his nature rather than his better judgment, promised half-heartedly to cooperate with Faust.

But no sooner had the latter gone than the lode-star of Langdon's self-interest flickered clearly in view, and he promised Mr. Jakey, mentally, a long trip to a very hot place, indeed, rather than a surreptitious partnership over Diablo.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 6.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the House of Assembly concurring), That the following amendments to the constitution of this State be and the same are hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

1. Strike out paragraph 3 of section I, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

3. Elections for members of the Senate and General Assembly shall be held every two years on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, and every second year thereafter; and the two Houses shall meet separately on the second Tuesday in January in each year, at which time of meeting the legislative year shall commence.

2. Strike out paragraph 1 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The Senate shall be composed of one Senator from each county in the State, elected by the legal voters of the counties respectively, for four years.

3. Strike out paragraph 2 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

2. As soon as the Senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution they shall be divided by the Senate as equally as may be into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only; provided, that the Senators having the longest period of time still to serve at the time of making said division shall be entitled to the longer terms.

4. Strike out paragraph 1 of section III, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The General Assembly shall be composed of members elected by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, every second year, beginning on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants. The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten, and at its first session after each United States decenial census hereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange each county of this State into a district or districts for the election therein of a member or members of the General Assembly. Each Assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory in a compact form, but no county, or part thereof, shall be joined with any other county, or part thereof, in any such district; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Last Resort, by whatever name known, is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power, under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe, to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into Assembly districts of the counties of this State for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and, if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

5. Strike out paragraph 3 of Article V and insert in place thereof the following:

3. The Governor shall hold his office for four years, to commence at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January next ensuing the election for Governor by the people, and to end at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January four years thereafter; and he shall be incapable of holding that office for four years next after his term of service shall have expired; and no appointment or nomination to office shall be made by the Governor during the last week of his said term.

6. Strike out paragraph 6 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

6. Clerks and surrogates of counties shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly. They shall hold their offices for six years.

7. Strike out paragraph 7 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Sheriffs and coroners shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly, and shall hold their offices for four years, after which four years must elapse before they can be again capable of serving. Sheriffs shall annually renew their bonds.

8. Add to section 2 of Article VII, three paragraphs to be known as paragraphs 12, 13 and 14.

12. All elections for Governor, members of the Senate and General Assembly, sheriffs, coroners, county clerks and surrogates of counties and all other officers now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of the whole State, or of any county thereof, shall be held every second year, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten.

13. All elections for justices of the peace and all and any municipal officers, as distinguished from State and county officers as hereinbefore provided, now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of any city, borough, town, township, village or subdivision thereof, or any municipality of this State, except counties, shall be held every second year on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

14. Except as herein provided with relation to the office of Senators, all officers filling any elective office at the time these amendments take effect shall continue in the exercise of the duties thereof according to their respective commissions or terms of office, and until their successors may be elected and qualified under the provisions of these amendments, and all officers whose terms of office would expire after these amendments take effect and prior to the election and qualification of their successors in office, at the election for the respective offices first held under the provisions of these amendments, shall continue in office until their successors can be elected and qualified, at the election for such office or offices to be held next after these amendments take effect, according to the provisions hereof.

The Legislature shall pass all necessary laws to arrange the terms of office of all statutory elective officers so that said terms may be in harmony with these amendments, and to carry into effect the provisions hereof.

These amendments, if adopted, shall take effect and go into operation on the first day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 4.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved, (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the Constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months previous to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 10 of Section VII of Article IV, and change the numbers of the following paragraphs to correspond:

Second—Change Paragraph 10 of Section V so to to read as follows:

10. The Governor or person administering the government, and four citizens of the State appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall constitute the Board of Pardons. The members of said Board, or any three of them, of whom the Governor or person administering the government shall be one, may remit fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves, commutations, pardons and paroles, after conviction in all cases except impeachment. The four members specially appointed shall hold office for five years, and receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during the term of their appointment.

Third—Change Section 1 of Article VI so as to read as follows:

SECTION I.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Court for the trial of impeachments, a Supreme Court, County Courts, and such other Courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as may be established by law, which inferior Courts the Legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require.

Fourth—Strike out all of Section II, IV, V, VI and VII, of Article VI, change the number of Section III of Article VI to Section II, and insert the following sections in Article VI:

SECTION III.

Any judge of any of the Courts of the State may be removed for disability continuing for one year, or for refusal to perform the duties of his office, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate and of two-thirds of all the members of the House of Assembly voting separately, after a hearing before both Houses in joint session.

SECTION IV.

1. The Supreme Court shall be organized in three divisions, namely: the Appeals Division, the Law Division, and the Chancery Division. It shall consist of a Presiding Justice of the Appeals Division who shall be styled the Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice of the Law Division who shall be styled the President Justice, and a Presiding Justice of the Chancery Division, who shall be styled the Chancellor, and eighteen Associate Justices, which number may be increased by law.

2. The Appeals Division shall consist of the Chief Justice, and six other Justices of the Supreme Court to be assigned by the Governor. A Justice of the Supreme Court assigned by the Governor to the Appeals Division shall serve in said Division until the end of his term.

The remaining Justices shall be assigned by the Supreme Court to the Law or Chancery Division, as the business of the Court may require.

3. Whenever the number of causes before the Appeals Division shall be so great that the Division cannot promptly hear and determine them, the Governor shall, when authorized by statute, temporarily assign five of the Justices of the other Divisions to sit in the Appeals Division, which shall thereupon sit in two Divisions for the hearing and decision of causes pending at the time of such assignment.

4. Four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum on the final hearing of any cause in the Appeals Division, but the Supreme Court may provide by rule for the making of interlocutory orders by a lesser number of justices, or by one justice; such orders to be subject to revision by the Appeals Division.

On the hearing of a cause in the Appeals Division, no Justice who has given a judicial opinion in the cause in favor of or against the judgment, order or decree under review shall sit at the hearing to review such judgment, order or decree, but the reasons for such opinion shall be assigned to the Court in writing.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section I of Article VI, of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all cases within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted, and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII; and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the numbers of the paragraphs following 5 to correspond:

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall not be less than thirty-five years of age and shall have been practicing attorneys in the State for at least ten years. They shall hold office for the term of seven years; shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State, or of the United States, and shall not engage in the practice of law during their term of office. The Chancellor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Vice Chancellors and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in office when this amendment takes effect, shall be Justices of the Supreme Court until the expiration of their respective terms.

The Circuit Court Judges in office when this amendment takes effect shall be continued in office with the powers of the Justices of the Supreme Court at the Circuit until the expiration of their respective terms. They may hold the County Courts, subject to assignment by the Law Division of the Supreme Court.

2. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one Judge of the County Court in each county, and such additional County Judge or Judges in any county as may be authorized by law. The County Judges may hold court in any county subject to the control of the Supreme Court. The County Judges shall not be less than thirty years of age, and shall have been practicing attorneys in this State for at least five years. They shall hold office for the term of five years; shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation, which shall not be diminished during their term of office, as the Legislature in its discretion shall fix for each county, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State or of the United States, and shall not engage in practice of the law in the courts of the county where they hold court during their term of office. The judges of the Common Pleas, in office when this amendment takes effect shall be the judges of the County Courts until the expiration of their present terms.

3. This amendment snall take effect on the first Monday in February, in the year next following its adoption by the people.

4. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution and this amendment thereof.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 9.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the ayes and nayes taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

Amend by striking out paragraph seven, section four, article four, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Members of the Senate shall receive, annually, the sum of one thousand dollars, and members of the General Assembly shall receive, annually, the sum of ten hundred dollars during the time for which they shall have been elected and while they shall hold their office, and no other allowance or emolument, directly or indirectly, for any purpose whatever. The President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the General Assembly shall, in virtue of their offices, receive an additional compensation, equal to one-third of their allowance as members.

WOLVERTON EXONERATED

Common Council Holds Industrial Home's Head Guiltless of Charges.

The special committee appointed to inquire into conditions at the Industrial Home and more especially regarding an alleged assault by Superintendent Arthur Wolverton on S. S. Vermeule, an aged inmate, presented its report at the October meeting of the Common Council, last night. This report not only exonerated Mr. Wolverton and his wife of all blame, but a resolution was also adopted requesting City Judge W. N. Runyon to dismiss the charges against the superintendent on the grounds that no assault was intended.

The committee of which Councilman C. C. Randolph was chairman, reported back the statement of City Judge W. N. Runyon, the testimony presented at the city court hearing and the letter received from Miss Elizabeth Tiffany, one of the State inspectors of Industrial Homes and similar institutions. Miss Tiffany's letter was read, the contents of which have been given in The Daily Press. In a word she states that she visited the Home, examined the inmates, found a decided improvement in the condition of the place, both from a sanitary standpoint and as to observance of rules, under the new management, and recommended that a fair trial be given Superintendent Wolverton and his wife.

The committee's report states that before the warrant was issued for the arrest of Mr. Wolverton the Alms committee was investigating affairs at the Home, that inmates were examined and that according to that committee no cause for complaint of mismanagement exists. It referred to the ill-health of former Superintendent I. D. Ten Eyck and that it was impressed with the fact that Mrs. Ten Eyck, who was a faithful matron, should be relieved of her cares and burdens.

The report goes on to say that while Mr. Wolverton may have used extra force with Mr. Vermeule there was no intention on his part of ill-treating the inmate. As to the story about one of the inmates being slapped in the face, the committee says that the report was started by Bridget Cunningham, who is mentally unbalanced and unreliable, and while she is a fit subject for an insane asylum, her harmless condition is largely responsible for her retention at the Home.

The commitee states that while as little physical force as possible must be used at the Home, it is necessary that the rules be obeyed and it can see no reason why Mr. and Mrs. Wolverton should not be retained in their present positions.

After the report was filed, Frank Vermeule, a relative of S. S. Vermeule, who was present, asked for the privilege of the floor, which was granted. He stated briefly that when his uncle was brought to him he was suffering from a cut on the hand, one on the chin and another on the knee and that if Mr. Wolverton was exonerated he considered it an outrage. With these remarks, Mr. Vermeule hurriedly left the room.

It was then that the resolution requesting City Judge Runyon to dismiss the charges against Mr. Wolverton was adopted.

Because of the recommendation of the Common Council, Judge Runyon adjourned sentence for two weeks in the Superintendent Wolverton case today when the matter was brought up in the city court. The magistrate declared he wanted to examine the City Father's findings thoroughly before making any disposition.

COUNCIL WANTS P. S. C. TO BE MORE CAREFUL

Questioning the liability of the Public Service Corporation regarding the accident which befell William Henry, of Clinton avenue, a few weeks ago, when he was nearly electrocuted beneath the Clinton avenue railroad bridge as a result of taking hold of an electric light wire, Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee, called the attention of the members last night to the incident.

He thought that the body should receive a report from the chief-of-police, and his motion that the city clerk be directed to write to the P. S. C. and learn what steps have been taken to prevent similar occurences in the future prevailed.

Knowing some of the details of the accident, Mr. Suydam stated that the accident was largely the fault of the boy. There was a break of six inches in the insulation covering the particular wire which caused the trouble, but the boys have persisted in congregating beneath the bridge and catching hold of these wires. However, he declared that the wires were in bad shape and need attention.

Mr. Suydam said that he had been informed that the New Jersey Central would not permit the P. S. C. to attach its wires to the new bridges and they were obliged to let them hang beneath. He thought the two corporations should get together and reduce the risk to a minimum. He had heard that the insulation on a number of wires was bad and should be attended to at once.

Mr. Montgomery declared that it is the duty of the city to see that the lives of children are protected and he thought there should be some way to prevent another such occurrence. He suggested that the electric light wires be placed in a large cable. "Grown up people are supposed to have some sense and can avoid such dangers," concluded Mr. Montgomery, "but children are hard to manage and they are always sure to run the risk of losing their lives."

Tree Sprayer Killed.

George Conroy, an employe of the Frost Tree Spraying Company, who worked in this city all summer on on the tree contract, was killed Saturday at Cooperstown, N. Y. While in the top branches of a tall tree using his spraying hose, he fell to the ground striking on his head and becoming unconscious. Four physicians worked over him several hours in an effort to save his life but without success. While in Plainfield, Conroy made many friends and the news of his death was conveyed to several of them by fellow-workmen. His home was in one of the Boston suburbs.

Dancing Classes at Hartridge School.

The Misses Florance, of Elizabeth, who had much success in the presentation of the Kirmess for Muhlenberg Hospital, last winter, have formed two select dancing classes at the Hartridge School. The first meeting of the classes will be held on Thursday, October 15, one at 2:30 o'clock for children under eleven years, and the other at 4 o'clock for those over eleven years. The classes will meet every week throughout the winter.

RANDOLPH PERKINS' COWS DISAPPOINT HIM

How can a cow be taught to count Counselor Randolph Perkins, of Jersey City and Westwood' Bergen county, and formerly of Westfield, Union county, is seeking intelligence on the subject. The cow in question is a Holstein, and should have produced the result of its calculations last Saturday, but its mathematics went awry, and the birthday party, consisting of Judge John A. Blair, Assistant Prosecutor George T. Vickers and Counselor Emil J. Walsheid, left the Westwood farm in their automobile, disgusted with the cow's procrastination and Counselor Perkins' estimate of condition.

Judge Blair, who has considerable experience in the matter of raising cattle at his stock farm at Blairstown, read his protege at law a long lecture on the evil results of miscalculation. Mr. Perkins tried to put the blame on the cows—there are two of them, by the way—but both the "Princess" and the "Queen" gave reproachful "moos," and Perkins had to shoulder the blame himself.

Interest in the coming events had cast Hudson county ond Westwood politice in the shade. If the cows make good, Perkins expects to capture the farmers' vote; if not—well, the cow stork had better keep out of Perkins' way.

CITY G.O.P. GETS BUSY

District Leaders Named and Two Mass Meetings at Theatre Scheduled.

RALLIES ON OCTOBER 15 AND 19.

Republican Banner Unfurled—Another Meeting to be Held on Friday Night.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Plainfield Republican City Committee was held at headquarters last night when plans were made for an active campaign. Following the session the big Taft and Sherman banner in Park avenue near North was formally swung to the breeze.

Arrangements were made last night for two big rallies to be held at the New Plainfield theatre this month. The first will take place on Thursday, October 15, and the other on Thursday, October 29. Speakers of State reputation will make addresses, and all the county and city nominees of the party will be on the platform. State Senator Ackerman and Assemblyman Pierce are expected to speak at the first meeting. City Chairman Angleman will announce the list of vice-presidents at an early date.

District leaders to get out the vote were also appointed last night. This is the list: First ward—First district, James F. Buckle; Second district, Amos Andrew. Second ward—First district, H. C. Tracy; Second district, Robert H. McCready. Third ward—First district, G. W. V. Moy; Second district, Gilbert Fletcher. Fourth ward—First district, H. C. Runyon; Second district, Herbert Buxton; Third district, Andrew McCardell.

After the meeting the banner was unfurled as the committeemen and other Republicans gave three cheers. Another meeting will be held on Friday night.

NETHERWOOD DISTRICT GETS ALONG WITHOUT GAS

The inability of a large number of consumers in the Netherwood district of the city to use gas in their homes yesterday afternoon led to the discovery that in some unknown way a considerable quantity of air had been forced into the main which runs along South avenue, starting at the Rushmore dynamo works, through Berkeley avenue, Ravine road, Park Lane, East Seventh street and Woodland avenue.

The first complaint was received soon after 1 o'clock and Superintendent Thomas Mellick, of the local gas department of the P. S. C., at once started an investigation. Judging from the source of the complaints, which by 3 o'clock were coming in rapidly, Mr. Mellick found that the trouble started at the Rushmore plant. He went there first and examined the three connections which furnish gas in the air blower where air is mixed with gas for use in the furnace and blow pipes.

The fact that everything was working all right at 12 o'clock, when the plant shut down for the noon hour, and that at 1 o'clock, when it was found impossible to get gas, shows that whatever happened transpired in that hour. There was not the slightest evidence to show that the air was pumped in the gas main at the Rushmore plant. The company officials say that such a thing is impossible under ordinary conditions.

Under the direction of Mr. Mellick a force of men was kept busy the entire afternoon pumping the air out of the mains so that the gas could be used. There are several other factories in the East End, which use gas under somewhat similar conditions, but after 1 o'clock or until the air was removed, they were without the usual flow.

The "no gas" complaints were received thick and fast toward night when householders were getting ready to prepare their evening meal, but by 6 o'clock the service was restored as before. Further investigation was made this morning but nothing was found that would lead to the discovery of the cause of the trouble. So far as is known this is the first case of this kind in the experience of the P. S. C. since it took charge of the business of producing gas here.

Will Omit Meeting.

The regular Thursday afternoon meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be omitted tomorrow on account of the absence of so many members who are in attendance at various conventions. The meeting on Thursday, October 15, will be of unusual interest as the delegates to the State W. C. T. U. convention will report.

COUNTY COMMITTEE PLANS FOR MEETINGS

The Union County Republican committee at its meeting in Elizabeth last night devoted its attention to the "pass the hat" proposition, the question of finance for the campaign being discussed in executive session. It was learned today that while there have been some voluntary contributions, the response has not been as general as expected. Plans for mass-meetings as told in The Daily Press yesterday were also discussed.

One of the biggest meetings will be held at the New Plainfield theatre on Thursday night, October 29, when a speaker of national reputation will make an address. Another meeting will be held at the local theatre undre the joint auspices of the city committee and the local club on Thursday night, October 15. At last night's session, it was decided that all requests for meetings about the county should be made direct to County Chairman Smith.

JAMES FLEMING IS THRICE NON-SUITED

In the Somerset County Court at Somerville, yesterday, James Fleming, former proprietor of the Union Meat Market on Somerset street, the borough, was non-suited in three actions brought, one to recover $2,000 from Constable Lemuel B. Pope, another to recover the value of a horse sold to Freeholder Andrew Lutkin and a third to recover the value of a wagon sold to Chief Marshal George Weiss, of the borough. J. Henry Crane and W. S. Angleman represented Mr. Pope, and Charles M. Dolliver was counsel for Mr. Lutkins and Chief Weiss.

Some time ago J. H. Crane obtained judgment for Droste & Snyder, of Newark, in an action on contract against Robert Fleming, to recover $50. Mr. Crane instructed Constable Pope to sell the goods to satisfy the judgment, which he did. Afterward James Fleming claimed that the goods belonged to him, having purchased them from his nephew, Robert Fleming. He then instituted the three suits. Judge Vail, before whom the actions were brought promptly granted a non-suit in each one. E. J. Johnson, Jr., of Somerville, represented the plaintiff.

WHOSE DOG WAS IT?

Two Canines Attacked Webley and He is Unable to Prove Which One Bit Him.

James Webley, colored, of West Fourth street, appeared in the city court, this morning, as complainant against John Hurley, of Richmond street, who he alleged owned a dog that had bitten him. In the hearing before Judge Runyon, Webley admitted that two dogs had chased after him at the time but he had no witnesses to back up his statement that it was Hurley's animal that had done the damage. A man named Dixon had seen it, he said, but was unable to come to court.

Hurley claimed that his dog is a harmless terrier while one of the other animals that attacked Webley is a Boston Bull belonging to John Caulfield. He informed the court he was willing to pay the complainant's doctor bill if his canine was proven at fault and His Honor thought it the best solution of the problem. Webley and Hurley accordingly agreed to meet tonight with Dixon and settle the matter between themselves.

N. P. H. S. Class Elections.

Four classes in the North Plainfield High School have effected organizations and elected officers as follows: Class '09, President, George Parsons; vice-president, Miss Elvira Hoerster; secretary, M. LeRoy Vanderbeek; treasurer, Miss Marguerite Lee. Class '10—President, Preston Dunning; vice-president, Miss Nettie Steiner; secretary-treasurer, Miss Dorothy Randall. Class '11—President, Percy Bailey; vice-president, Herbert Stein; secretary-treasurer, Miss Clara Runyon. Class '12—President, Thorpe Roberts; vice-president, Miss Rose Andrews; secretary, Lawrence French; treasurer, William Taylor.

Mrs. Howard Elliott.

Mrs. Josephine L. Elliott, wife of Howard B. Elliott, of the lower Clinton avenue section, died yesterday afternoon after a lingering illness. She was twenty years old and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Randolph, of South Plainfield. She was of a pleasant disposition and her death is mourned by the community. She is survived by several brothers and sisters. The funeral will be held at Marconnier chapel, Friday afternoon at 2:30.

THAT SIGN DISAPPEARS

But Mr. Rushmore Will Have Another Announcement in Its Place.

JERSEY LAWS PROVOKE HIM.

Would Remove from State Tomorrow—Will Give His Pamphlet Profits to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Early this morning, a force of men were put at work by Samuel W. Rushmore painting out the huge sign on top of his factory which announced his assessment reform campaign. In substitution of the portrait of a "ward-heeler" and the inscription "Tremendous Taxes for Easy Plainfielders. Easy Taxes for men in the ring. Get the Rushmore tax book for who's who and why," the manufacturer will use the sign to announce the date of appearance for his book and the fact that all profits will be donated to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Mr. Rushmore expressed his indignation this morning over taxing methods here in no uncertain terms. He declared that his concern does little if any business in New Jersey and that it is continually being "roasted." He referred to the automobile law and the tax laws as injurious to his industry and declared that he would remove from the State tomorrow if he could find a suitable place for his plant.

Forty per cent. of his business, he says, is done in England.

THE ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY MEETS AT BASKING RIDGE.

The fall meeting of the Presbytery of Elizabeth took place in the First Presbyterian church at Basking Ridge yesterday. About fifty delegates from Elizabeth, Rahway, Plainfield, Westfield, Springfield, Liberty Corner and Cranford were present.

The session was opened with a sermon by Rev. Wilburforce Whitaker, of the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth. He preached on the sixth chapter of Isaiah and took as his text "The Vision of the Prophet." He urged the ministers assembled as they took up their fall work to see the vision of God as Isaiah did.

Dr. Whitaker said that he was no pessimist, but that today is the time of darkness as in Isaiah's time, for there is a decrease in attendance at church service, a decrease in reverence for the Sabbath day, a decrease of the number of men entering the ministry and a decrease in the sense of men's need of the sanctuary and its services.

MRS. WEIGHTMAN'S FUNERAL.

Simple Service Conducted in Grace Church by Rev. Floyd Tomkins, of Philadelphia.

A simple funeral service was held yesterday afternoon in Grace church over the body of Mrs. Aubrey Weightman, whose death occurred last Thursday night at her summer home at Watch Hill, R. I. Rev. Floyd Tomkins, rector of Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia, where Mrs. Weightman attended service during her residence in that city, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. Vicars Stvenson. The service was made doubly impressive by the singing of the choir from Grace church, New York. The attendance was large and included man friends of the family from Philadelphia.

Burial was in the Cox family plot in Hillside cemetery. There were no pall bearers.

Will Lecture on Constantinople.

The Men's Club of the First Baptist church will begin its meetings for the year on Monday night with a stereopticon lecture on "Constantinople," by L. V. F. Randolph, who lately spent some time in the Turkish capitol, and brings fresh information as well as fine views that will be shown for the first time on this occasion. The lecture will be held in the main audience room of the church, and women will be welcome. After the lecture the election of officers for the coming year will be held.

Leonard Mellick Surprised.

A birthday surprise was tendered to Leonard Mellick, of Alton, last night, the affair being arranged by his wife. Covers were laid for twelve and the young man received a number of fine gifts, including a handsome oil painting by his wife, entitled "On the Delaware." Mr. Mellick was completely surprised by his friends, not having the slightest intimation of the intended visit.

MRS. MARIAN MARSH GETS $10,000 LEGACY

Mrs. Marian Marsh, wife of Warren H. Marsh, of Union street, is one of several beneficiaries under the will of her uncle, John Q. Packard, of Marysville, California, whose will was offered for probate at that place yesterday. Mrs. Marsh will receive $10,000 as her portion of the estate which is estimated to be valued at $20,000,000. She is one of eight who are bequeathed like amounts. The estate is divided equally between Edward Winslow Packard, of Salt Lake, and Theodore R. Sheer, of New York, after the several bequests, including the one to Mrs. Marsh, is made.

Mr. Packard, who was a miner, at one time resided in New York. Several years later he went to Salt Lake, and about five years ago moved to Marysville, California, where he died recently. Mrs. Marsh's father was a brother to Mr. Packard. The latter, it is said, made his fortune almost entirely while engaged in the mining business.

The other eastern relatives who receive $10,000 each are as follows: Julia C. Wells and Mary W. Ellis, of Rochester, N. Y.; Emma Hough, Evanston, Ill.; Harriet Cardozo, Albany, N. Y.; Josephine Dorrance, Sandy Point, Md.; Kate Clover, New York city; John Q. Packard, Williamsport, Pa.

NEW BRUNSWICK JOINS IN TRUNK SEWER PLAN

From semi-official sources it was learned today that New Brunswick has practically decided to join in the proposed trunk line sewer investigation, believing that it affords the only practical solution to the difficult problem. Recently, New Brunswick was served with a notice by the State Board of Health informing the officials that they must stop sewering into the Raritan. This has led to a decision to join with other towns in the trunk line proposition.

The engineers, Hering & Fuller, are busy at work on the survey and it is expected that if sewage beds are to be the means of sewage disposal a site for the beds will be picked in a day or two. The tidewater plan is generally favored and will probably be recommended.

There are numerous good reasons why Plainfield is anxious to have the trunk line sewer built. It will afford an opportunity to get rid of its own sewage beds and the land could be disposed of, it is said, at a price that would make it possible for the city to realize nearly two-thirds on its investment there. Another argument in favor of the plan that it would dispose for all time the question of sewage disposal for those towns connected with the trunk line.

LECTURES ON MARVELS OF AMERICAN SCENERY

The Monday Afternoon Club held its first meeting of the season yesterday afternoon in the Hartridge School auditorium (Casino), with a large attendance of members and guests. An illustrated lecture on "Marvels of American Scenery," by Arthur K. Peck, of Boston, opened the subject of the year's study, "Our Country—A Century of Progress."

In spite of delay in adjusting the lantern, the lecture proved to be full of interest, and the pictures were exceptionally fine. The views shown included scenes from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the beauties of the White Mountains, the Franconia Range and Mt. Washington in the Switzerland of America," being followed by views of the great American desert, the grand canyons of the West, Pike's Peak, the wild grandeur of the Rocky mountains, the garden of the gods, the upper and lower Yosemite and Yellowstone Park. The rich coloring of the photographs lent attraction to the scenes vividly described by Mr. Peck, who on mule and burro followed mountain trails and climbed to vantage points of interest.

"The Boundary" at the Bijou.

Manager Harry Roberts, of the Bijou theatre, secured today direct from the Patho Freres company, the big feature picture film, "The Boundary," to be shown this afternoon and tonight. It tells a dramatic story with all the vividness of a theatrical production and is said to be one of the best efforts of the Freres concern. The films at the Bijou are now changed every day. The illustrated song for today is "I don't want the morning to come," one of the latest metropolitan successes.

DIVORCED WOMAN WEDS

Wealthy Mrs. Dietrich, Well Known Here, Married to Man She Eloped With.

QUIET CEREMONY PERFORMED.

Her New Husband was Formerly a Professional Whip in the Employ of Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

News of the marriage of Mrs. Edna Young Dieterich, divorced wife of Albert Dieterich, the young Standard Oil millionaire, and Harry S. Brenchley, professional whip, with whom she eloped to Europe last December, came from Paris yesterday and was confirmed by Mrs Dieterich's mother, Mrs. Albert Young, of Fifty-fourth street, New York. The information is of considerable interest to Plainfielders from the fact that the divorced society matron is widely known in the city and borough. She visited regularly for years at the homes of prominent local families and attneded all the Plainfield horse shows with the exception of last summer's.

The wedding was no shock to New York and Plainfield society—the shock had had several mouths in which to wear itself away since Mr. Dieterich obtained a divorce in April and a final decree in July, with the custody of his little girl. After the first denials, Mrs. Dieterich frankly declared her intention to marry the professional horseman, in whose companionship she said she found the happiness which did not spring from her circumscribed life as a young society matron.

There have been few bigger sensations in New York's society than the elopement of Mrs. Dieterich, former belle of Richmond, Va., heiress to $1,000,000 or more in her own right, beautiful, accomplished and brimming full of vivaciousness. To her husband, her mother and her friends her romance with Brenchley, a young Englishman who had been training and exhibiting Alfred G. Vanderbilt's strings at various society horses shows, was a complete surprise. No one would believe the reports that she had sailed on the same steamer with the horseman, or that, if she had sailed on the same ship, it was other than coincidence.

Mr. Dieterich put his lawyers to investigating and soon learned that his wife and the horse trainer had been much in each other's company when he least suspected that anything was wrong. He found they were together abroad and that Mrs. Dieterich made no concealment of her love for and her intention to marry the whip.

The young millionaire's suit for divorce was not contested, and the wife asked for no alimony. She did fight for possession of her little girl, but that was denied her, on what ground the public was not permitted to learn. The case was heard in private before a referee, and the papers were kept sealed by the court.

HOME REALTY COMPANY TO ERECT TEN HOUSES.

The West End is shortly to undergo a building boom through the action of the Home Real Estate Company in taking steps to erect ten dwelling houses on West Fourth street, Hunter and Evona avenues. All are to be seven-room structures with part improvements. Estimates are now being secured and the work of construction will begin about November 1.

The Home Real Estate Company is comprised of Andrew McCardell, James T. MacMurray, James Stewart, George Wean, Frank H. Smith and Charles H. Hand. These men are acquainted with conditions in the West End and are building the houses to supply a pressing need in that part of the city.

Will Attend State Convention.

Several of the local Christian Endeavor societies will be represented this week at the State convention which convenes at Atlantic City. Among those who have signified their intention of attending the sessions are the following: Warren chapel, Charles F. Windham and Charles Galloway; Faith chapel, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson; Seventh-Day Baptist church, Miss Mildred Greene; Hope chapel, Peter C. Sweeney; Congregational church, Clarence B. LaRue.

Funeral of Mrs. McDonough.

The funeral of Mrs. Bridget Mc Donough, who died at the home of her son in Montclair, was held in St. Joseph's church this morning. The mass was said by Rev. Father Miller in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the following grandsons acting as pall bearers: William and Peter McDonough, of Plainfield; William Jr., Harry, Joseph and James McDonough, of Montclair.

WON'T MAKE GUESSES ON G. O. P. MAJORITY

Neither State Senator Ackerman, County Chairman Smith, nor City Chairman Angleman will commit himself on the probable majority New Jersey will give the Republican party on November 3. The Senator was much interested in Gov. Fort's guess but he declared that he was in no position to make any reliable prediction.

"It's too early altogether to get at the probable majorities and at any rate I consider it foolish to go into the guessing game. I don't see what is gained by it and in fact I never believed in it. No, I make no predictions."

City Chairman W. S. Angleman takes the same view. "It is absurd to come out and predict a 75,000 majority," said Mr. Angleman. "That does the party campaign management more harm than good. I don't take any stock in political predictions and will make none myself."

TWELVE PRISONERS AFTER A POLAK CELEBRATION

As a result of a free-for-all fight at a jamboree in the Polish settlement at South Plainfield, Sunday, twelve prisoners were lined up before Judge Smith in the village court room last night. They were entered on the docket as Stanley and Felix Geravie, Joseph and George Chop, Joe Wachure, Paul Comiskey, Stanley and Frank Solasky, Joseph Glasky, Joseph Boddo, John Borri and John Liszt.

A charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct was preferred against all with the exception of John Borri, who also had to answer for the firing off of a revolver. He owned up to being the culprit and paid a fine of $21 to escape jail. Liszt was stung for $11 and Stanley Solasky got a bargain assessment of $11.60 for his share in the fracas. The others were given a Smithesque shakedown on American laws and the observance of the Sabbath and then told to go home and be good. They all swore by the memory of Louis Kossuth that Marshal William Reilley, who made the arrests, would never have occasion to get after them again.

In the latter respect, George Chop spoke permaturely, however, as after the proceedings, John Bulli and his wife Annie preferred charges against him of making threats and using vile and indecent language. Warrants were sworn out and Chop was once more in the meshes of the law. He will have a hearing before Judge Smith tonight.

PAPER ON ISLAM READ AT MISSIONARY MEETING.

A deeply interesting paper on "Islam, Its Character and Conquest" was presented at the meeting of the Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. The paper prepared by Mrs. James Middledith, was read by Mrs. Robert Lowry, the death of Mrs. Middledith's sister, Mrs. Webb, of Texas, having occurred on Sunday.

Mrs. Middledith told graphically of Mohammedanism, enegmatical, aggressive and monotheistic, but full of fanaticism and tending to illiteracy and appression. Her accounts of the pilgrimages to Mecca and her analysis of the Koran were full of interest and instruction.

The devotional service was led by Miss May Howlett.

$12,000 Fire in Elizabeth.

Fire, starting shortly before 6 p. m., yesterday, in a pile of lime in the coal and lumber yard of B. Jacobson & Son, Third street, Elizabeth, did nearly $12,000 damage before it was extinguished at 8:30 p. m. A big frame shed on which there was a small amount of insurance was totally destroyed, and a boiler and engine which were stored in the shed were badly damaged.

Change in "Li'l Mose" Date.

Because of a change of dates in other cities, the appearance of "Li'l Mose" at the New Plainfield theatre, under the auspices of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., has been set for Friday, October 27, instead of Thursday, October 26, as first announced.

Change in Barber Business.

As Fisk's Opponent.

Walter L. Manning has reconsidered his decision not to run for Mayor and will be the Democratic candidate.

IN MEMORY OF LINCOLN

Plans Underway for Union County's Celebration of Honest Abe's Centennial.

COMMITTEE OF 25 NAMED.

Chairman Hale to Call Meeting to Be Held in Elizabeth Soon—To Be Non-Partisan in Character.

Plans are underway for an appropriate celebration of the Abraham Lincoln centennial in Union county. The event falls on Feb. 12 next and not only the Nation and the States but many counties, cities and towns throughout the Union, which the Martyr-President preserved, will hold demonstrations.

Preliminary arrangements have been made by a number of prominent citizens throughout the county for a suitable celebration which will have no political significance. The idea is to make the affair absolutely non-partisan in character and it is believed that success will crown that effort. E. W. Hale, of Cranford, has been made temporary chairman, and he has arranged to hold a meeting of representative men of the county when the proposition will be thoroughly discussed.

Chairman Hale has appointed a committee of twenty-five, some of whom are Plainfielders. Among these are Mayor Charles J. Fisk and State Senator Ackerman. The mayors of Elizabeth, Westfield, Summit and Rahway have also been named as have other men in those towns.

The first meeting of this commimittee will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, at Elizabeth, at a date to be announced by Chairman Hale.

Abraham Lincoln, the sixteenth President of the United States, was born on February 12, 1809, near Hodgenville, Kentucky. He was a son of Thomas Lincoln and was of English descent.

ENOUGH MONEY LEFT TO FINISH 'BUNGALOW'

Since the meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, the police board has awakened to the fact that it has $10,000 remaining of its annual appropriation of $30,000 and that it, therefore, will be an easy matter to complete the improvements as planned at the police "bungalow." When the question came up Monday night, Chairman Frank Randolph, of the police committee, was not able to tell off-hand how much money there was left of the department appropriation.

The fact that the improvements contemplated at an expense of $1,247.50 was omitted from the original appropriation for the building, has caused considerable criticism among taxpayers, who declare that it shows rather poor business management. One citizen in speaking of the matter today, said that the committee as well as the architects must have known that sidewalks, drains, artificial stone for the court-yard, etc., would be needed, but that it must have been an oversight not to include this work in the original appropriation. The Council meets Friday night and make the additional appropriation as requested.

EUGENE V. DEBS AND "RED SPECIAL" EN ROUTE.

Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist candidate for President, accompanied by a number of Socialist candidates for various offices, was in New York on Sunday. According to the schedule of the "Red Special," now making a cross-country tour, it will reach Trenton on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, Saturday night at 6:15, stopping several places en route to this city, where it is expected on Monday noon. Accompanying Mr. Debs and his party will be the "Red Special" band, composed of volunteer musicians, who will render a program of international selections.

Since leaving Chicago, August 31, the "Red Special" has passed through fifteen States and has covered a distance of nearly 11,000 miles. According to Mr. Chase, the special train will cost the Socialist party $30,000. The tour of the "Red Special" will end at its starting point Chicago, November 1.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

August Kirchner, for nearly a half century a resident of Richfield, dropped dead yesterday while conversing with a friend. It is supposed that he was a victim of apoplexy.

Township Committeeman Samuel C. Locke, of Hurfville, picked a pimple on his hand more than a week ago, and is now having a serious time with blood poisoning.

Attacked by dogs in Camden yesterday, Alice Wens, fourteen years old, of 731 Pearl street, and Mildred Lewallen, five years old, of 578 Line street, sustained injuries to the legs. The wounds were cauterized at Cooper Hospital.

Biting his tongue nearly in half as he stumbled in the street yesterday, Hugh Maxwell, five years old, of 1114 Maple street, Camden, suffered such terrible agony that he was hurried to Cooper Hospital. It required a number of stitches to close the wound.

A $60,000 clubhouse, modeled after the Union League, Philadelphia, is now being promoted by the Business Men's League of Atlantic City. They have selected a site, and are now busy arranging for the financing of the plan. The league now has enrolled a majority of merchants of the resort.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., expects to initiate two new members Friday night.

AN ORDINANCE

to amend an ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance concerning the construction, maintenance and repair of sidewalks," approved April 10, 1899, as amended.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Section 1 of the ordinance to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby amended by adding at the end of said section the following:

That all sidewalks of flag stone or concrete of not more than four feet in width which shall hereafter be constructed under this ordinance shall be constructed so that the nearest edge of the sidewalks of flag stone or concrete shall be the following distances from the curb line, that is to say: on sidewalks having a width of twenty feet or more between the property line and the curb line, a distance of eight feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of twelve feet or more and less than twenty feet between the property line and the curb line, a distance of six feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of ten feet or more and less than twelve feet between the property line and the curb line, a distance of four feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of less than ten feet between the property line and the curb line, said walks of flag stone or concrete shall be laid so that the side lines shall be at equal distance respectively from the property line and the curb line; except that on Jackson Avenue all sidewalks of flag stone or concrete of not more than four feet in width shall be laid so that the nearest edge of the walks of flag stone or concrete shall be thirteen feet from the curb line, and all such sidewalks on Leland Avenue shall be so laid that the nearest edge of the walks of flag stone or concrete shall be five feet from the curb line; provided, that in any case on application to the Common Council for that purpose, the Common Council may by resolution specially direct the distance which any sidewalks of flag stone or concrete may be laid from the curb line as the Common Council shall deem to be for the best interests of the City.

Adopted by the Common Council, October 5, 1908. Approved by the Acting Mayor, October 5, 1908.

R. I. Tolles, Acting Mayor.
Attest:- J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

The coats are made 36 inches long and lined with gray satin; sizes are 14, 16 and 18—large enough for small sized women; the suits are so well made, so stylish, and so good looking that we would be justified in marking them $20, but we are going to place this lot on sale tomorrow at only.. $12.75

Sale of Knit Underwear.

These are seconds but you wouldn't know it. Just because the mills are hypercritical in their inspection of the undergarments they turn out they refuse to allow any piece to go into their regular stocks as perfect if there is a slight missed stitch or a tiny oil spot from the machine on any of the garments.

These so-called seconds came to us very cheaply, and we are going to pass them on to you at prices proportionate to what we paid.

Some of the garments in this sale are perfect, having been used for samples and they come from some of the best English and American makers.

Lot 1. Women's Union Suits; white; ribbed; medium weight cotton; neatly trimmed; high neck, long sleeves; ankle lengths; would sell in the regular way at 69c; they go in this sale at .39

The Nationals, of Perth Amboy, will meet the Clinton Avenues on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock. This will be the last game of the season for the local aggregation and they will try to make it a victory.

Penn. State, aside from being an aducational institution, apparently is a mill for turning out major league baseball material. Two of the Highlanders' youngsters who have made good in their brief playing with the team of the hilltop were graduated from Penn. State—McIlveen, who captained the team which represented the college in 1906, a right fielder, and Cree, outfielder, who played second and was captained at Penn. State this last spring. Coulson, who until recently was with Cincinnati, played left field with Penn. State in 1907 and 1908.

Compulsory baseball for the fair sex! That is what is to be introduced for first-year students at the University of Michigan next spring. Basketball and cross-country walking also will be indulged in perforce by the entering girls, according to a ruling of the athletic powers that be. The co-eds have a field all their own. Out-of-door athletics for them began yesterday and work is well under way toward the completion of a baseball diamond.

GOLF.

An extra attraction at the Plainfield Country Club tomorrow afternoon will be a mixed foursome. A large number of players have signified their intention of playing.

In regard to new Simplex clubs, Golf Illustrated has this to say: "We have been experimenting lately with a lofter made by the Simplex company which certainly deserves to be better known. It is made on the well-known Simplex principle, with the shaft inserted in the middle of the head after the fashion of a croquet mallet. The striking face is an oblong parellerogram, but the club-head tapers off aft into a point, which gives it the appearance of a tomahawk or other lethal weapon. But the balance and lie of the club are perfect, and for the playing of short chip-shots just off the green, or for negotiating stimies, it is extremely efficacious. No cut or stabbing is required, and if the ball is simply hit truly the club does the rest, putting on a great deal of stop. It must be said, however, that if the ball is lying only slightly cupped we should prefer the ordinary iron club, since the broad base of the Simplex lofter prevents one getting down to the ball. But most courses are now so grassy that this is a matter of little importance, as the ball is practically always sitting up.

"The question has been raised whether these mallet-headed clubs are included in the intimation made in the new code of rules that the rules of golf committee will not sanction any substantial departure from the traditional and accepted form and make of golf clubs, which, in its opinion, consists of a plain shaft and a head which contains no mechanical contrivance, such as springs.

"Some people hold that this would exclude the Simplex clubs, but it would be a hard ruling to say that clubs made on the mallet principle, which, after all, is the earliest and simplest form of hitting weapon made kith a shaft and head, was illegal. The mallet, pure and simple, was the clue in jeu de mail, one of golf's immediate ancestors, and the Simplex clubs are merely mallets scientifically made and adjusted as to weight and lie for golfing purposes. Their shafts are perfectly plain, and their heads contain no mechanical contrivance such as springs, the wooden clubs, in fact, being quite as simple in construction as any ordinary driver or brassie."

College players will be prominent in this week's golf. There is no long wait for action, for the play began yesterday at the Brae Burn Country Club near Boston. It is a course of the stereotyped order, formal in arrangement and well kept, the only variety to the play being in the undulations of the land. A couple of the hill holes are very good golf. Ellis Knowles, who won the intercollegiate championship last year at the Nassau Country Club and also Robert Abbott are now out of Yale, so that literally the title will not have a defender. Yale holds the team championship.

Players from Yale have won six, Harvard three and Princeton three of the individual championships. The team championships have had an even break between the two leading colleges, Harvard and Yale each having had six victories. Last year at the Nassau Country Club Yale beat Harvard in the semi-final by twenty holes and 13 points to nine holes and 6½ points, and Princeton beat the University of Pennsylvania by eleven holes and 9½ points to three holes and 2½ points. In the final Yale was as undaunted as a lion. The score was Yale twenty-eight holes and 20 points to a grim zero for the the University of Pennsylvania. The team counting of the collegians is one point for each match plus one-half the holes up.

The colleges that have entries in the tournament are Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Columbia and Williams. Williams has been the top notcher in the New England Intercollegiate League for two years and now for the first time ventures into the greater competition. Regarding the makeup of the teams the men have in most cases been decided on. A joke at Garden City last week was that Yale might have good golfers but Harvard would have wilder. As to Harvard's full team H. H. Wilder is captain, and he has selected W. F. Morgan, Jr., Templeton Briggs, E. T. Clary, Arthur Sweeney, C. Lanegan and J. W. Coe.

FOOTBALL.

The North Plainfield High School football team will play its first game on Saturday with Rahway High School. October 21 has been reserved for Bernardsville.

In their first game of the season, played against the Springfield Training School eleven last Saturday, the Princeton men did not go in and demolish their opponents by a good deal. They did not tear over and through and around their less strong opponents as they have often done in the early part of their season against teams scarcely in their class. The Tigers had had only two days of scrimmmaging when they lined up against Springfield, and that in itself was sufficient to account for a good deal of their raggedness; but aside from that if there was any conclusion to be derived from the fact that they were not as violent as formerly in the first game it was more of a comfort than a discouragement. Here is one Princeton eleven which didn't play its head off at the outset, and it is possible that fewer touchdowns in October may mean more in November.

All along the line the big fellows are making haste slowly in their development, and so far as their games against each other later are concerned, low scores at this time do not mean much save that fundamentals are being mastered before cutting loose with vicious team attack. The latter isn't missing entirely, for already there have been evidences of strong concerted rallying for a gain at Harvard, Yale and Pennsylvania, but it isn't the all in all at this stage of the game and is streaky and uncertain.

The Princeton-Springfield game was as interesting an opening battle as one could wish to see. Springfield was no easy mark and played a nimble, aggressive game. A pronounced weakness, however, was in handling and gauging kicks, and better work in that regard would have held Princeton to a smaller score. In a measure this was offset by ability to foot the Tigers with the forward pass, in the first half particularly. In the second half the Jerseymen diagnosed the forward pass better, and that was one sign of mental adaptability which was encouraging. Princeton's use of the outside kick pointed to a future proficiency in this play which may come in handy and is but following out the clever use of the play made by the Tigers last year. There isn't anybody in sight yet, however, who can get it away with the accuracy or suddenness that Harlan did. Had Princeton been playing a team last Saturday that followed the ball as well as she did she would not have recovered the ball so often on kicks.

The call has been issued at Yale for candidates for the 1908-09 soccer team. Of the fifteen players who formed the championship team which represented the New Haven College last spring five have been lost by graduation. There is good scrub material, however, and freshmen are eligible, so that prospects are far from unpromising. During the fall months games will be played with the Crescent Athletic Club. The spring schedule follows: March 13—Columbia at New York; March 27—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; April 7—Cornell at New Haven; April 10—Haverford at Haverford.

Sport on the gridiron at Swarthmore is to be witnessed this year, notwithstanding the fact that intercollegiate football has been abolished. Interclass games will be played, the idea being that the spirit may be kept up and the players kept in form in the event that the faculty should take a more favorable view toward intercollegiate football in 1909. The Alumni Athletic Association has engaged W. G. Crowell, Swarthmore '06, as coach. At the present time the senior class has the best prospects in the interclass series. Kreuger, Rowlands, Max Miller, Al Miller, Coble and F. Wilbur of the varsity eleven of 1907 are seniors; McGovern, Johnson and Bengaten of last year's team are juniors, and Eberle and Perkins are the sophs.

The boys of the North Plainfield High School have organized a second football team, with Andrew Stiglitz as manager, and Edmund La Porte as captain. The team averages 120 pounds and would like to schedule games with clubs of like weight. Address all communications to Edward Scott, 84 Fairview avenue, North Plainfield.

THIEVES BUSY IN SOMERVILLE.

A Number of Houses Entered by Nervy Burglars, Who Have Baffled Police.

Burglars, who up to the present time have baffled the Somerville police force, have made daily visits to the wealthy residential section of the town during the past week. Sunday the residences of Hyde Demercy and William Davenport, on Altamont place, were entered. The thieves were frightened from the Demercy residence refore they could secure any booty.

At the Davenport home they stole a new suit of clothes, and also carried off his shirt and cuffs and left him without ready money enough to buy a morning newspaper, as his pocketbook was in the trousers of the stolen suit. Mr. Davenport heard the thieves as they were leaving the house. He telephoned to the police who went to the Davenport house on a run, but no trace could be found of the thieves. The residence of Frederick Disborough, on High street, and that of Daniel Beekman, on West Main street, were also entered. At the Disborough residence the thieves sat down to a light luncheon in the dining room. They ate preserves and pudding with solid silver spoons which they left behind. They got several boxes of cigars and a small amount of money at the Beekman house. In every house entered the burglars have not touched silver or jewelry.

Chestnut Burr With Six Nuts.

Frank Starkey, a carpenter, of Boonton, went chestnutting yesterday near Montville, and picked up what is regarded as a distinct curiosity. He found a chestnut burr containing six full sized nuts. On the same twig was an empty burr which gave evidence of having contained seven nuts, also of good size.

Mrs. Abraham VanCleef, of Elm place, is recovering from an injury to her foot.

William M. Smith, of Elmwood place, is home from a visit with his sister at Orange.

Mrs. Elvain VanName, of Madison avenue, is visiting relatives on Staten Island for a few days.

Elston M. French, of Somerset street, who has been in Cincinnati on a business trip, will return home tomorrow.

ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED

Trinity Reformed Endeavorers Mark Completion of Twenty third Year.

ENTERTAINMENT IS PROVIDED.

Officers Elected and Reports Read —Now Have Forty-six Active Members Enrolled.

Interesting reports, election of officers, combined with a fine program of instrumental music interspersed with games and concluding with refreshments combined to make the twenty-third anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, an enjoyable affair, last night. It was held inthe lecture room of the church and was well attended by members of the society and friends.

The society has a record of which it may feel proud and success has attended the earnest efforts of officers and members. The report of the recording secretary, Mrs. Franklin Monroe Farnham, for the past year, was a source for much encouragement. At the beginning of the year there were sixty-two active and sixteen associate members, a gain of eight for the year. Three members were transferred from the active to the honorary list, eleven from the active to the absent list, seven were dropped and four associate members were transferred to the active list. During the year one member was lost by death, Raymond Scribner.

The present membership is forty-six active and seven associate. The total attendance for the year was 1,508, an average of thirty-one per week. The largest attendance was at a union meeting with the Juniors on May 7, when seventy Endeavorers were present. During the year $3 was given to the State Endeavor Union, $15 to the Italian mission of the city, a dozen and half dolls divided between Miss Sarah Curry's work and that of Miss Dasorris' Italian mission, New York; $10 to the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church in America, for the Indian work; $10 for the Board of Foreign Missions for the Arabian work, and $11.64 for both the Boards of Home and Foreign Missions for miscellaneous purposes. On June 13, $25 was realized as profit from a lawn festival. The committees were all reported as having accomplished much work.

As treasurer of the society, Cornelius Schenck presented his report. This showed total receipts for the year to be $411.48 with disbursements of $70.34. With the balance left over from last year there is now $54 in the treasury.

These officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Miss Harriett Randall; first vice-president, Fred Soper, Jr.; second vice-president, LeRoy Layton; secretary, Russell Doeringer; treasurer, Cornelius Schenck; corresponding secretary, Miss May Randolph.

During the evening there was excellent instrumental selections by an orchestra of three pieces, Martin A. Korff, violin; Miss May Randolph, piano, and Elmer D. Wheeler, flute. There were also two piano duets by Miss Harriett Randall and Miss Lucy Coriell. In addition the Endeavorers enjoyed playing several interesting games, including "Finding the Striking Lady," and three stunts, a tape race, a snowball race and a game called "Piff-Paff-Pouff."

Following the program, refreshments were served by the social and reception committee which had charge of the affair. The committee comprises Miss Harriett Randall, chairman; Miss May Randolph, Miss Eliza Dufford, Miss Cora Gano, Miss Alice Vroom, F. L. Soper, Jr., George Cole, Ellsworth Bennett and Elmer Gayle.

W.C.T.U. COMMENDS FORT

Women's Organization Head Advocates Punishment for Excise Violations.

MRS. EMMA BOURNE'S REVIEW.

State's Union Received $5,836 Last Year—The Total Membership Is Now Nearly 9,000.

At yesterday's session of the thirty-fifth annual convention of the W. C. T. A. at Atlantic City, Mrs. Emma G. Bourne, of Newark, State president, delivered her address, in which she praised Governor Fort in his attitude on the strict enforcement of the excise law. She said in part:

"Never before has there been such an abundance of convincing facts which will win the day for us just as soon as the people absorb them. Never before were the newspapers and magazines so willing to publish them.

"We believe in one standard of purity for men and women. This was a radical statement when Frances E. Willard uttered it. Today our best educators are teaching the same. Purity associations are multiplying, and though the terrible 'white slave traffic' exists, recent exposures have brought about warfare against it, and we surely will give more study to the educational and preventive side of this study, laying aside false modesty in dealing with the problem."

Reviewing the progress made in New Jersey, Mrs. Bourne said: "This State is moving forward. Governor Fort has taken a firm stand on the excise question, and has demanded the enforcement of existing laws against the selling of intoxicants on Sunday. The reports of the State Excise Committee appointed to investigate conditions, make one wonder at the official indifference which has not only permitted, but encouraged, the defiance of these laws, and the utter absence of interest to enforce them. Conditions are attached to every license. A nominal fine for a penalty is no deterrent. Imprisonment or forfeiture of license would be effective, if enforced."

In conclusion the speaker said: "The halcyon days are coming, when the man who wastes his money on drink will have that temptation and opportunity removed; when the butcher, grocer, baker and tailor will not struggle in competition with the saloon and ginmill for an existence."

The treasurer reported a total receipt of $5,836 for the year. Disbursements aggregated $4,712, leaving in the treasury a balance of $1,12. More than $16,000 had been expended by the several unions in furthering their local work.

The report of Mrs. I. H. Demarest, corresponding secretary, showed a total membership of 8,718.

Last night's program included a mass-meeting on the Steel Pier, orchestra music and addresses.

HOLY CROSS WOMEN HOLD BUSY SESSION

The Women's Guild of the Church of the Holy Cross held its first meeting for the season yesterday afternoon in the parish house, from 3 to 6 o'clock, marking the resumption of fall and winter activities. There were about fifty members and friends of the guild present. The entertainment chapter was in charge, and after the several new members and strangers were welcomed, the regular program was taken up. Rev. George A. Warner, rector, conducted the devotional exercises.

The guild decided to raise $1,000 during the coming year for home purposes. Then followed the nomination of officers to be elected at the November meeting. The executive board decided to increase its membership to include nine women. Six new members were elected. The following heads of committees were chosen for the year:

Altar, Miss Ida Davis; junior auxiliary, Miss Iola Moore; women's auxiliary, Mrs. C. E. G. Larrsson; periodical, Mrs. W. W. Rowley; entertainment, Mrs. J. O. Stevens; bag, Mrs. Hiram Woodruff. The report of the treasurer showed a balance of $100, and all departments were found to be in an excellent condition spiritually and otherwise.

Funeral of John Bulmer.

The funeral of John Bulmer, who died at the Soldiers' Home at Kearney, was held at Cole's undertaking rooms this afternoon. Rev. L. B. Howard officiated and burial was made in the Methodist cemetery.

Arrangements have been made by the Socialists of Plainfield for a big reception on the occasion of its Presidential candidate's visit to this city on Monday. Eugene V. Debs and his fellow-campaigners will arrive here at 11:35 and will be greeted by a couple hundred members of his party. The "Red Special" will be placed on a side track and from there Mr. Debs will make a speech. D. Di Lonardo will board the train at Bound Brook and on behalf of the Plainfield Socialists will greet the standard bearer.

Baxter's Dictum Stands.

It was expected that at a meeting of the State Board of Education yesterday there would be some consideration of an appeal from the recent decision of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles J. Baxter that pupils who do not wish to take part in or attend the religious exercises at the opening of a school may remain and join their classes later without being marked tardy. There has been no appeal filed, however, and there was no discussion of the subject.

MISS BOWMAN LIBRARIAN

Public Library Directors' Committee Makes a Report of Public Interest.

FUNDS ARE SORELY NEEDED.

A New Building or a Wing to Present Structure Imperative—More Volumes Are Solicited.

The special committee appointed by the trustees of the Plainfield Public Library has filed this report:

"Something over a year ago, a committee of your board, consisting of two members of the undersigned committee and the president of the Library, Col. Tyler, suggested to you a budget for the year then to follow.

"Upon reviewing the actual operations of the Library during the past year, the members of this committee are impressed with the fidelity and reasonable judgment with which the lines of the budget, then adopted by the board, have been observed and followed.

"The sum of $3,000 was therein calculated as one that might be required during the year to meet the salaries of the librarian, of three regular assistants and janitor, and to provide a small allowance for extra assistance.

"The actual expenditures during the year for these salaries and wages have been kept well within the estimate made.

"The sum appropriated for purchasing books was $2,500. During the year ending June 1, 1908, the amount paid out for books was $1,519.47, and, since that date, further bills for books have been paid, amounting to $687.31, and other small books purchases are going carefully forward—all of these payments for books being outside of cost of periodicals and binding. These payments for books are exclusive of $373.60 paid from Babcock fund.

"The estimates made last year for fuel, lighting, insurance and repairs proved fairly practical, and all bills for these and other purposes have been promptly met. The tax monies for the year 1907 are now about all in hand, and no further important amounts of revenue from this public source can be counted on before about the close of the year. At present the treasurer of the Library has a working balance of $2,634.30, sufficient, with close economy, to meet necessary disbursements until the taxes of 1908 come in.

"Your committee suggests the following budget to cover outgoes of a fiscal year to begin October 1, 1908, and to end October 1, 1909.

Estimated Receipts.

Income from city	$7,500
Other probable income; fines, interest, etc	500
	$8,000

Disbursements.

Salaries:
Librarian	$ 960
Three assistant libarians and extra assistance	1,560
Janitor	480
Periodicals and binding		750
Stationery and printing		350
Fuel		250
Lights		250
Repairs and insurance		250
New accommodations for books, shelving, etc		400
New books		2,500
Postage, express, telephone and other services and sundries		250
		$8,000

The splendid gift of $10,000 made to the Library in the will of our lamented friend and president, Col. Mason W. Taylor, has been received and invested, and the interest on it will be devoted, under direction of the board, to the purchase of books of permanent value. This will leave the more free the general fund of the Library for the accommodation of the reading public and for a moderate supply of current literature of interesting and miscellaneous character.

"We are still seriously cramped in two directions. We need suitable quarters for the accommodation of the library we have, and we greatly need more good books of every variety, so that we may the more adequately serve the purpose for which our institution was created.

"Meantime, we have great cause for encouragement in the marked increase of public interest and appreciation. The enlargement of circulation even during the summer months has been very marked and the reading room is extensively patronized. The people of Plainfield have learned of our improving conditions and know that, although they cannot yet expect to find with us everything they want nor even an abundant supply of new books, our larger ability for buying books is, nevertheless, enabling us to approach more nearly to the ideals and expectations which attach to a modern, well-appointed public library.

"It is agreeable to welcome gifts of books from time to time, and to welcome, also, occasional gifts to our art collection. The number of books in actual use in the library, exclusive of those which have been worn out and discarded, is 35,818, of which 27,599 are in the general library and 8,219 are in the Babcock Scientific library.

"When your committee was appointed, it was understood that consideration should be given broadly to the work and compensation of the operating staff, and your committee take pleasure in reporting that they find increased efficiency manifested on the part of the librarian and her assistants, and they are especially gratified in recommending that the title of "acting librarian," which has been borne by Miss Florence M. Bowman during the past year, shall be changed to librarian. She has abundantly demonstrated her zeal and capacity for the position; and the faithful and intelligent work which she has done in this institution for a dozen years past has admirably aided in fitting her for the responsibilities of late resting upon her. Your committee in proposing her advancement recommend that her salary be fixed at $80 per month; that the salary of the janitor remain as now; that the compensation of the first assistant librarian be fixed at $45 per month and that the pay of the other two assistants be $35 per month each. This will leave a very small margin for the employment, or partial employment, of an extra assistant when and as required.

"Very respectfully,
"L. V. F. RANDOLPH,
"W. F. MERRILL,
"J. HERBERT CASE."

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A number of old friends and neighbors attended the funeral services of the late Bridget McDonough, held this morning at 10:30 from St. Joseph Roman Catholic church, Plainfield. Mrs. McDonough was a resident here for over fifty years. Several years after the death of her husband she sold the homestead on the Valley road and has since been making her home with her son James, at Montclair, where she died Monday.

The local High School pupils are able to enjoy, to a certain extent, the special car which the Public Service Corporation has put on for the Dunellen pupils. The pupils from here can catch the car at the terminal by taking the 7:45 car, where it has been customary in the past to take the 7:30.

The installation and reception to Rev. Franklin Matthews, which will be held tomorrow night, will be one of the largest services of its kind ever held in the old historic church. Invitations have been extended to all, irrespective of creed, the idea being to give the new pastor and his family a town welcome as well as a Baptist church one.

The Harper Fur Mill, which closed down several months ago on account of slack times, has resumed work, starting yesterday morning with a reduced force of employes.

Stephen Emmons and family, who have been occupying the Hetfield cottage on Front street, for the past year, have removed to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miltner, of Glenside, entertained a house party of New York friends over Sunday.

Fanwood Bucket Engine Company holds its regular monthly meeting tonight in the company room.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church, will hold a five and ten cent sociable tomorrow evening. Much interest is shown in the event, as it is known that the women will introduce several original ideas in the entertainment line.

The horse, which strayed into Justice Smith's garden, doing much damage, has been claimed by William Mobus, of Plainfield, who paid for keep and advertising.

Berry's Case Before Fort.

Governor Fort was informed verbally yesterday by Peter Backes of the nature of the testimony taken at Toms River by the State Excise Commission as to the charges of George B. Miller against Judge Maja L. Berry, of Ocean county. The Governor asked for a copy of the testimony, and pending its delivery no action will be taken by the Governor.

Andrew Mack in "Arrah-Na-Pogue," at New Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

When Andrew Mack was in Australia last winter he wrote twelve new songs, which he will add to his repertoire during the coming season; one of these he has named "Finnegan and His Flute," and he will sing it at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, accompanied by a chorus of twenty voices.

A cute little story is told of Baby Beland, the wonderful little child actress who will please the children in Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at the New Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and night. Baby coming in from her walk one morning, informed her mother that she had seen a lion in the park. No amount of persuasion or reasoning could make her vary her statement one hairbreadth. That night, when she slipped down on her knees to say her prayers, her mother said, "Baby, ask God to forgive you for that fib." Baby hid her face for a moment. Then she looked straight into her mother's eyes, her own eyes shining like stars, and said, "I did ask him, mamma, dearest, and he said, 'Don't mention it, Baby that big yellow dog has often fooled me.'"

It is the big affair in the realm of musical comedy that tells the plainest and most plausible story of all around success, in these progressive days, and that is the reason why theatrical managers are striving so hard to outshine competition. "Gay New York," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night with its carload of scenic grandeur and with more than half a hundred ladies and gentlemen who have achieved fame in one direction or another, by the arts employed towards finishing an entertainment of zest and quality, is perhaps one of the most glaring examples of what managerial extravagance can accomplish, for according to well authentic reports, it fairly outstrips in magnitude of production and overshadows in fun and music talent any similar enterprise before the public, besides in the general beauty of its female contingent it absolutely excels. Pretty girlish faces and the magnificence of costume details are potent factors in an up-to-date musical comedy, and the assurance is given that "Gay New York" furnishes a proper appreciation of these requisites. The desire to pass judgment upon this offering is especially great, as it is announced that additional interest is given it, for the reason of a capital story told in the presentation of an enormous quantity of novel and effective features.

The comic opera success—with a thrill—"The Red Mill," by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, which was presented an entire season at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York city, and engagements of three months each in Boston and Chicago, is an early attraction for this city and one that has already aroused the keenest interest, especially among those who are not classed as a regular theatre-goer. The date set is next Tuesday night, and there is little question but what the theatre will be sold out at the close of the first day's seat sale. Charles Dillingham's company has been carefully organized and embraces a clever lot of principals, while the chorus is said to be unusually comely and talented, including as it does the six little Dutch Kiddies, who carried New York by storm, and who form the nucleus of an admirable organization. Refinement is the keynote of the production, and to this feature are added an interesting story, popular and catchy music, together with picturesque scenery and quaint costumes. The cast to be seen here includes Joseph Whitehead as Con Kidder; Neil McNeil as Kid Connor; W. H. Brown, Harry Carter, Milton Dawson, Frederick McGee, Maurice Lavigne, Charles Hopkins and the Misses Anna McNabb, Marguerite Fry, Sadie Kirby, Edmace de Dreux and a chorus of fifty including the famous sextette of German musicians imported for this company.

REST MADE EASY.

There Will Be Less Sleeplessness When Plainfield People Learn This.

Can't rest at night with a bad back,

A lame, a weak or an aching one.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for bad backs.

They cure every form of kidney ills,

From common backache to diabetes.

They are endorsed by Plainfield people.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Though I have had no occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills in the past few years, I value them as highly as ever. My kidneys were in a weakened condition for years and the backaches I endured were of a severe nature. Many nights I was unable to sleep at all and when I awoke in the morning, my limbs would be so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Every cold I caught settled in my kidneys and increased my aches and pains. I doctored with physicians but none of the medicines I used did me any good. At length I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured them at Randolph's Pharmacy and began taking them. They went directly to the seat of my trouble, dispelling the pain and making me feel like a new person."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

CAMPAIGN IN STATE TO BEGIN IN EARNEST

The Republican campaign in this State will begin in earnest this week, and until Election Day the slogan of "No free trade" will be heard in every nook and cranny of the State. There can be no question that the tariff is the issue of the campaign in New Jersey, with its great industrial population, and every effort will be made by the speakers to point out to the workingmen of the State the disaster which would follow the election of Bryan and the wiping out of the protective tariff.

The State committee has obtained the services of men known the country over to talk in New Jersey, among them being Vice-President Fairbanks, James S. Sherman, the candidate for Vice-President; United States Senators Thurston and Beveridge and many Congressmen. It is also hoped to have Mr. Taft and Governor Hughes each make at least one speech in the State.

Ex-Governor E. C. Stokes opened the campaign in Somerset county last night at a big campaign rally at Bernardsville. Tomorrow night the campaign in Hudson will be opened by Governor Fort. Assistant Prosecutor James McCarthy, the New Idea leader, will also speak at this meeting, to show to the State that the Republicans of Hudson have buried their factional troubles and are going to work unitedly for the election of Taft and Sherman and the entire Republican ticket.

Something like fifty meetings have ben arranged by the State committee, and before Election Day arrives the Smith-Nugent machine will find that it has a pretty big job on its hands to get a majority of the voters to cast their ballots for Bryan.

JUDGE HENRY SCORES THE NEWARK OFFICIALS

Judge Thomas G. Henry, an independent "Real Democracy" candidate for election as Mayor of Newark, yesterday began an active campaign with a noonday meeting at the entrance to a large leather factory in the eastern section of the city. He scored the administration of Mayor Jacob Haussling, who is seeking re-election. He declared that the City Hall, because of the character of the administration and of some city employes put in office during the last two years, is a camping place for "gamblers and crooks," and that the conditions are such as to bring the blush of shame to the face of every citizen who wants decency and good government.

He also declared that Board of Works Commissioner Bock, the Republican nominee for Mayor, is too much concerned with Public Service Corporation interests for the good of the city.

In the evening Judge Henry made addresses in other sections of the city, in the Eighth and Ninth wards. He will make a lively campaign from now until the night before election.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Copyright, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

It was some little time after this, while Faust was feeling somewhat irritated at the absence of information from Langdon, that he had an interview with Crane.

"I want you to back The Dutchman to win fifty thousand for me over the Brooklyn Derby," the latter said.

"But there's no winner book on it," objected Faust.

"That's just where your cleverness will come in," suavely answered Crane. "There's no hurry, and there are always people looking for foolish money. There's one such in Chicago, O'Leary, and I fancy they could even be found in New York. But you ought to get fifty to one, about it, if you put it on easy."

"I see you have Diablo entered for the Brooklyn," Faust put out as a feeler. "Don't you want a commission worked on him?"

"I didn't enter him; that was somebody else's foolishness, and I don't want to back him."

"He's a hundred to one."

"A thousand would be short odds, I should say," answered Crane. "But wait a bit. I bought him just to—well, I took him from some people who were tired of his cannibal ways, and promised to have a small bet on him the first time he ran, for—for the man." The equivocation was really a touch of delicacy. "You might take the odds to fifty for me; there's not one chance in a million of his starting, but I might forget all about this little matter of the bet, even if I were foolish enough to pay post-money on him."

"Hadn't I better dribble on more from time to time, if he has a chance?"

"Not of my money, thanks!" The "thanks" clipped like a steel trap, and the business was completed.

Faust went away more than ever suspicious of Crane and Diablo. That fifty dollars being put on for anybody else was bunkum. What was Crane up to anyway? If he really meant to back the horse he would not have started with such a trifle. Perhaps Diablo had been stuck in the Brooklyn simply to see how the handicapper would rate him.

Faust was convinced that Crane had some big coup in view; he would wait a little, and at the first move have a strong play himself.

XVII.

Langdon was a consummate trainer, a student of horse character. He knew that while biniodide of mercury would blister and put right a bowed tendon, or the firing iron take the life out of a splint, that a much finer knowledge than this was requisite to get full-hearted work out of a thoroughbred. Brain must be pitted against brain; so he studied his horses; and when Diablo came into his hands, possessed of a mind disease, he worked over him with considerable intelligent patience.

At first there was little encouragement over Diablo, but almost by accident Langdon discovered that the black's bad temper was always fanned into a blaze by the sight of the boy Shandy.

Then came a glint of hope. Diablo took a fancy to Westley, the jockey, who was experimentally put on his back in the working gallop. After that Westley took Diablo under his care, and the big horse began to show a surprising improvement.

Crane had been quite honest in his statement that he thought Diablo a bad horse, but his having been entered by Porter in the "Brooklyn" suggested the possibility that his former owner must have seen some merit in the horse. At any rate, he advised Langdon to give Diablo a patient trial

As the winter turned into April he intimated to Crane that it was time for them to decide the placing of the horses and suggested that they try them out. Crane had already decided to race The Dutchman this year in his own name and not in Langdon's. If The Dutchman came up to expectation they could give him a slow preparation up to Derby time; they could find out whether Diablo was worth keeping for—well, for Morris Park or Gravesend, or they could hurry him on a little, and start him at Aqueduct.

On the day set for the trial, Crane went down to Gravesend. When he got to the trainer's house he found the latter waiting for him.

"I sent the horses over with the boys," Langdon said; "if you'll just wait a minute I'll have a buggy hitched up and we'll drive over."

A stable boy brought the trap to the door in a few minutes, and Langdon, telling Crane to get in, disappeared into the house, returning presently with two saddles, which he placed in the buggy.

"A couple of favorite saddles of mine," he explained, "they're like old fiddles that great players carry about under their arms an' sleep with, an' never let no one but themselves touch."

"Are you that particular with these?" asked Crane.

"Yes; I mostly handle 'em myself. They cost a bit. I had 'em made to order. The boys is that careless, they'd smash anything."

"What about this gallop?" asked Crane; "there'll be spies about trying to find out things, won't there?"

"Bet yer life, there'll be somebody, sir. These touts is most like vultures of anything I know; you've just got to work your stunt to give 'em the go-by, that's all."

Crane took but an apathetic interest in the matters that held full sway over the trainer's mind; looking after these incidents was Langdon's part of the contract. That was why they were so strong together. Langdon could do it. Just how the trial was to benefit them alone, with the inevitable tout at hand, Crane knew not, neither did he investigate; that was up to the trainer.

They drove into the paddock. Westley, Colley and the two stable lads were there.

"Shall we bring out the horses?" asked Westley, as Langdon sat swinging a leg loosely over the end of the buggy seat.

"Any of the talent about, Bill?"

"Quite likely, though I haven't seen none."

"Well, we'll slip 'em now. Just saddle up careless like, and no preliminary, mind you. The sharks won't look for a brush till you've gone around once. Take your mounts down the stretch to the quarter post, and then come away the first break; if there's anyone toutin' you off, they'll think it just a pipe opener, an' won't catch the time. Run out the mile-an'-a-quarter, make a race of it, but don't go to the bat. Diablo and The Dutchman don't need no whip to give us about the best they've got."

"All right, sir," answered Westley, "If I'm a judge, when the black's through pullin', he's done racin'."

Langdon nodded his head.

"What's your weight?" he asked of Westley, abruptly.

"I've just tipped the scales at a hundred-and-three, in my sweater."

"One hundred and three," mused the trainer, making a mental calculation. "What's Colley's weight?"

"He's as near a hundred as you can make it."

"Did you bring over a saddle?"

"Yes; two of 'em; one apiece for the horses."

"Tell Colley to take one, and some leads, and weight out a hundred and twelve. That'll be three pounds above the scale for May, weight for age, for the three-year-old, The Dutchman. I guess he won't need more'n seven pounds dead weight, for it's a five-pound saddle, I think. Let me see, you said a hundred and three, you were?"

"Yes, sir; in the sweater; I can take that off—"

"No; never mind. Take this saddle," and he lifted one from the buggy; "it'll just suit Diablo; he's got a herring-bone of a wither, an' this is high in the tree, an' won't cut him. Here's the cloth an' some leads; weight out a hundred and twelve, too. Weight for age—Diablo's a four-year-old; you ought to carry a hundred and twenty-six, but he's not the Dutchman's class, an' the youngster'd lose him before they'd gone half the journey. We'll run 'em at level weights, an' he'll get closer to The Dutchman, an' the sharks won't have such a fairy tale to tell about our horses."

"A hundred and twelve, you said, sir?" queried Westley, as he put the saddle that Langdon handed him over his left arm, slipped the thin sheets of lead in his pocket, and stood dangling the linen weight cloth in his right hand.

"Yes; level weights—a hundred an' twelve pounds."

"Westley," the trainer called as the little man started off, "just bring the saddle back to me here when you've weighed. I'll put it on Diablo myself; he's a touchy cuss, an' I don't want him ruined by careless handlin'."

"You take considerable trouble over it," remarked Crane. "One would think it was a big handicap you meant to capture this morning."

"A hundred and twelve, neat," declared Westley, as he returned, throwing some loose leads into the buggy. "Colley's gone to saddle The Dutchman."

"All right," answered Langdon, getting down from the seat and taking the saddle. "Go and tell the boy to bring Diablo out of the stall. I'll saddle him in the open. He generally kicks the boards when I cinch him up, an' it puts him in a bad humor."

Langdon started off with the jockey, but turned back, saying: "Oh, Mr. Crane, I wanted to ask you—"

By this he had reached the buggy, while Westley continued on his way to the stalls.

"It's a fine day, sir," continued Langdon, finishing his sentence, and exchanging the saddle held in his hand for the one that was in the buggy.

"Going to put the other on?" asked Crane.

"Yes, I fancy Diablo will like this better. Touchy brutes, these race horses; got to humor 'em. Come on over to the stalls—the horse'll stand."

Diablo was being led around in a small circle by his boy. He was a magnificent creature, 16½ hands high, and built on the same grand scale; perhaps a bit leggy for the huge barrel that topped the limbs; his black skin glistened in the noonday sun.

"That's what I call the mirror of health," said Langdon, in an unwonted burst of poetic eloquence, as he passed his hand across the horse's ribs.

Diablo lashed out furiously, with a great, far-reaching legs that nearly caught Crane unawares.

"It's only play," said the trainer. "Good horses is of two kinds when you're saddlin' 'em. The Dutchman there'll hang his head down and champ at the bit, even if you bury the girt an inch deep in his belly; he's honest, and knows it's all needed. That's one kind; and they're generally the same at the post, always there or thereabouts, waitin' for the word 'go.' An' they race pretty much the same all the time. If you time 'em a mile in 1:40 at home, they'll do it when the colors is up, an' the silk a-flappin' all about 'em in the race.

"Now this is a horse of another color, this one; he ain't takin' things easy at no stage of the game. He objects to everything, an' some day that'll land him a winner, see? He'll get it into his head that the other horses want to beat him out an' he'll show 'em a clean pair of heels; come home on the bit, pullin' double.

"Whoa, boy. Steady, steady, old man!" Then he ceased talking, for he had taken the girth strap between his teeth and was cinching up the big black with the firm pull of a grizzly. Diablo squirmed under the torture of tightening web on his sensitive skin and crouched as though he would fall on the trainer.

"Yes, sir," continued Langdon, as he ran the stirrups up under the saddle flap out of the way, and motioned to the boy to lead Diablo about. "Yes, sir; this fellows different. He's too damn sensitive. At the post he's like as not to act like a locoed broncho, an' get one blamed for having 'juiced' him, but he don't need no dope; what he needs is steadying. If he gets away in front them long legs of his will take some catchin'. He's the kind that wins when the books are layin' a hundred to one against him. But the worst of it is with his sort, like as not the owner hasn't a penny on them, but the public'll howl; they'll call it in-an'-out runnin', an' the scribblers'll get their paper to print a notice that the stable ought to be ruled off, an' all the time you're breakin your heart tryin' to get him to give his true—Hello! there's Colley out on The Dutchman; mount your horse, Westley—wait, you don't need no spurs; yes, carry a whip, an' give the guys that is watchin' a stage play with it; but don't hit the black. We'll just see what he'll do himself this trip," he added, addressing Crane.

Taking Westley's small-booted foot in his hand, he lifted the lad to Diablo's back and led the horse out through a gate to the course.

Freedom From Furnace Dust

To shake a furnace and have the dust sift throughout a freshly cleaned house is exasperating to any housewife, and a needless annoyance. The

BOYNTON

The Furnace with the Square Fire Pot

is constructed with a special flue for carrying off all the dust when shaking, and a cutting bar for smashing clinkers so that no poker is needed. A talk with a Boynton dealer will make you aware of its many labor-saving and coal-saving advantages, and why you should get rid of your old furnace and install a Boynton

BASEBALL.

It is pleasing to see a pitcher of Joss' ability hang a no hit game on his record.

Whatever the ultimate position of the New York Nationals they have put up one of the sandiest fights in the national game's annals.

Wilson, the new pitcher of the New York Americans, has trimmed Detroit, Boston, St. Louis and Washington in the brief time he has been with the Highlanders.

Pitchers some folks declare have an easy time, so many of them being carried by each club, but the Mathewsons, Johnsons, Walshes and Covaleskies are earning their money.

First class catchers are considered essential to a team being in a pennant race, yet Detroit isn't fixed as well in that regard as Cleveland or the White Sox, or Pittsburg as well as New York or the Cubs.

Randolph to Sign With Newark.

Clifford Randolph, the crack pitcher for the Clinton Avenues, has decided to append his name to the contract forwarded to him by Manager Stallings, of the Newark Eastern League Club. He feels sure that he will get a fair trial with the Newarks and is also confident that he will be able to make good. During the past season Randolph has faced some of the strongest teams in the State and has won a majority of his games. As stated before he promised to remain with the Clinton Avenues this year, but beyond that would promise nothing. If he goes to Newark, Manager Dorflinger will have to land another twirler, and it will be difficult to get one that will fit in as well with the rest of the team as Randolph. There are some doubts as to whether Stallings will manage the Newarks next season. There is a report that Wolverton, of the Tri-State League will succeed him and play third base.

FAIR ACRES' BIG MEET SATURDAY AFTERNOON

The Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club is planning to hold one of the best matinee race-meets of the season Saturday afternoon, when an attractive card will be presented, a feature of which will be a special race for a prize to be offered by the association between A. C. Blair's "Aron B," and C. C. Brower's "Prince." Both horses are in fine condition, having just returned from a circuit. Last Saturday "Aron B," won a $500 purse at Trenton.

In addition Classes B and C, started last Saturday, will be run off, the entries being as follows:

Class B—Oracle, C. C. Brower; Half-Moon, John Osborn; Fred V., Frank Irving.

Class C—Asia, Phil. Jenner; Lady Sidnut, C. S. Smith; Ben Butler, Henry Uhrhahn; Katy M, Al De-Nise; Sidnely Leland, J. B. Guttridge.

Besides the above named races, there will be two other events as follows:

Class A—Lady Onward, William Gross; Joe McGregor, George Forgerson; Zipp, William Huda; Bay Prince, John Buckalew.

Class D—Tom Sharkey, William Gross; Ivanhoe, William Huff; New Haven, F. W. Suydam; Maud C., R. L. Edwards.

Arrangements have been made to have stages connect with the Park avenue trolley cars and the fare as well as the admission to the driving park will be nominal, just to cover the expense of the meet.

FAVORS LOCAL OPTION

Elizabeth Presbytery Adopts Resolution Presented by Rev. J. O. McKelvey.

HOPE CHAPEL'S DISTINCTION.

West End Congregation Has Largest Sunday-school in Presbytery —Rev. Dr. Zelie Honored.

A resolution favoring local option was adopted unanimously by the Elizabeth Presbytery in session at Basking Ridge. The resolution was presented by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, on behalf of the temperance committee.

A number of clergymen were invited to sit as corresponding members, including Rev. W. Irving Dice, pastor of the Bishop James Methodist church; Rev. J. E. Hancock, pastor of the Pleasant Plains Methodist church; Rev. Charles B. Condit, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, Newark; Rev. E. C. Ray, of the College Board of the Presbyterian church; Rev. J. W. Scherer, of the Presbytery of Lehigh, and Rev. J. Davis, of New Mexico.

The committee on synodical missions, of which Rev. John T. Kerr, of Elizabeth, is chairman, reported that nine churches of the Presbytery were carrying on religious work among the foreigners at an expense of $10,000 per year. The committee on Sunday-school and young people's societies, Rev. William B. Hamilton, of Bethany chapel, chairman, reported forty-seven Sunday-schools in the Presbytery, with a membership of 9,480 scholars, 203 of whom united with their respective churches last year. The total amount contributed by them during the past year was $6,116. The Sunday-school with the largest membership is that of Hope chapel, Plainfield, with a roll of 659.

Rev. T. Shaw, of Rahway, chairman of the committee on Sabbath observance, recommended that the local churches form federations to bring pressure to bear upon the Legislature to enforce Sabbath observance more strictly.

The principal address of the afternoon was given by Rev. E. C. Ray, secretary of the College Board of the Presbyterian church. He explained very explicitly that all money contributed to the College Board was used specially for that work and not one cent of it used for the running expenses of the board. He stated that of the fifty-four Presbyterian colleges in the United States, thirty were self-supporting, leaving twenty-four of them dependent upon the College Board.

Rev. John T. Kerr, of the Third Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, was re-elected trustee of the Presbytery for a term of five years, and Elias D. Smith was elected for a similar term in the place of N. C. J. English, of Elizabeth.

Rev. John T. Reeve, chairman of the committee on home missions, recommended that the various churches of the Presbytery secure missionaries from the Western frontier to speak to their congregations during the coming winter on the mission work in the West.

An executive committee was appointed to co-operate with the general assembly's committee in prosecuting the work of the church. The members appointed are Rev. Dr. William F. Whittaker, of Elizabeth; Rev. Samuel Parry, of Somerville; Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, of Plainfield, and Elder E. P. Tenny, of Roselle.

The next meeting of the Presbytery will be held at the Bethany Presbyterian chapel, Elizabeth, in January.

Boys' Body Found in New York Bay.

The body of a boy about ten years old was picked up in New York Bay, about off the Southwest Spit buoy, by Edward Johnson, a Belford fisherman, yesterday afternoon. He brought the body to land and Coroner John T. Tetley took charge of it. The body appears to have been in the water about a week. It was well clad in a blue suit, black shoes and stockings.

Gay—Murphy.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Murphy, of New Germantown, Tuesday at noon their daughter, Miss Edith Murphy, was married to Ralph H. Gay, of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Sylvanus D. Decker. After a wedding trip spent in Massachusetts, the newly wedded pair will reside in this city.

Lude Wanted to Fight.

In a very much intoxicated condition, John Lude stood on Watchung avenue near North, this morning, and challenged the populace to mortal combat. Patrolman John Kelley collared him in the midst of his harangue and hustled him to jail. He will be given a hearing tomorrow.

MISS FLORENCE ACKOR NOW MRS. VAN DERVEER

Miss Florence A. Ackor, daughter of Daniel Ackor, of Watchung, and Aaron A. Van DerVeer, of Somerville, were married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's father, in the presence of nearly one hundred relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. There were no attendants.

The home was decorated for the event with a profusion of flowers, while the large porch was enclosed transforming it into a reception room. The arrangements of flowers in the parlor and dining-room was especially attractive.

After the bride and groom received the congratulations of the relatives and friends, supper was served. The bride received a large number of gifts, including a handsome on from the office force at the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company's office on North avenue, where the groom is employed as head bookkeeper. His associate employes attended the wedding.

The bride is a most estimable young woman and she has a large number of acquaintances. She has been a faithful member of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung and active in all departments of religious work there. Mr. Van DerVeer is a resident of Somerville and when he and his birde return from their honeymoon at Niagara Falls, they will live at that place.

FORT TO SPEAK HERE NEXT THURSDAY NIGHT?

Provided his other engagements do not conflict, Governor Fort will be the chief speaker at the mass-meeting to be held at the New Plainfield theatre on next Thursday night. While the leaders seem sanguine that he will be here nothing definite will be known until tomorrow night when the Republican city committee meets to arrange all details for the meeting. At that time the list of vice-presidents will be announced by City Chairman Angleman.

Congressman Fowler will speak either at the same meeting or at the one arranged for Thursday night, October 29. It is quite probable that he will make his campaign argument to the local voters at the latter meeting when another speaker of National prominence will also make an address.

It was learned today that Governor Fort has agreed to make an address at Montclair next Thursday night, and this will possibly prevent the plans of the city committee being carried out. It is possible, however, that he may be able to fill both engagements if a swift auto is put to use.

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA TO PLAY CLASSICAL NUMBERS.

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra, which will begin its active season on Tuesday night, October 20, will play at that time the full symphony force under the leadership of Martin A. Korff, who has at last realized his cherished ambition in being able to obtain aboe, bassoon, French horn and viola players from the leading amateur symphony orchestras in New York city.

The program at that time will be the most ambitious ever attempted, at which the classical music secured for the orchestra by Dr. Leonard Waldo for the Public Library will be played. The leading numbers will include, an overture, "Idomenens," by Mozart; the prelude to the third act of Loehengrin, by Wagner, and "The Butterfly Dance," by Jadessohn.

Nearly Boiled in Saltpetre Vat.

Harry Soutar, employed at the du Pont powder works at Wayne, is dying from burns received Tuesday when he fell into a vat of boiling mixture of saltpetre. Workmen who responded to Soutare's cries for help found him in the seething mass. They pumped cold water into the vat and thus saved Soutar from being boiled alive. He was unconscious when taken out. Dr. Young, of Little Falls, says the man cannot recover. Soutar was regarded as a skilled and careful workman. It is believed that he slipped while at work on the edge of the vat.

Skyrocket Prematurely Explodes.

Despite the fact that another paper advertised the fact that it had done the unusual in scoring a newspaper "beat" by proclaiming that old Music hall had been rented to Mr. Sanderson, of Cranford, and that the place would be opened again next fall, no lease has been signed as yet. It is expected that the lease will be signed tomorrow.

STATE ENDEAVORERS GATHER BY THE SEA

The twenty-second annual convention of the State Christian Endeavor Society was opened at Atlantic City, today, with an unusually large number of delegates in attendance. The convention began this morning with a sunrise meeting in Christ church, followed by the assembling of the Endeavorers on the Steel Pier, where they were welcomed by clergymen and officials of the city.

Yesterday was taken up with special meetings of committees, district secretaries, and special departments getting ready for the regular convention. There is every indication that the gathering will be the largest in the history of the organization. The convention will receive and accept an invitation from the Plainfield Endeavorers to hold its next meeting in Plainfield. The invitation will be given in a song, composed for the occasion.

FIVE YEARS SENTENCE FOR LOCAL COLORED MAN

Five years in State prison at hard labor was the sentence meted out yesterday by Judge Atwater to Clarence Dean, a young colored man of Plainfield, who some time ago pleaded non vult to the charge of having seduced a young girl in this city, with whom he had kept company, representing himself to the object of his affection as being a single man.

On arraigning Dean for sentence Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., said to the court that there were no extenuating circumstances in Dean's favor; that he had wilfully deceived her and brought about the girl's ruin, knowing that the promises he made her he could not make good because of the fact that he was a married man. In passing sentence Judge Atwater gave Dean to understand that if the court felt so inclined it could sentence him to twice five years, but making his sentence so much lighter, was due to the fact that he had pleaded non vult and saved the county the expense of a trial.

John Taub, of Plainfield pleaded non vult to an allegation charging him with having on September 1 stolen a quantity of silverware from Truell Hall. He will be arraigned for sentence on October 14.

Frederick Johnson, of Westfield, colored, pleaded non vult to an alleged assault and battery on Julius Liscolm, at Westfield, on October 1. He will be arraigned for sentence on October 14.

Charles Irons, a boy who has been a source of much annoyance to the courts, and who was recently found guilty of breaking, entering and larceny, was sentenced to the State Reformatory at Rahway.

LEGION DEFEATS PLAN TO RECEIVE SECOND SONS.

The quarterly meeting and banquet of the New York Commandery, Military Order Loyal Legion, was held at Delmonico's, New York, last night. A paper on "Hospital Work During the Civil War," prepared by Major Curtis was read, and short addresses were made by Gen. Horatio King, who recently returned from a trip abroad, and Col Jackson of the California Commandery.

An amendment to the constitution which proposed to allow the admission to membership of second and third sons of original companions was decisively defeated. The present rule admits only the eldest son of an original companion. The Plainfield members who attended the meeting were Major W. D. W. Miller, Captain S. C. Peck, W. F. Merrill, John Stewart, Captain M. C. Dobbins and Walter C. Dobbins.

Call Rev. Mr. Pyle.

The Rev. Percival C. Pyle, assistant rector of Grace Episcopal church, Newark, has been called to the Church of St. Edward the Martyr, 109th street, New York city, and, with the approval of Bisop Greer, will assume his new duties November 1. His predecessor in the New York pulpit was the late Rev. Edward Wallace Nell, who died on the 5th of last August, after a service of twenty-five years in St. Edward's Church, which he founded.

Lauria Second Degree Murderer.

In the Cumberland county court at Bridgeton yesterday Francisco Lauria, of Philadelphia, was found guilty of murder in the second degree. On June 14 last he shot and killed Salvatore Giordano, his employer, of Dividing Creek.

RED MEN'S CELEBRATION

Miantonomo Tribe, With 200 Members, Observes Its Twentieth Anniversary.

STATE OFFICERS PRESENT.

Good Entertainment, Addresses and a Collation—Sketch of the Tribe's History.

Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, the oldest of that order in the city, celebrated its twentieth anniversary in the tribal chamber, last night. Several great chiefs were present including Great Sachem Emil W. Shabilon, of Hackensack; Great Junior Sagmore John Thomson, of Asbury Park; Great Chief of Records Daniel M. Stevens, of Camden; J. A. Karet, member of the great council finance committee; also delegations from Somerville, Westfield, Cranford, Wetumpkah Tribe and Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, to the number of about 250.

The program of the evening consisted of piano selections by Allen Squier, tenor solos by Chris Delancy, remarks by Great Sachem Shabilon, Great Junior Sagmore Thomson, Great Chief of Records D. M. Stevens; "The Musical Berhend," in monologue; Coster songs by Charles Delancy, an address by Judge William Newcorn and acrobatic stunts by Hansen and Myers.

Following the entertainment all adjourned to the banquet hall, where a collation was served by DeMolli. It was 1 o'clock this morning when the happy affair terminated.

Miantonomo Tribe which was organized twenty years ago yesterday, now has a membership of 200. Chas. Halliwell is the present sachem. During its existence, the tribe has received $14,000 and $8,000 has been expended in sick and funeral benefits. The tribe has steadily increased its membership and today the financial condition is excellent. The following eight charter members were present last night: Francis Whiteley, Benjamin Allen, Charles Fullmer, Andrew J. Stiglitz, Peter Doeringer, George S. McGinnis and Charles L. Holstein.

Charles L. Holstein was chairman of the committee in charge of last night's celebration. Thomas Parsons and Jeremiah Griffin comprised the reception committee, while Thomas Conner and Joseph Cullen had charge of the refreshments.

MIDDLESEX DEMOCRAT NAMED FOR CONGRESS

John Edward Clark, of Middlesex county, who owns a model dairy farm on the River road between New Brunswick and Bound Brook, was nominated for Congress by the Democratic delegation from the Third Congressional district, assembled in Town Hall at Long Branch yesterday afternoon, amid great enthusiasm.

Mr. Clark is the first Middlesex Democrat to be named for Congress in ten years. The last was Patrick Convery, of Perth Amboy, who ran in 1898, and came nearer defeating Congressman Howell than any one ever pitted against the New Brunswick banker. It is twenty-eight years since a Middlesex Democrat was elected to Congress, the last being the late Miles Ross, in 1880.

Both candidates being Middlesex men it is expected that the bulk of the fighting will be in this county.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

Cooking Class to be Served With a Luncheon.

A novel plan is to be carried out in the evening cooking class at the Young Woen's Christian Association this winter. Miss Ferrell, the teacher, comes directly from Philadelphia and meets the members of the class directly after business hours. They are to be served light lunch and then proceed to the lesson in cooking. During the course of the lesson they will prepare a meal and partake of it before going home.

This plan promises to be successful because it means the saving of much time and strength from a trip to their homes and back to the association. It also gives the members of the class a chance to complete the lesson early in the evening.

Miss Ferrell is a graduate of Drexel Institute. She has had much practical experience in domestic science and is now employed as a teacher in Drexel Institute and in t special course in the University of Pennsylvania.

Besides the evening class, there will also be a class in the afternoon and one in the morning.

PERIANO ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF STABBING

Frank Periano, an Italian, of this city, was acquitted in the Union county court, yesterday of the charge of atrocious assault on John Motto, a fellow-countryman, who, it was alleged, on the evening of May 31, 1908, was attacked while walking along Elm place and received several stab wounds in the lower part of the back. Periano asserted his innocence from the first. Although Mottoto swore that Periano assaulted him, he testified yesterday that he did not see him do the stabbing. Others, however, did, he claimed.

When able to get away from his assailants, Motto started homeward, but had not gone far before he fell from weakness caused by loss of blood. He was then taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he remained for a long time. Robert Newton Crane represented Periano.

MISS LAURA MEEKER'S WEDDING ANNOUNCED

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Laura Cemilie Meeker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Meeker, of Franklin Park, and niece of L. C. and J. E. Meeker, of this city, and David Kelly Auten Hamblin, of New York. The cereony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, "Woodlawn," on Thursday, October 1, by Rev. Edward Keator, pastor of the Reformed church, Franklin Park.

The bride wore an empire gown of white satin messaline, trimmed with chiffon and lace, and a bridal veil, caugt up with orange blossoms. She was attended by Miss Ida May Meeker, her sister, as aid of honor, who wore a princess gown of blue silk mull and carried white carnations.

The best man was Stanley Bartrum, of East Canaan, Conn., and the ushers were Martin Garretson, of New York, and Henry L. Pennell, of Newark. Gertrude Meeker, sister of the bride, was flower girl. Mrs. Charles Garretson, of Franklin Park, played the wedding march.

The bride's gift to the maid of honor was a gold watch pin, to the organist a hat pin and a ring to the flower girl. The groom gave his best man and ushers gold scarf pins. The couple was the receipients of many handsome gifts, including cut-glass, silverware, linen, money, furniture and a substantial check from the Chase National Bank, New York, where the groom is assistant paying-teller. The bride's traveling dress was affinity blue chiffon cloth. The couple is spending two weeks in the south, and upon their return will reside in Newark for the winter.

SEVENTY P. H. S. PUPILS AT VARIOUS COLLEGES.

The Plainfield High School is represented in various colleges this year by seventy of its graduates besides others who have gone directly from the high school to college without graduating. The colleges to which the pupils have gone are in the order of those containing the largest numbers: Rutgers, Cornell, Wellesley, Vassar, Barnard, Smith, Yale, Mount Holyoke, New York University, Stevens, Oberlin, Brown, Alfred, Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Syracuse, Colgate, Swarthmore, Worcester, Colorado, Hobart, Holy Cross, St. Elizabeth, College City New York. Eleven graduates are pursuing Normal School courses.

The High School auditorium is made attractive by some large plants that have been loaned to the High School by Mrs. W. H. Stevenson, of Evergreen avenue.

TRINITY JUNIORS ELECT OFFICERS AND PLAN WORK.

Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, held its first meeting of the season in the lecture room of the church, yesterday afternoon. There were about twenty-five members present and much interest and enthusiasm was shown. In reorganizing and planning the work for the winter, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck and Miss Mabel Wilson were in charge. The society expects to elect a superintendent soon, neither Mrs. Schenck or Miss Wilson being able to serve.

These officers were elected for the year: President, Miss Maude McAfee; first vice-president, Miss Adelaide Cole; second vice-president, Alfred Willett; secretary, Miss Beatrice Tier; treasurer, Elmer French. Miss Edna Dilts was chosen as assistant superintendent. The various committees will be appointed later.

DeWitt and Leslie Brokaw, of the borough, who underwent operations at Muhlenberg Hospital recently, returned home today, having entirely recovered.

FURTHER RESULTS OF THE POLAK CELEBRATION

Further results of the Polak celebration at South Plainfield, Sunday night, when the attendants got into a fight that led to the arrest of twelve of them, took place in Justice W. W. E. Smith's court, last night, when John Bulli and his wife Annie charged George Ohop with directing vile and indecent language toward them. During the proceedings it developed that Felix Guvanish, who was brought into the case as a witness, had been as much at fault as Ohop and found himself a defendant with him.

When Bulli's charge against Ohop was taken up, the justice got the two men in good humor and they decided to shake hands and be friends. The magistrate looked on Mr. Bulli's charge in a different light, however, and declared that no man guilty of such conduct toward a woman would receive liency. The evidence against Bulli was convincing and he was fined $10. It was at this juncture that Guvanish found himself tangled up in the proceedings and when he was found guilty of using language in Mrs. Bulli's presence not fit for the pahlor he was also instructed to hand up ten simoleons.

Both Ohop and Guvanish immediately gave notice of appeal and declared that they would engage a lawyer to take their case. The uJstice allowed them a stay of proceedings but fixed a bail bond of $50 to warrant their appearance on October 16.

THURSTON TO SPEAK IN BOROUGH TONIGHT

Former United States Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, where William Jennings Bryan hails from, will be the principal speaker at the big rally to be held at Saengerbund hall tonight under the auspices of the North Plainfield Republican Club. President Benjamin A. Hegeman will preside and among the vice-presidents will be Union County Chairman Frank H. Smith, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Edwin S. Hooley, former Mayor Alexander Gilbert and Charles W. McCutchen.

Congressman Ira W. Wood, of Trenton, State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Raritan and Assemblyman William W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, all of whom are Republican nominees, will be present and it is expected each will make some brief remarks. A. G. Anderson, of Somerville, candidate for county clerk, will also attend.

Music has been engaged and a good meeting is predicted. Women are specially invited.

The chairmen of the standing committees chosen are these: Lecture, F. S. Thompson; literary, Grace TenEyck; membership, Ernest K. Powlison; missionary, May Shreve; music, Howard Case; reception, Mrs. Frank Jones; refreshment, Bessie Flanders; serving, Carrie Denton; transportation, Stanley Robbins; advertising and publication, Winfield Wainwright; audit, William Flanders; benevolent, Harriet Mattison; devotional, Ada E. Fountain; decoration, Pauline Denton; entertainment, Helen Armstrong; finance, Guion Fountain; games, Harold Robbins; house, Raymond Carver; Ladies Aid Auxiliary, Gideon Fountain.

A devotional meeting will be held on the first Monday evening of each month. All young people will be cordially welcomed. The society will continue to arrange one prayer meeting service and one church service each month.

Elks Begin Fall Season.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., held the first session of the fall season, last night. William Doud and Edwin Bennett were initiated in the mysteries of the order and at the close of the meeting a social period with refreshments was enjoyed. From now on, the sessions will be held every Wednesday night.

Child Drinks Atropine and Dies.

Isabel Wyckoff, two years old, daughter of William and Leonia Wyckoff, of No. 1053 East Grand street, Elizabeth, died at the General Hospital yesterday, the result of having swallowed a quantity of atropine which had been left in a vial on a table. The child drank the poison on Monday.

TAFT MAY SPEAK HERE

Efforts Being Made to Get G. O. P. Presidential Nominee in Union County.

DURING HIS EASTERN TOUR.

Ackerman Hears from Taft and Following His Advice Will Consult With Hitchcock.

Efforts are being made to get William H. Taft to speak in Union county before the close of the campaign and according to the Republican leaders there are fair prospects that the attempt will be successful. Today State Senator Ackerman received a personal letter from Mr. Taft in which he advises the Union county solon to get in touch with National Chairman Hitchock at once, expressing the hope that arrangements would be made.

Mr. Ackerman was the original Taft man in this county and a few days ago he wrote the Presidential nominee urging that he visit this section of Jersey, at the same time making it plain that in making the suggestion he did not mean to conflict with the State or county committee.

County Chairman Smith is enthusiastic over the possible visit of Mr. Taft and says that the biggest sort of demonstration will be arranged if he comes. It is probable that Elizabeth will be selected as the place for the meeting if it is arranged as it is a more convenient point than Plainfield for those coming any distance.

Chairman Hitchcock is now arranging Mr. Taft's eastern itinerary and Senator Ackerman will probably have a talk with him today or tomorrow.

HOMEOPATHS DWINDLING ACCORDING TO REPORT.

Students of System Fall Off 50 Per Cent. in Schools.

At yesterday's session of the New Jersey State Homeopathic Society, when opened yesterday in the Marlborough Hotel, Asbury Park, Dr. Carl H. Wintsch, of Newark, second vice-president of the society, was well received by the fifty odd homeopaths assembled and elicited favorable comment. Dr. Bevier H'B. Sleght, of Newark, was present at the conference yesterday and took a leading part in the discussion of the papers. Dr. Oscar Thompson, of East Orange, was present both yesterday and today.

The most important development today was the statement by several members that the decrease in registrations of homeopathists at medical schools throughout the country is so alarming as to call for action to recruit the ranks of the school. Dr. J. E. Wilson, of New York, declared that this fall there was a decrease of 50 per cent. from last year in the entry of students at homeopathic schools and hospitals. "The condition is so serious," he said, "that it is doubtful if next year there will be sufficient graduates to furnish internes for the leading hospitals."

DOCTOR HAD TO RUN, NO AUTOPSY PERFORMED.

Dr. W. Bryan Coakley, of New York, a specialist on hydrophobia, had a strenuous time when he went to the home of Harvey M. Day, in Elizabeth, to make an autopsy on Mrs. Day, who died Tuesday, supposedly from rabies. He sought and obtained permission from the county physician and prosecutor to make the autopsy. What followed his attempt to examine the body is told by Dr. Coakley:

"I went to Day's house and Day admitted me and ushered me into the parlor, where I was at once surrounded by three men as I began to talk to Day. I told Day that I appreciated his sorrow and trouble, but that I had the authority of the coroner, and that my only interest in making the examination was to advance the cause of science. When I stopped speaking Day, advancing to me said, 'Is that all?'

"I told him that I had nothing more to say, whereupon he cried to the other men to 'get the gun,' and struck at me several times. I saw that the men were determined to beat and perhaps shoot me, and I rushed from the house."

Mrs. Janet Leavey.

Mrs. Janet Leavey, of Cranford, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, early yesterday morning, following an operation performed the day before. She was in a critical condition when removed to the hospital and little hope was entertained for her recovery.

Charles W. McCutchen and family who have spent the summer at their camp in the Adirondacks, have returned to their home on Rockview avenue.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

NORTH BRANCH.

The funeral of Mrs. Dora Sanders, fifty-four years old, the wife of Charles Sanders, was held yesterday afternoon in the Methodist church at Mt. Horeb. Rev. George Bowers officiated, and burial was in the Mt. Horeb cemetery. Mrs. Sanders died Sunday, after a long illness from fatty degeneration of the heart. She had been twice married. Besides her husband she leaves ten children.

Announcement has been made of the wedding of Miss Edythe L. Lane of Pluckemin, and Peter Van Doren of Gladstone. The ceremony was performed a few days ago at the Presbyterian manse at Pluckemin, by the Rev. Thomas D. Wesley, the pastor. After a brief honeymoon trip the couple will make their home at Gladstone.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Rowland, who live near North Branch, have issued invitations for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, which will take place on Saturday, October 17, at their home.

There will be no service in the Presbyterian church at Pluckemin next Sunday. The pastor is spending a vacation of a month in the Southern States.

Mrs. Bartley Little has returned to her home in Trenton, after a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Ten Eyck, at their home near North Branch.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Schenck, of Three Bridges, have been visiting Mrs. Elizabeth Lane at her home near Readington during the past week.

Edward A. Myers and son Peter of Raritan, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ryneir Gulick at their home near South Branch.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Classis of Philadelphia will hold its fall session in the Reformed church at Neshanic today.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield's Good Government Club is agitating for a garbage collecting system under the direction of the town government. The club has a plan whereby the garbage gathered could be disposed of on the sewer farm owned by the town. The farm comprises about fifty acres, only a small portion of which is used for the sewer beds.

The State Railroad Commission will be asked to look at the Broad street crossing of the Central Railroad and to take such steps as are possible to abolish the grade crossing.

A delegation of Westfield firemen attended the firemen's parade at New Brunswick Tuesday. Chief Frederick C. Decker was in charge of the delegation.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Mayor Smith, of Millville, who has been very ill, was reported better today.

While William Lloyd, Jr., was strolling through the woods east of Millville a careless gunner peppered his legs with birdshot.

Mrs. Mary Henry, an aged resident of Millville, made a misstep in her yard Monday, and, falling to the ground, sustained injuries which the physicians fear will prove fatal.

Trying to enforce the truancy law, Marshal Biggs, of Millville, found a child barefooted and without suitable clothing. He clothed and shod the youngster and took him to school.

The Belta Bottle Works, at Vineland, resumed operations yesterday, giving employment to 100 hands. The Durand Glass Tube Works will start up next Monday, giving work for 200

A bursting bottle cut a long deep gash in the wrist of Miss Celestina Sharpless, while she was employed in the grinding department at the South Millville works of the Whitall-Tatum Company.

The Cumberland County Medical Society will meet next Tuesday at Bridgeton, and Dr. R. Max Goepp, of Philadelphia, will deliver an address on "Tuberculosis and It Relation to Life Insurance."

While Joseph Beichman and family were viewing the parade in Philadelphia yesterday, thieves entered their home at 504 Kaighn avenue, Camden, and carried away about $100 worth of silverware and other articles.

The trolley service to National Park is regarded as about the poorest the town has ever experienced, and a committee of citizens has been appointed to go to Newark and see the heads of the Public Service Corporation about it.

While sitting at the breakfast table at her home in Millville, Mrs. Andrew Beebe was stricken with heart failure and died before a physician could reach her yesterday. She was sixty-four years old and is survived by a husband.

The eight-inch brick wall of the coalroom on the eastern side of the new steam-heating plant at Peddie Institute fell outward yesterday, carrying with it several hundred tons of coal. The wall was more than twenty feet in height. It will be repaired immediately.

The steamship City of Haverhill, 300 tons burden, has been secured by the Atlantic City Transportation Company and will carry freight between Atlantic City and Philadelphia. Another steamship will be secured to run passengers and freight between Atlantic City and New York.

While working about a railroad float at the foot of Mickle street, Camden, yesterday, Charles P. Redfield, twenty-five years old, of Westville, fell into the Delaware River and was drowned. With grappling irons the body was brought to the surface. The young man was a popular member of the naval reserves and leaves a widow and several small children.

Harry Beebe, a young barber, of Millville had a fierce conflict with a big rattlesnake while crossing the island at the head of Union Lake yesterday. The reptile tried several times to strike, but Beebe kept a safe distance until the snake began to retreat, and then he dispatched it with a club. The snake was four feet four inches long and he had ten rattles and a button.

Asking damages to the extent of $20,000, Mrs. Elizabeth Schada, of Holly Beach, through David Goff, in Camden yesterday, brought action against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Louisa Schada, claiming that the latter alienated the affections of her son from the complainant. The case will be tried in the Cape May county courts. The Schadas were married a little over a year ago, and it is the allegation that the defendant so prejudiced her son against his young wife that he finally left her and went to Los Angeles.

Ready for Montclair Horse Show.

The entries for the Montclair horse show have closed, and L. L. Chinn, the secretary, announces that over two hundred have been received. The show, which will take place next Saturday, from 10 to 5:30 o'clock, will be the third annual exhibition conducted under the auspices of the Montclair Riding, Driving and Automobile Club. The entries have been received from Plainfield, Morristown, New York city, Newark, the Oranges and Montclair. There are twenty-two events in all and owing to the great number of entries it is probable that some of the classes will have to be divided. The judges will be F. M. Ware and Dr. J. Earle Budd, who officiated last year.

LL. D. for Dr. Wilson.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson received the degree of LL. D. today at Williams College when Harry A. Garfield, recently professor of politics at Princeton, was inaugurated president of Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Thickstun, of Central avenue, are enjoying a pleasure trip to Boston and Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Dickerson, of East Second street, returned home Tuesday night from a two weeks trip in the south.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Andrew Mack, the favorite Irish comedian, in "Arrah-na-Pogue," is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

In addition to the gorgeous scenery, wonderful mechanical and startling electrical effects used in Al. W. Martin's Uncle Tom's Cabin, which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, may be mentioned the unusual number of high class specialties which will be introduced during the action of the play and also between acts. No expense has been spared in securing for these specialties the best available talent that money can procure and lovers of vaudeville will find it well worth their while to become one of the many who will take advantage of this fact.

There seems indeed to have been method in the madness that prompted the making ready for this season's biggest musical comedy, "Gay New York," which will be offered for the first time here at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. From every direction comes the verdict of superiority of elaborate details, regarding the production, and what must be more gratifying still to the promoters of such an extravagant venture, is the financial results that have already been achieved for an entertainment calculated to impress an audience with its novelty and honesty of purpose.

With a record of nearly twenty musical plays to his credit, Victor Herbert stands today as not only the most successful but the most prolific composer in America, whose every effort has developed an artistic and financial success, and who has done more to elevate musical plays to a scale of refinement than any living writer, his compositions being found in music rooms throughout the civilized world.

The latest of Mr. Herbert's comic operas, "The Red Mill," which is to be presented at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night by Charles Dillingham's company, has been considered his greatest popular hit. It was produced at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York city, where it remained the entire year, which was followed by engagements of three months each in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, and so great was the demand to see it that seats were placed on sale for months in advance, so as to try to stop the traffic of the speculators.

The books and lyrics of "The Red Mill" are by Henry Blossom, who will be readily recalled as the author of "Mlle. Modiste," "The Yankee Consul," "Checkers" and other famous successes. Holland is the country selected by the authors for the scenes and the action of the story which readily lends itself to picturesque, scenery, quaint costumes and the peculiar characteristics of the country, these being relieved by the introduction of English, French and American tourists.

TAFT AND SHERMAN CLUB AT WESTFIELD.

The Taft and Sherman Club, of Westfield, held a rousing big meeting at headquarters in the old Westfield Hotel building on Broad street Tuesday night. The club enrolled many new members, making the total membership over 200.

President Lack, C. H. Denman, J. B. Wilson, Mayor Alpers, Rev. P. W. Ross, and A. L. Russell delivered speeches. Mr. Russell spoke about the excellent record of Mayor Alpers and said that he was the man who had done something for Westfield and deserved the support of every Republican for return to office.

Eugene Hanford sang songs including "Three Strikes and Out," a National campaign song, soon to be published. The club decided to hold one big mass meeting before election upon a date to be announced later, when all of the candidates of the county and local ticket are to be present and make addresses. The club will hold regular meetings every Monday evening, until after election and the club rooms will be open each evening. A handsome transparency has been erected in front of the headquarters.

PRINCETON'S ENTERING CLASS.

With 372 Members Is Largest Since 1905, with Forty-eight More Than Last Year.

The entering class at Princeton University is somewhat larger than it was last year. At present the tentative figures are: Academic, 160; bachelors of science and of letters, 152; civil engineers, sixty, making a total of 372, as against 324 last year, a gain of forty-eight. There is an increase of twenty-eight in the academic department, and the bachelors of science and of letters show a gain of fifty-one, but there are thirty-one less civil engineers.

The loss in the engineering department is accounted for by the fact that the new increased requirements for admission to that department went into effect this academic year. As compared with recent years, the present freshman class is the largest since 1905. The exact data as to the number of freshmen entering with conditions are not obtainable, but the report that there are fewer applicants admitted this year on trial is corroborated by the faculty committee in charge.

CYCLIST BADLY HURT.

Horse Kicked Westfield Resident and Man Leading the Animal Disappeared.

John Petrucelli, of Downer street, Westfield, was seriously injured Tuesday night as he was riding his bicycle along North avenue, Westfield, in front of the engine house. He turned to one side to go ahead of a wagon going in the same direction. The man ahead was driving one horse and leading another with a long halter rope. As Petrucelli got even with the horse being led it suddenly turned and kicked with both hind feet.

The animal's hoofs struck Petrucelli on the shoulder and side and sent him and his bicycle in a heap in the gutter. He was taken to Mooney's hotel, where Dr. Egle attended to his injury. Four teeth were knocked out, his nose broken and he had several cuts about the head. The man with the horse disappeared.

WIFE HAD KNIFE IN BED.

Husband Discovers It and Almost Beats Her to Death.

Esten Franklin, arraigned in Central Police oCurt at Trenton Tuesday, on the charge of almost beating his wife to death, excused himself by declaring that he rolled over in bed and found a butcher knife which she had hidden under her pillow, intending to kill him after he had gone to sleep.

The woman admitted taking the knife to bed with her, but said she wanted it for self-defense. She also accused her husband of being too friendly with her sister. Franklin was held in bail for the Grand Jury.

Police Seeking Alleged Elopers.

Etta Schoenwe-Cox, sixteen years old, daughter of Henry Schoenwe, a Paterson merchant, bride of a year and mother of a three-months-old child, is supposed to have eloped Tuesday night with Robert Ross, who was employed by the young woman's father as a driver. Ross is twenty-seven years old, divorced and married a second time. His wife, left with three children is today suffering from the shock caused by the information that her husband had deserted her. Mrs. Cox took with her $1,200, which her father had placed in a bureau drawer. The police are looking for them.

Wiegand Gets 5 Years for Forgery

John H. Wiegand, charged in three indictments with forging the name of Paul N. Friedlander, a New York business man, by whom he was employed as a travelling salesman, was tried before Judge Connet at Flemington Tuesday, and convicted on one of the indictments. Wiegand pleaded non vult to the other two bills, and was sentenced to serve five years in the state prison on each indictment, the terms running concurrently. Wiegand claimed that he had authority to sign Friedlander's name to the checks, which was denied by his former employer.

Stevens Football Player Hurt.

John Foster, a student at Stevens Institute, Hoboken, who lives in Van Houten place, Belleville, is in the fraternity house, near the institute, suffering from injuries to his legs as a result of a scrimmage in a football game. Foster in consequence is out of the game for the season, and may never be able to play again.

Plainfield, N. J., October 8, 1908.

Chauncey Depew says "this is the golden age of politics." He's in the United States Senate and ought to know.

Yes, our office boy's grandmother died last night and so he's giving way to his sorrow at the Polo grounds today.

In predicting that Taft will carry the State by 40,000, Mr. Taft has gone one better on the squaring the circle problem's solution.

Mr. Parker is occupying much the same position in the Democratic campaign as Roosevelt is in the Republican. It's a case of "you let my little boy alone" with both.

The burning question of the hour is not tariff, government ownership, corporation regulation or currency reform; it's "who's going to win the ball game in New York this afternoon."

Go and hear the issues of the campaign discussed at Saengerbund hall tonight. Former United States Senator Thurston, Congressman Wood and State Senator Frelinghuysen will speak and each one of them is well worth serious attention.

The Republican County Committee has done the right thing in putting some real ginger into the campaign by inviting both Taft and Fort to come into this county. That there is marked apathy in this section is not to be denied and the best way to kindle interest in the fight is by admitting that condition and losing no time in applying the remedy. With the Presidential nominee speaking in Elizabeth and the Governor speaking here there would be activity all along the line.

SOME COLLARS OF THE COMING SEASON.

I particularly like the net collars, especially the shaped one made of sheerest net that must, of course, be supported on the sides and back. Such collars show a neat effect at the top and bottom when made with a band of insertion either of lace or something that shows a touch of hand embroidery.

Taken collectively, collars are very ornamental, though once in a while something too garish looms into view, just the same as we find ugly types in everything of dress kind. The chemisettes to wear with surplice waists are ready made, with very dressy collars, and they, too, foolow the dictates of fashion's latest decree, and extend far up under the chin. These lace pieces can be made of practically any fine material will be something in net, very likely like dress nets, because the touch of color will mean so much to a dressy frock.

Care should be taken that the collars fit well, and also that they be not too high, else the effect is painful to the observer as well as to the wearer.

THE FORUM.

WILLIAM JUPITER BRYAN!

Editor, The Daily Press:

May I avail myself of the courtesy of the columns of your newsy and bright paper? Who is the god of Democratic mythology? Jupiter; William Jupiter Bryan. He is the best and the greatest; god of the sky, of thunder, of lightning and of victory.

According to the ancient myths of Democracy the Peerless one, the steady, shining Jupiter led the Democratic hosts to victory on three occasions. Is Democracy a myth? Yes, as far as success is concerned. What idols have the worshippers of Democracy? They had three, free-silver, free trade, and free banks, but they threw the silver idol in the sea of oblivion, leaving only two.

The myths also the followers of the marsh lights prostrate themselves before the free-trade idol in the hope of getting something for nothing.

They fall and bow their faces before the free-bank idol in the hope that each worshipper may start a bank and that the deposits may grow fat.

Let us all proclaim the prophet, the canned prophet of the phonograph.

Very sincerely yours,
JOSHUA JENKS JUDSON.

DICTATES OF FALL FASHIONS.

An indispensable arjunct to the wardrobe is a silk rubber coat. They are out in much beauty of color and design, and are recommended to the person who wants a coat both for rain and for dust. They are of various weights, but one can get a medium coat of satin finish that will do nicely for cold as well as for other purposes. Rashionable women use these coats for walking and for motoring. The newest silk rubbers show a great improvement over the old ones and they are so well finished that it is practically impossible to tell a silk rubber from a coat of heaviest satin.

To those who can and will wear wide waist trimmings, the shaped girdle is very becoming, but it must be made to conform to girdle and not wide belt arrangement. Frequently the two get badly confused and nothing is so completely out of harmony with some dresses as a wide belt. Belts are narrow, girdles wide not of an exaggerated depth, but enough so to class them alone. There are buckles purposely made for girdles and, while very plain, they are ornamental.

Empire and Directoire effects are decidedly a feature of the advanced fall suits, while braid and buttons are the favored trimmings. Soutache is used extensively and large handsome buttons are added as decorations.

The skirts are in many cases plaited, differing very little from those worn last year, and the coats are long—averaging three-quarter length—the fronts cut away to display a vest, but straight up and down. There is no rounding off at the corners at lower front edges.

On Their Wedding Tour.

"Alfred, dear, isn't the scenery beautiful?"

"Lovely beyond description!"

"But your are not looking at it."

"I am looking at the only scenery that has any attractions for me Penelope."

"What is the use of talking like that, Alfred? You know I'm not beautiful."

"Don't you dare to contradict your husband! I say you are the most gloriously beautiful creature on the planet."

"Nonsense! Look out through the car window, Alfred. You are missing some wonderful scenery."

"I'm not missing anything worth seeing. I'd rather look into your eyes and hear your voice than—"

"Oh, Alfred, you're utterly hopeless case!"

"I know it, Penelope. I'm in the incurable ward of the seventh heaven."

"Sh! Not so loud, dear; somebody will hear us!"

Somebody did.—Chicago Tribune.

The Parasol for Use.

When you can afford but one parasol get a white one. A few years back the choice would have been invariably dark navy blue for economy, but now white has taken its place.

Either in linen or in silk it is wonderfully serviceable, and if soiled can be regularly scrubbed with soap and water.

Do not get an elaborate parasol lace trimmed and reruffled. Nothing gives momre satisfaction and looks so well on all occasions as a well-shaped parasol of white linen with a large heavily padded monogram in one of the panels.

Real Cock-a-Leekie Soup.

To make the famous Scotch cock-a-leekie which Sir Walter Scott extols boil a young fowl in two quarts white stock until tender. Take up the meat and put one side. Wash two bunches fine leeks, trim off the roots and coarse part of the head, and cut the remainder into inch lengths. Put into the broth together with a cupful boiled rice and salt and pepper to season. Cook half and hour, add the fowl cut into joints (laying aside the breast if you like for salad or slicing cold) boil up and serve very hot.

Many a young couple may be putting off getting married because "times are hard" or because of the expense attached to the furnishing of a home. To these, we say, come in and learn about our "Club Plan." Furniture, Carpets, Rugs and Housefurnishing Goods may be selected from our magnificent stocks and paid for on the "Club Plan." This scheme to make it easy to furnish a home complete at the outset is winning us many friends who heretofore felt compelled to pay the exhorbitant prices asked elsewhere in order to obtain the privileges of easy payments. With our "Club Plan" system you need pay only our regular low cash prices. Get the most dependable makes of goods and pay for them in the easiest possible way.

Have You a "Victor"

in your home? If not, you owe it to yourself and family to get one. We sell them on the very easiest terms, so there's no excuse for you. The very next time you are near the store stop in and listen to some of the "Victor" music.

Victor Talking Machines are entirely different from the other kinds. They are the real thing for the long winter evenings. The charming music, the delightful fun, the refreshing entertainment of which you never tire—all these you owe to yourself and family.

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR OSTERMOOR MATTRESSES

FIRST AID TO THE SPRAINED ANKLE.

The season of low shoes is responsible for many a sprained ankle, these may be very slight or they can cause more trouble than a bad break.

If possible, as soon as the sprain or wrench is felt, put it under water as hot as can be endured, alternating with cold water. The easiest way to manage this is in the tub under the hot and cold water spigot.

This treatment often allays the swelling and stops further trouble. It is well to summon the doctor at once in case of a bad sprain. If he is long in arriving bandage with antiseptic bandages or with adhesive plaster.

For the former, wrap it around the ankle and the middle of the foot alternately in the form of an eight. Cut the adhesive plaster in short strips and interlace them from side to side of the sprain, pulling tightly to hold the injured parts in place.

Making a shoe of medicated clay frequently reduces the inflammation. This should be renewed as fast as it dries up.

Rest the foot in a horizontal position; or, better yet, have it higher than the hips. When the ligaments are torn and the ankle must be rested on a pillow much of the strain will be relieved by keeping the foot beyond edge of the pillow, which is doubled up under the ankle.

When a sprain is bad, necessitating inaction for a long time, the circulation should be kept up by massaging frequently from the knees to the ankle, more particularly the calf of the leg. The massage movements should be upward. If this is kept up many times a day from the time of the accident there will be no pain in walking, even after weeks of disused muscles.

There is apt to be weakness for months after a hard sprain; to avoid further trouble one should wear a support of some kind. This may be a woven stocking made of rubber or silk, or a leather anklet that laces up the front and slips over the heel.

DAINTY LAVENDER FOR SACHET

"And lavender—to lurk amidst the labors of her loom,
And crown her kerchiefs clean with mickle rare perfume."

These lines tell just where lavender is appropriate, but there is something about their quaint diction which suggests the days of long ago. One always speaks of the linen chests of one's grandmother as lavender scented, and on the other hand, a reference to linen fragrant with lavender invariably suggests bygone generations.

But why should this be so? Lavender is just as fragrant and delicate today as it was in the days of one's grandmother, so why shouldn't modern linen chests be just as fragrant as those of old?

Lavender has such a faint and unobtrusive fragrance, that it has been singled out as an appropriate perfume for household linen and lingerie.

The dainty housekeeper makes pretty little sachet bags, and fills them with lavender, both for use in her own home, and to send to others as gifts.

Some of them she makes of lavender silk covered with dotted swiss and tied with narrow lavender ribbon, and others of the silk in the faintest of lavender shades. The prettiest of all, however, is the square bag of scrim upon which is worked in old time cross stitch a basket full of posies. These make charming gifts for brides who are just starting to accumulate a supply of linen.

They say, by the way, that the raising of lavender is a profitable occupation for women. Surely the work of tending a bed of lavender would be a pleasant occupation.

Lavender is not difficult to grow. Plant it in the open—where the sun and air have full access—in light, sandy soil, which requires little fertilizing.)

It needs little water. In winter the plant must be protected from the cold.

The cultivation of the little plant is a pleasurable pastime, for its demands are small and it responds so prettily to the slightest attention.

FOR THOSE WHO ARE FOND OF SALADS

To keep the salad oil cruet clear and sweet add a tablespoonful of salt to a quart of oil. The oil will not taste of the salt, as the latter will not dissolve but will sink to and settle at the bottom of the cruet.

In mixing salads the oil should be added first and thoroughly spread before adding the other ingredients and mixing.

Salads which are very moist and cooling—particularly cucumber—should have an extra pinch of pepper added to counteract the chilling effect on the eater's stomach.

Cold string bean salad should have a double dose of vinegar, as beans possess in great degree the nutritious and healthful food salts which develop to perfection in acid.

Whenever it is possible pure lemon juice should be substituted for vinegar as being far more wholesome than the latter.

Endives—the pale, cool, succulently curly chicory—salad should be scalded and then chilled to make it more digestible for elderly folks, children or weak digestioned invalids.

Adorning The Gown.

That this is a season of elaborate trimming cannot be doubted. Embroidery and soutache braid are even more in vogue than they were last season. The latter decorates net or filet and embroidery, either applied or carried out in designs, is worked in with it.

At the same time the rule of great simplicity of adornment, as regards suits, and of unlimited decoration, in the case of dressy toilets, whether designed for day or evening wear, holds good and women should be careful to see that dresses are trimmed suitably for the purposes for which they are intended.

Confined to One.

"Which would you call the more notable, the prima donna's debut or her farewell?"

"Her farewell. Wouldn't you?"

"Don't know that I would. She can't make but one debut."—Courier-Journal.

Ask any good doctor, and he will tell you hops are a tonic, and malted barley is a perfect food.

One half the people who suffer today from nervous exhaustion, loss of appetite and other common ailments, would be greatly benefited if they would drink a bottle of pure beer at dinner.

Rienzi beer is the famous Rochester beer of the Bartholomay Brewery Co., that the readers of The Daily Press have heard so much about.

It is a pure beer, perfectly brewed and thoroughly aged, with a delightful and satisfying taste.

Henry Haurand, of 68 Somerset street, is the agent for Rienzi beer in Plainfield. It is sold in bottles only, and he would be glad to receive your order by mail or 'phone. Call him up. His 'phone number is 229, and he will promise you prompt and careful service. 10 6 8 9

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The National League pennant race which will be decided this afternoon in the game between the Giants and Chicago, at the Polo grounds, has been watched with interest by the local fans, especially since the famous tie game. The greater part of the rooters have been rooting for the Giants to win and if today's game goes against them there will be some disappointed fans in town.

The installation service of Rev. Franklin Matthews, as pastor of the Baptist church, will be held tonight in the church at 7:30. Following the church service a reception will be tendered the pastor and Mrs. Matthews in the parsonage.

From a local standpoint, this is the greatest campaign the town has ever known. It may be that things will boom the last week or two of the campaign, but as yet neither party is doing any strenuous work.

Richard P. Robinson, of Roselle, has been visiting his parent's, Freeholder and Mrs. John Robison, of Forest avenue.

The Young property, corner of Martine and Midway avenues, in the borough, is undergoing needed improvements.

Mrs. Ellen Flannery, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, was reported as resting some easier yesterday.

Only the regular monthly fire business was transacted at the monthly meeting of the B. & E. Co., held last night.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Marjorie Voorhees, who has been staying with her aunt, Miss Emma Manning, has returned to her home in Asbury Park.

Mrs. Charles Willis, of New Brunswick avenue, has been entertaining her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Duffy, of Scotch Plains.

The funeral of Mrs. Howard Elliot will be held at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon at Marconnier chapel.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Arrangements for escorting Vice-President Charles W. Fairbanks and James S. Sherman, the Republican candidate for the Vice-Presidency, on their visit to Newark next Monday, will be made by the Frelinghuysen Lancers Association of that city, at its next regular meeting at Republican headquarters, at Academy and Halsey streets, tonight.

Burlington County Democrats are planning to hold a rally in Burlington Auditorium on Thursday evening, October 20, at which the Democratic Presidential candidate, William J. Bryan; Congressional Candidate General E. Burd Grubb and Frank S. Katzenbach, recently defeated Gubernatorial candidate, will be the speakers.

William J. Bryan will speak in Elizabeth during the week of Oct. 19, as he will spend two days in this State, appearing here, at Jersey iCty aPterson, Phillisburg and Washington, with the possibility of other places being visited if the Democratic Presidential nominee can find the time.

The Glen Ridge Republican Club have elected these officers, and decided to begin an active campaign at once: President, Eugene L. R. Cadmus; vice-president, Herbert Fuller; secretary and treasurer, Arthur Russell; executive committee, William H. Sayre, Jr., W. M. Beard, E. H. Waring, George Rouband, Edward N. Bristol, E. L. R. Cadmus, Herbert Fuller and Arthur Russell. Thirty names were added to the membership roll.

The Republicans of Nutley have organized a club, with Assemblyman John F. Clark as president. The other officers are: Vice-presidents, William H. Parry, Arthur R. Carr and Guy J. Edwards; treasurer, Richard W. Booth, and secretary, Albert E. Howe.

Among the voters who registered in the First district of the Eleventh ward at Elizabeth on Tuesday was the Rev. L. O. Grenelle, of No. 303 Cherry street, who has voted for every Whig or Republican candidate for the Presidency since 1849 and now declares his intention of casting his ballot on Election Day for William Howard Taft. Dr. Grenelle moved to Elizabeth from Asbury Park a little more than two years ago. He will be eighty-eight years old on January 1. He is one of the oldest retired Baptist ministers in this State. His son-in-law and two grandsons expect to go to the polls with him and vote the straight Republican ticket on Election Day—four ballots for Taft and continued prosperity.

A Democratic mass meeting was held in Staats's Hall at North Branch Tuesday night, after which plans were made for the coming campaign and committees appointed. William E. Ryan, of Washington, D. C.; Colnel Nelson G. Dungan, candidate for State Senator; Clarence Garretson, candidate for Assembly, and George W. Anderson, candidate for county clerk, spoke.

If the assignments made for him by the National Republican Committee do not conflict, Governor Fort will make campaign speeches in Paterson on October 21 and in Asbury Park on October 29. He will address two meetings in Jersey iCty tonight, one in East Orange Monday night, and one in Montclair on the night of October 15. He has also promised to make addresses in Plainfield, Elizabeth, Camden, Trenton and Atlantic City, the dates to be decided upon later.

A Republican mass meeting under the auspices of the Rahway Republican Club, was held last night in the Auditorium, at Rahway. Addresses were made by Joseph L. Barbour, of Connecticut; Senator E. R. Ackerman, Assemblyman Pierce, Captain Robert Kirkland and others. All the county candidates were on the platform.

President Roosevelt told Senator Hemenway of Indiana yesterday that he did not consider it necessary for him to make speeches in support of Mr. Taft. The president said he had received numerous requests to go on the stump, but he had decided not to accede to them.

William H. Taft and William Jennings Bryan met last night at the banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce at the Auditorium. Mr. Bryan had a seat on the left of President Richard Hall. He was in his place when Mr. Taft entered the big banquet hall. Fourteen hundred diners were packed into the room and they let out a great cheer as Mr. Taft advanced to the speakers' table. The big secretary's face wore its broadest smile as he stepped toward Mr. Bryan. The Nebraskan arose and their hands met.

SUGGESTS JAIL FOR DELINQUENT SOLDIERS

Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second Regiment, sprung a surprise on the officers of the regiment at the quarterly meeting held at Trenton, when he stated that hereafter enlisted men who fail to pay fines imposed by court martial will be proceeded against under the law of the State and jailed. He explained that the men upon whom fines were imposed generally paid no heed to the verdict of the court, and the process was simply to give the men a dishonorable discharge. Such a course, he said, was against good discipline, and worked a good deal of harm to the service. As matters now stand, he explained, the officers were often defied and the discipline in the Guard severely injured. While the Colonel admitted that possibly the drastic course proposed would make the National Guard unpopular for a while, it would in the end prove of great benefit by giving officers power to hold their commands up to a better state of discipline.

The officers are heartily in favor of the plan proposed by Colonel Dungan, and the idea will be tested immediately by proceeding against delinquents. It is claimed by the officers that a good man will always be well treated, and when anything like a reasonable excuse is offered by derelict members they will be assured of fair treatment, but when a man defies his company commander and pays no attention to the summons of a court martial he does not deserve kind treatment, and under the plan of Colonel Dungan he will be compelled to take his medicine.

The officers of the Second Regiment, which includes Co K of Plainfield, will soon be uniformed with olive drab overcoats provided for by the bill of dress of the United States Army. It is proposed soon to equip the enlisted men with olive drab uniforms, in addition to the khaki uniforms which are intended only for summer use.

It is understood that the Second Regiment will be ordered to Pine Plains, New York, next June to participate in the army maneuvres. No enlisted man who has not been in the service for six months preceding the date of going into camp will be paid by the United States Government. This, it is expected, will shut out men who are incompetent, owing to lack of drill and instruction in guard duty and extended orderwork.

Scarfs That are Useful.

The chiffon and similar flimsy scarfs are being replaced by light protections fashioned from a new silk that has just made its advent. The weave is akin to a very fine crepe de chine, and is printed in a variety of exquisite colorings and designs. It ranges from twenty-two to twenty-four inches wide and costs $1 and $2 a yard.

Of course, such a scarf will be warmer than chiffon, and so will be practical for present wear in mountain or at seaside as well as for evening later on.

DRIVER NEARLY KILLED BY A KICKING HORSE.

Howlett Van Sickle, an employe of the Ceylon and China Tea Company, was almost killed at South River, Tuesday, by being kicked in the jaw by a new horse he was driving. He had stepped upon the shafts when the horse started and he fell at the horse's heels.

The animal kicked him in the jaw and the wagon passed over his neck. Several teeth were knocked out. The man was taken to Wells Memorial Hospital, New Brunswick in the ambulance. Dr. Charles V. Butler had to cut away the upper teeth to operate on the man.

Mr. Van Sickle was conscious when picked up and very brave, despite his injuries He picked several loosened teeth out of his jaws and threw them upon the floor.

TO TEST JERSEY AUTO LAW.

Long Islander Arrested Without State License Will Carry Case to Highest Court.

Frederick J. Kane, of Woodhaven, Long Island, was arrested at Paterson Tuesday afternoon charged with operating an automobile without a New Jersey automobile license. Mr. Kane was arraigned before Recorder Carroll in that place, and a hearing was set for October 19. He was represented yesterday afternoon by former Attorney General John W. Griggs, of the firm of Griggs & Harding.

The arrest of Mr. Kane was prearranged and was made to test the Frelinghuysen license law of New Jersey, which makes it obligatory on the part of motorists outside the State to procure a New Jersey license before they can drive their cars through the State.

After the hearing on October 19 the case will be taken to the higher courts. Mr. Kane is representing one of the many automobile associations outside the State who consider the Frelinghuysen automobile law unjust.

STOLEN SUIT TRIPS OWNER.

Thief Leaves It on W. W. Davenport's Porch, but Keeps Cash Found in Clothes.

William W. Davenport, a New York business man, living on Altamont place, Somerville, who was robbed of a $40 suit of clothes on Sunday morning, which the burglar lifted from his bedside while he slept stumbled over a mysterious package on the portico of his residence as he came out of the door at an early hour Tuesday morning.

On opening the package, Mr. Davenport found his stolen suit of clothes which had been returned during the night by the burglar. In the pockets of the clothes at the time they were stolen was Mr. Davenport's railroad commutation ticket, a number of valuable papers and all his ready cash. The burglar returned the ticket and papers, but retained the money. This act has convinced the police that a local thief committed the robbery, and they are now making renewed efforts to get him.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance for the Laying Out and Opening of Kensington Avenue from the Southerly Side Line of Prospect Avenue to the Northeasterly Side Line of Park Avenue," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock P. M., on Monday, the second day of November, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Eight, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.
JAMES T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., October 5, 1908.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Laying Out and Opening of Kensington Avenue from the Southerly Side Line of Prospect Avenue to the Northeasterly Side Line of Park Avenue.

Whereas, the Common Council have judged and do hereby judge that the public good requires that Kensington Avenue should be laid out and opened between the points named in the title to this ordinance, therefore

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That a public street to be known as Kensington Avenue, be and the same is hereby ordered laid out and opened in said City as hereinafter specified, that is to say:

The center line of said street shall begin at an iron monument, being the intersection of the center line of Kensington Avenue with the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue as now laid out and opened, and running from said point in a southerly direction along the center line of said Kensington Avenue as shown on a map entitled "Perfected Map of Central Park, City of Plainfield, New Jersey, Oct. 1904," filed in the office of the City Clerk, October 14, 1907, over lands now or formerly of Central Park Realty Company and Agnes R. Bird, Fred Bird, Margaret Vail and Caro Bird, a distance of 1512.57 feet to an iron monument in the northerly line of property now or formerly of Jonathan Clawson, thence running in a southerly direction over lands now or formerly of Jonathan Clawson and George E. Sovereign, in a straight line a distance of 877.88 feet to an iron monument in the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue, and there to end. Said street to be sixty feet in width, that is to say, thirty feet on each side of said center line. Said center line and also the side lines of said street are delineated on a certain map filed in the office of the City Clerk, June 29, 1908, entitled "Map showing proposed laying out and opening of Kensington Avenue from Prospect Avenue to Park Avenue and Randolph Road, City of Plainfield, N. J., Sept., 1907," to which map reference is hereby made for greater certainty.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken for the laying out and opening of said Kensington Avenue on the easterly side of said center line of said proposed street from the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue to the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue, are all those lands, real estate and appurtenances included between said center line and a line thirty feet distant therefrom in an easterly direction and parallel therewith.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken for the laying out and opening of said Kensington Avenue on the westerly side of said center line of said proposed street from the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue to the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue, are all those lands, real estate and appurtenances included between said center line and a line thirty feet distant therefrom in a westerly direction and parallel therewith; the lands to be taken on both sides of said center line include all that part of the lands, real estate and appurtenances now or formerly of Central Park Realty Company, Agnes R. Bird, Fred Bird, Margaret Vail, Caro Bird, Jonathan Clawson and George E. Sovereign, which lies within said side lines.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken and the lines of the proposed street as the same is hereinbefore ordered to be laid out and opened, are shown on said map on file with the City Clerk, last hereinabove referred to

For the Laying Out and Opening of Johnston Avenue from the Southeasterly side line of North Avenue to the Northwesterly side line of South Avenue.

Whereas, the Common Council have judged and do hereby judge that the public good requires that Johnston Avenue should be laid out and opened between the points named in the title to this ordinance, therefore

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1.- That a public street, to be known as Johnston Avenue, be and the same is hereby ordered laid out and opened in said City as hereinafter specified, that is to say:

The center line of said street shall begin at an iron monument, being the intersection of the southeasterly side line of North Avenue with the centre line of Johnston Avenue as proposed to be laid out and opened, said monument being distant thirty-three feet in a southwesterly direction along said southeasterly side line of North Avenue from the line between property now or formerly of Lemuel B. Woolston and James F. Buckle and property now or formerly of William J. Courtney, and running from said point in a southeasterly direction, at right angles to North Avenue, over lands now or formerly of said Lemuel B. Woolston and James F. Buckle, the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey and the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, a distance of five hundred feet to a point in the northwesterly side line of South Avenue and there to end. Said street to be sixty-six feet in width, that is to say, thirty-three feet on each side of said center line. Said center line and also the side lines of said street are delineated on a certain map filed in the office of the City Clerk, entitled "Map showing proposed laying out and opening of Johnston Avenue from North Avenue to South Avenue, City of Plainfield, N. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 11, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE

Topic.—Commending our society.—III. By diligent committee work.—Rom. xii. 1-11.

A distinctive phase of Christian Endeavor since its origin has been committee work. Thousands of societies have commended themselves to God, to their church and to the community by their aggressive Christian work. What have the Christian Endeavor committees not done? Prayer meetings have been held in homes, in hospitals, in jails and in prisons. Sailors have been provided with thousands of "comfort bags," which have been indeed a comfort to them. Churches have been provided with flowers, which later were distributed among the sick or carried to hospitals. The "shut ins" have been visited, read to and prayed for, and, above all, many souls have been led into the kingdom of God. Home and foreign missions have been substantially supported. From the giving of a flower to the salvation of a soul there is scarcely no Christian work that the Christian Endeavor society has not engaged in and in so doing has commended itself by its good works. It has been known by its fruits, and this was one of the principal elements in its worldwide spread and usefulness.

But the day of committee work is not over. No society can exist long without active committee work. If we knew the inner history of many defunct societies, we would probably learn that the beginning of the end was the failure of the committees to do their work. Let the prayer meeting committee begin to neglect its work, and the prayer meeting soon loses its power and the society begins to die. Let the social committee neglect its duty, and the new members are soon missed and the older ones show lack of interest. Let the missionary committee grow cold, and the society follows its example and soon becomes selfish and self interested alone. It is easy to see the importance of committee work and the grave danger attending its neglect. Moreover, this neglect is noticeable in many societies, with the result that such societies are losing instead of gaining ground.

Let us get back to old principles. It will help the best societies and rejuvenate the declining ones. (1) Consecrate yourselves to God in service. Such a consecration will make you find joy in God's service, and no other inspiration will be so helpful. (2) Let all the members of a committee attend its meetings and engage in its work. The chairman is not the committee, only its leader, and yet the work is often left to him alone? (3) Let the society demand written reports of committee work. It will not be so easy to neglect it if written reports are the order. To write we must do something, and hence such reports are a spur to activity. (4) God's spirit has endowed us with different gifts. Whether great or small, we should do what we can do best and not remain inactive because the work of another is not given to us. Committees, be "at it all at it and always at it," and you will highly commend your society. Much depends upon you. Will you do it?

Best Society For Young People.

Christian Endeavor is the best society for young people, says Stanley P. Edwards of London, England, because—

First.—Its weekly meetings, being essentially religious, conduce to the maintaining and raising of the spiritual life of its members.

Second.—Its pledge keeps definitely before its members the essentials of Christian life and conduct.

Third.—Its pledge conduces to preparation for and participation in the weekly meeting on the part of every member, helping Christian confession, expression and impression.

Fourth.—Its consecration meetings ascertain month by month the spiritual level of each of the young people and enable the society to maintain the standing of each member.

Fifth.—Its system of committee work provides the most systematic opportunity of training each of the young people in the church in some definite field of Christian service.

Sixth.—Its system of committee work, constantly maintained, places the organized forces of the young people in the church readily at the church's disposal for any special service.

Seventh.—No other society so much emphasizes the fact that the young people's society exists "for Christ and the church."

Eighth.—Its weekly prayer meeting topics are selected by international experts are published with daily Bible readings in convenient form and are dealt with each week by many religious papers.

Ninth.—The association of kindred societies in a local Christian Endeavor union promotes fellowship, the united meetings are an inspiration to the members and the schools of methods help to disseminate the best methods for the benefit of the local church.

Tenth.—County, state and national conventions give an immense spiritual and practical impetus to all who attend and to the societies from which they come.

Christians Getting Together.

To me one of the chief values of Christian Endeavor, among many others rich and great, has been its spiritual fellowship. Its introduction of Christians of various names to each other and to the deeper and glad appreciation of our common Saviour and Lord has been an inestimable boon. I am sure this great [illegible] will go on brightening and blessing in the coming years.—Rev. [illegible] Hoyt, D. D., LL. D.

Up to Kengo.

A thousand miles up the Congo there is a Christian Endeavor society the members of which were cannibals six years ago. Asked to send a message to the British Endeavorers, they said, "Tell them to send more teachers."

XVIII.

The two boys cantered their mounts down to the quarter post carelessly, as though they were going around to the far side. The wine-red bay, The Dutchman, cantered with gentle, lazy grace. His head, somewhat high carried, was held straight and true in front, and his big eyes searched the course with gentle inquisitiveness.

"He's a lovely horse," commented Crane.

"He's all that, but just look at the other devil."

Diablo was throwing his nose fretfully up and down, up and down; grabbing at the bit; pirouetting from one side of the course to the other, nearly pulling Westley over his neck one minute, as with lowered head he sought to break away, and the next dashing forward for a few yards with his head stuck foolishly high, like a bad-mouthed Indian cayuse.

"But Westley'll manage him," Langdon confided to Crane, after a period of silent observation; "he'll get his belly full of runnin' when he's gone a mile and a quarter with The Dutchman. Gad! that was neat; here they come;" for the two boys had whirled with sudden skill at the quarter post, and broke away, with Diablo slightly in the lead. "My God! he can move," muttered Langdon, abstractedly, and quite to himself. He saw only a great, striding black horse coming wide-mouthed up the stretch. At the black's heels, with dogged lope, hung the bay.

"Take him back, take him back, Westley," yelled Langdon, leaning far out over the rail as the horses raced by, Diablo well in front.

The trainer's admonition seemed like a cry to a cyclone, as void of usefulness. What power could the tiny dot lying close hugged far up on the straining black neck have over the galloping fiend?

"Yes, that's the way," Langdon said, nodding his head to Crane, and jerking a thumb out toward the first turn in the course, where the two horses were hugging close to the rail; "that's the way he's worked here."

"Which one?" asked his companion.

"The black, an' if he ever does that in a race—God help the others—they'll never catch him; they'll never catch him; they'll never catch him," he kept repeating, dwelling lovingly on the thought; for across the new green of the grass-sprouted course he could see two open lengths of daylight between Diablo and The Dutchman.

"Fifty-one and a half for the half-mile," he imparted to Crane, looking at his watch. "Now The Dutchman is moving up; Colley doesn't mean to get left if he can help it. I'm afraid Diablo'll shut up when he is pinched; his kind are apt to do that. The Dutchman is game, an' if he ever gets to the black's throat-latch he'll chuck it. But it takes some ridin'; it takes some ridin', sir." He was becoming enthusiastic, exuberant. The silent man at his side noticed the childish repetition with inward amusement.

"He hasn't got him yet, he hasn't got him yet!" cried Langdon, joyfully, as the horses swung around the bottom turn, closer locked, but with Diablo still a short length in the lead.

Crane saw no great cause for exhilaration. The Dutchman was certainly giving the black twenty pounds the best of it in the weights, for one was a three-year-old while the other was four and they each carried a hundred and twelve.

"The mile in 1:42," chirped Langdon. "That's movin', if you like, considerin' the track, the condition of the horses, an' that they're runnin' under a double wrap. Now we'll see a ding-dong finish if the black doesn't show a streak of yellow. Dutchy's got him," he added, as through his glasses he saw them swing into the straight, neck and neck.

"Clever Mr. Westley!" for Diablo's rider, having the rail and the lead, had bored out slightly on the turn, so as not to cramp the uncertain horse he rode, and carried The Dutchman wide.

Up the straight they came, the boys helping their mounts with leg and arm, the black holding his own with a dogged persistence that quite upset Langdon's prognostication of cowardice.

To the watchers it was as exciting as a stake race. The stamina that Langdon had said would stand The Dutchman in good stead over the mile and a half handicap course now showed itself. First he was level with the black, then gradually, stride by stride, he drew away from Diablo and finished a short length in front.

"A great trial," cried the trainer, gleefully, holding out his watch for Crane's inspection. "See that!" pointing to the hand he had stopped as the bay's brown nozzle flashed by the post; "two-nine on this course! Anything that beats that pair, fit and well, a mile and a quarter on a fast track'll have to make it in two-five, an' that's the record."

"It looks good business for the Derby, Langdon."

"Yes, it does. That's the first showing I've had from the colt as a three-year-old; but I knew he had it in him. Hanover was a great horse, but this youngster'll be as good as his daddy ever was. I don't think you ought to start him, sir, till the Derby, if you're set on winnin' it."

He had moved up to the gate as he talked, and now opened it, waiting for the boys to come back. They were trotting toward the paddock, where stood the two men. Langdon took Diablo by the bridle rein and led him in toward the stalls.

"How did he shape under you, Westley?" he asked, as the boy slipped from the saddle.

"I wouldn't ask to ride a better horse. I thought I had the colt beaten, sure, but my mount seemed to tire a little at the finish. He didn't toss it up, not a bit of it; ran as game as a pebble; he just tired at the finish. I think a mile is his journey."

"I guess you're right, Westley; a mile's his limit. At level weights with the three-year-old, which means that he had twenty pounds the best of it, he should have held his own the whole route to be a stayer, for the colt isn't more'n half ready yet."

"I didn't hustle him none too much, sir; I might a squeezed a bit more out of him. Did we make fair time?"

"Quite a feeler, Mister Jockey," thought Langdon to himself; "it's news you want, eh?" Then he answered aloud, with a diplomacy born of many years of turf tuition: "Fairish sort of time; it might have been better, perhaps—a shade under two-twelve. I thought they might have bettered that a couple of seconds. But they'll come on—they'll come on, both of them. If anybody asks you, Westley, 'The Dutchman was beaten off, see? I don't like to discourage the clever owners that has good 'uns in the Derby." Then he added as a sort of after thought, and with wondrous carelessness: "It doesn't matter about the black, you know; he's only a sellin' plater, so it doesn't matter. But all the same, Westley, when we find a soft spot for him, an over-night sellin' purse or somethin', you'll have the leg up, with a bet down for you at a long price, see?"

"I understand, sir."

By the time Langdon had slipped the saddle from Diablo's back the boy had thrown a hooded blanket over him, and he was led away.

"Send them home, Westley. Now, Mr. Crane, we'll drive back to the house an' have a bit of lunch."

As they drove along Crane brought up the subject of the trial.

"The colt must be extra good, Langdon, or the black is—well, as he was represented to be, not much account."

"I guess Diablo's about good enough to win a big handicap if he happened to be in one at a light weight."

"He didn't win to-day."

"He came pretty near it."

"But where would he have been carrying his proper weight?"

"About where he was, I guess."

"You said as a four-year-old he should have had up a hundred and twenty-six, and he carried a hundred and twelve and, besides, had the best boy by seven pounds on his back."

"Just pass me that saddle, Mr. Crane," said Langdon, by way of answer. "No, not that—the one I took off Diablo."

Crane reached down his hand, but the saddle didn't come quite as freely as it should have. "What's it caught in?" he asked, fretfully.

"In itself, I reckon—lift it."

"Gad! it's heavy. Did Diablo carry that? What's in it?"

"Lead—built into it; it's my old fiddle, you know. You're the first man that's had his hand on that saddle for some time, I can tell you."

"Then Diablo did carry his full weight?" commented Crane, a light breaking in upon him.

"Just about, and carried it like a stake horse, too."

"And you—"

"Yes; I changed the saddles after Westley weighed. He's a good boy, and don't shoot off his mouth much, but all the same things will out while ridin' boys have the power of speech."

"It looks as though Diablo had something in him," said Crane, meditatively.

"He's got the Brooklyn in him. Fancy The Dutchman in at seventy pounds; that's what it comes to. Diablo's got ninety to carry, an' he gave the other twenty pounds to-day. You've the greatest thing on earth right in your hands now—"

Langdon hesitated for a minute, and then added: "But I guess you knew this all before, or you wouldn't have sent him here."

"I bought him for a bad horse," answered Crane, quietly; "but if he turns out well, that's so much to the good. But it's a bit of luck Porter's not having declared him out to save nearly a hundred. He seems to have raced pretty loose."

"I wonder if he thinks I'm taking in that fairy tale?" thought Langdon. Aloud, he said: "But you'll back him now, sir, won't you? He must be a long price in the winter books."

"Yes; I'll arrange that," answered the other, "and I'll take care of you, too. I suppose Westley will take the mount?"

"Surely."

"Well, you can just give him to understand that he'll be looked after if the horse wins."

"It's the Brooklyn, sir, is it?"

"Seems like it."

"I won't say anything about the race to Westley, though."

"I'll leave all that to you. I'll attend to getting the money on; you do the rest."

When Crane had gone Langdon paid further mental tribute to his master's astuteness. "Now I see it all," he muttered; "the old man just thought to keep me quiet; throw me off the scent till he duplicated the other trial, whenever they pulled it off. Now he's got a sure line on the black, an' he'll make such a killin' that the books'll remember him for many a day. But why does he keep throwin' that fairy tale into me about buyin' a bad horse to oblige somebody? A man would be a sucker to believe that of Crane; he's not the sort. But one sure thing, he said he'd look after me, an' he will. He'd break a man quick enough, but when he gives his word it stands. Mr. Jakey Faust can look after himself; I'm not goin' to take chances of losin' a big stable of bread-winners by doublin' on the boss."

And true to his resolve, Langdon utterly refused to share his confidence with Jakey Faust.

"We've tried the horses," he said, "and The Dutchman won, but Crane knows more about the whole business than I do. You go to him, Jake, or wait till he sends for you, an' you'll find out all about it."

That was all Faust could learn. When an occasion offered he slipped a ten-dollar note into Shandy's hand, but Shandy knew no more than did the bookmaker. The Dutchman had won the trial from the black quite easily, was the extent of of his knowledge. As to Diablo himself, Shandy gave him a very bad character indeed.

XIX.

"Crane is dealin' the cards all the time," thought Faust; "but there's some game on, sure."

He determined to back Diablo for himself at the long odds, and chance it.

Two days later Crane received a very illiterate epistle, evidently from a stable-boy; it was unsigned.

"Dere Boss, Yous is gittin it in the neck. de big blak hors he didn't carre the sadel you think the blak hors had on his bak. Yous got de duble cros that time. Der bokie hes axin' me wot de blak is good fer, der bokie is playin fer to trow youse downe.

"No more at presen."

This was the wholly ambiguous communication that Crane had found under his door. There was no stamp, neither place nor date written in the letter.

As it happened, Crane had just made up his mind to make his plunge on Diablo while the odds were long enough to make it possible with the outlay of very little capital. It did not matter about the saddles. Langdon had confided in him fully. But how had the writer of the ill-spelled missive known of that matter?

Yes, he had better make his bet before these whisperings came to other ears.

But the bookmaker mentioned? That must be Faust. Why was he prowling about among the stable lads?

He sent for Faust. When the latter had come, Crane asked Diablo's price for the Brooklyn.

"It's thirty to one now," replied the bookmaker; "somebody's backin' him."

Faust's small baby eyes were fixed furtively on Crane's pale, sallow face, but he might as well have studied the ingrain paper on the wall.

Crane remained tantalizingly silent for a full minute.

"Yes," said Faust, speaking again to break the trying quiet, "some one's nibblin' at Diablo in the books. I wonder if it's Porter; did he think him a good horse?"

"It can't be Porter, nor anyone else who knows Diablo. It's some foolish outsider, tempted by the long odds. However, it doesn't matter; in fact, it's all the better. You took that five thousand to fifty for me, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, just lay it off. You can do so now at a profit."

"You don't want to back Diablo, then? Shall I lay against him further?"

"If you like—in your own book. I don't want to have anything to do with him. I always thought he was a bad horse, and—and—well, never mind, just lay that bet off."

When Faust had gone, Crane opened the little drawer which held his betting book, took it out and drew a pencil through the entry he had made opposite Allis's name.

"That's off for a few days, thanks to Mr. Faust," he thought. Then he ran his eye back over several other entries. "Ah, that's the man—Hummel; he'll do."

MISS GODDARD WINS WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNEY

Miss Margaret Goddard with a score of 108, 15-94 won the women's handicap golf tournament at the Plainfield Country Club, yesterday afternoon. The affair was arranged to increase the interest of the women members in the game and it was a success. Miss Goddard went out in 60 and came home in 48, for a total of 108, considered excellent going.

It was expected that Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, who recently won the tournament at Hackensack, would be a strong factor yesterday, but she failed play her shot game as well as she expected. As it was she finished a close second, going out in 55 and coming home in 52.

Miss Maude VanBoskerck finished third, going out in 57 and returning with a 51 for a total of 108, which with a handicap of 12, gave her a 96 net. The best scores:

Miss Margaret Goddards, 108, 15-93; Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, 107, 12-95; Miss Maude VanBoskerck, 108, 12-96; Mrs. A. W. Opp, 120, 20-100.

This afternoon a mixed foursome will be played at the club the pairing being as follows: Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Arthur Murphy, Mrs. A. W. Opp and Henry D. Hibbard, Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton and George F. Schoonmaker, Miss Margaret Goddard and W. Lester Glenney.

Clinton Avenues vs. Nationals.

The Clinton Avenues will wind up the local baseball season at Crescent Oval, Saturday, with a game with the Nationals, of Perth Amboy, one of the strongest teams in the State. The locals will have no cinch and they will have to extend themselves to win. The Nationals have the reputation of being fighters and they play a hard game all the time. Their lineup is as follows: Cluney, c; Grimley, p; Mittea, 1b; Craig, 2b; Woada, 3b; Cunningham, ss.; Oleson, lf; Kelly, cf; Waters, rf. This will probably be the last game Clifford Randolph will pitch for Clinton Avenue, as he has decided to sign a Newark Eastern League contract for a tryout next season. The locals will present their usual lineup.

Boys Tennis Tournament.

A club tournament for boys' singles, tennis, will begin Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the Plainfield Country Club. Entries will close tomorrow night at 6 o'clock with T. M. Day, 740 Carlton avenue. Boys under fifteen years of age are eligible.

YOUTHFUL MOTHER ELOPES.

With $4,800 of Father's Money Runs Away with Married Man.

Henry Schoenwe, of Paterson, whose youthful daughter, Mrs. Etta Schoenwe Cox, abandoned her home and year-old baby on Monday night, eloping with Robert Ross, a married man, went to New York today to locate his daughter and recover her and the $1,800 which she took away with her. That the money formed an important item in the elopement is shown by a letter left by the girl, which was not found until today. It reads:

Dear Mamma and Papa—For some time I have thought of going away with Robert, and now I am going to do it. I don't like to leave baby, and even now I can imagine her crying and no mother to look after her, but Robert has been good to me and I love him, so we are going away.

Just now we don't know where, but probably it will be Switzerland, for Robert has read that there one can live for a very little bit, and with your money we can buy a little house and farm. You have been good to me, and when baby came you were most kind, but I hate life as it is, with my husband as though he were not a husband and no one but yourselves to care for me. So we are going away together.

Do not worry. Robert will take care of me and we have enough money to live on until such time as we can earn some more. Your darling, ETTA.

The police learned this morning that on the night of the elopement Ross sent a note and $100 to his wife. Mrs. Ross was sent for, and admitted both. She gave up the note and also the money. The note read:

Dear Annie—This will keep you for a while. Am going away and maybe shall never come back. If I do not return before the money is gone, maybe you can get a job in the store again. Good-bye. Your loving BOB.

When asked how she felt about her husband's elopement Mrs. Ross replied: "I know Bob loves me, and if he comes back I'll welcome him home. I know why he went away. Who wouldn't go away for $1,800?"

Albert Cox, husband of the missing girl, expressed no concern over her disappearance. They have been living apart for some time.

PERSONAL.

Edward T. Wilson, of Sycamore avenue, has gone to Denver, Colo., on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Perkins, of 223 East Sixth street, are parents of a son born to them September 27.

Mrs. L. P. Bullock has rented her home, 809 Kensington avenue, to Mr. Lozier, of Brooklyn, and removed to 62 Sandford avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Knox, of Rockview avenue, left town yesterday for Lake Mohonk, N. Y., where they will spend a fall vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hersey Andrew, who spent the summer at Fanwood, have returned to their home on West End avenue, New York.

Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, of East Seventh street, accompanied by her niece, Miss Stillman, daughter of Dr. Thomas B. Stillman, of Hoboken, returned yesterday afternoon on the President Grant, after an extended tour abroad. They have been absent one year.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, will conduct the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission in the W. C. T. U. rooms at 8 o'clock. Mrs. John Manley will sing.

Rev. W. W. Newberry will again address the meeting of the Christian and Missionary Alliance and the Rescue Mission at 3 and 8 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and evening, in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Madison avenue. Mr. Newberry is a thorough Bible student and his talks are forceful, simple and deeply spiritual.

SAVES WOMAN FROM SWAMP.

She Had Sunk Waist Deep When Help Reached Her.

Mays Landing, Oct. 8.—But for the prompt assistance of David Smith, Mrs. Mary Megargee, living at the Walkers Forge mansion, near this place, would have perished in a swamp late yesterday afternoon. Smith had just returned home from his work when he heard loud cries coming from the direction of the swamp. Thinking at first it was a hoot owl, he paid no attention, but as he distinguished the cries as the voice of a woman, he made his way through the swamp, and after a hard struggle, found Mrs. Megargee standing waist deep in water, holding on to a tussock.

Smith carried the woman, after great difficulty, out of the swamp. She said she had left her home for Mays Landing, taking a bypath to cut off distance. She lost the path, but thought she was going all right, when she struck the swamp. She tried to find the path, but got further in the swamp, and had been there for some time before help came.

Mrs. Megargee is well known in Atlantic City, and is a great lover of dogs and horses. She employs several servants and is reputed to be wealthy.

CLIPS RAILROAD TAXES; REDUCTION $3,000,000

The State Board of Assessors reduced the $39,000,000 valuation on Jersey City shore front railroad property yesterday by about $3,000,000. The action is the result of the railroads' appeals from the valuation as readjusted for 1906, 1907 and 1908.

The Lackawanna figures are cut $1,391,000, the Erie gets a reduction of about $300,000, the Harsimus Cove valuation of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is reduced about $540,000, and the New Jersey Central has its shore front valuations reduced about $1,000,000.

In the case of the Lackawanna the valuation of the shore front an acre is cut from $56,000 to $45,000; the Erie, from $49,000 to $45,000; the Harsimus Cove tract (Pennsylvania Railroad), from $54,000 to $48,000.

The $70,000 an acre valuation on the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal property remains at that figure.

The Lehigh Valley did not appeal.

William E. Edwards, who led in the fight of the railroads for the tax cut, said today:

"As soon as the State board hands down its decision the railroads will proceed to pay Jersey City on account of back taxes. Jersey City will get about $1,000,000 in back taxes within the next twenty days. Whether the railroads will appeal further to the Supreme Court is a matter that we will take under consideration. The valuations are not yet what they should be, even though there have been reductions. The figures are still very high.

GARFIELD INSTALLED AS COLLEGE PRESIDENT

In the presence of what was said to be the largest and most representative body of distinguished educators ever gathered together in New England at the one time for an occasion of like nature, Harry Augustus Garfield was yesterday at Williamstown, Mass., inducted into the office of president of Williams College, the alma mater of three generations of Garfields.

At the formal ceremony in the church the president-elect was seated between Governor Guild and Ambassador Bryce, with President Eliot of Harvard near by. Former President Carter occupied the front of the platform and pronounced an invocation.

The Rev. William Wisner Adams, of Fall River, placed in Professor Garfield's hands the keys of the college and the charter granted by the general court in 1793, declaring him to be installed formally as the eighth president of the college. Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church of this city, made the address for the Williams Alumni Association.

THOMAS W. LAWSON TO QUIT THE TURF.

Arnold Lawson, son of Thomas W. Lawson, who contributes a cup for the Plainfield horse show, announced last night that it had been decided to sell the Lawson stables at auction in New York this fall. In all about thirty-five horses will be sold, but Boralma, Dare Devil and a few other favorites will be retained.

Arnold Lawson, who is a director of the New England Breeders' Association, owner of the Readville racetrack, states that the coming foreclosure sale of the association's property and the consequent end of the well-known race course are the reasons for his decision to quit the turf. With Readville gone, he said, there will be no opportunity to speed the horses.

Adjourned Cases for Baseball.

The weekly session of the district court this morning lasted exactly 18 minutes and during that time judgment on proof was given in the contract cases of U. G. Person against Edward Vanderhoff for $38.81, and Max Speiser against James Cattano for $49.94. In all twenty-four cases were disposed of, and with the exception of the above named two, all were laid over. Next week there are no less than eight jury trials scheduled. The court business today was quickly disposed of to allow a number of men interested in trials to attend the New York-Chicago baseball game.

CHAUFFEUR YOU READ ABOUT.

But His Like You Will Seldom See in Real Life.

Mr. Blank had advertised for a chauffeur, and he passed over a dozen applicants until he came to one whose general appearance seemed to fill the bill, and then said to him:

"Sir, I want a man different from the ordinary chauffeur."

"Yes, sir. I thought from the reading of your advertisement that you did. I am different."

"In what respects?"

"If you have a wife, I shall not flirt with her.

"If you have a daughter, I shall not cajole her into eloping with me.

"If your wife tries to find out through me where you go certain nights I shall be mum.

"If any dudes ask me how much money you are going to give your daughter when she marries I shall tell him to go to.

"I shall not come to your house to court the parlor maid.

"Should I be out in the auto alone, and a son of a gun should want to race me, I shall decline.

"I am a first-class liar regarding speed when arrested by the police.

"I never give things away to the newspapers.

"If divorce proceedings are instituted I go on the stand for you."

He was told to remove his coat and vest and undergo inspection, and when it was found that his angel wings were fully developed he was hired on the spot for $100 per month.—Rehoboth Democrat and Chronicle.

AS HE REMEMBERS DICKENS.

Senator's Recollection of Novelist on the Lecture Platform.

How Charles Dickens appeared while on the lecture platfrom in Washington, D. C., in 1865 is described in the "Memoirs" of ex-Senator Cole of California: "The lecture room was crowded, but I was favored with a seat near the front, where I had a fair opportunity to see and to observe some of the peculiarities of that great author. Mr. Dickens was dressed in a highly-fashionable evening attire, not all in dark colors, and in appearance rather foppish. His vest was of a hue to exhibit to the best advantage a heavy gold chain which extended from the middle both ways across his chest. His neckwear was of a cut and color to be called flashy. His hair was rather long and wavy, and was arranged to stand out at the sides above the ears. His features are well represented in the numerous pictures seen of him, and it will be observed they have quite a uniform appearance. He read single chapters, without comment or introductory remarks, further than to announce the work, as from 'Copperfield,' 'Nicholas Nickleby,' 'The Pickwick Papers' or 'Little Dorrit.' The book in each case lay open before him, but he paid little or no attention to the text."

Defense of the Surgeon.

In a recent lecture at the Harvard Medical school Dr. Maurice H. Richardson set forth the absolute need of resorting to the knife in certain cases. The idea that the surgeon lacks sensibility and is more or less indifferent to human suffering and may even perform an operation when not absolutely necessary he declared to be all wrong. He said that the contrary was shown by the fact that the surgeon is constantly laboring to make his profession unnecessary by preventing the recurrence of the diseases for which he operates, as well as by endeavoring to cure without resorting to operation. "A popular delusion that the surgeon is simply looking for an opportunity to keep busy all the time," Dr. Richardson added, "results in thousands of deaths of sufferers who are persuaded by friends not to submit to operation, until it is too late to save the patient."

New Fire Detector.

A new fire detector of unusual kind is a fine copper wire encased in fusible metal, which, in turn, is covered with insulating material and inclosed in a copper tube of one-tenth of an inch. The tube is strung like a bell or mounted in short sections on porcelain blocks. When the temperature increases the sensitive temperature—160, 200 or 370 degrees Fahrenheit—the fusible alloy is softened and forced through the porous insulation against the copper tube, ringing the alarm continuously until stopped.

Ta-Ra-Ra's.

Country Cousin (at telephone)—Good-by, Cousin Bob; I've had a lovely time in New York; sorry not to have seen you, though.

Cousin Bob—I am, too, Mabel; but never mind; the next time you come I'll show you a good time. I'll buy you some cocktails.

Country Cousin—Cocktails? What are they? Do they wear them on hats?

Cousin Bob—No; they're head ornaments.

Insomnia.

Insomnia is the not uncommon fate of the brainworker who, after years of continuous mental strain, retires from active life. The reason is that mental activity demands a large supply of blood for the brain, and the blood vessels gradually accommodate themselves to this large supply. But, when the hard work is over, the brain does not always realize that it needs less nourishment, and hence the condition of excessive mental activity which is what insomnia is.

PLANNING HOUSES FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Dr. George B. Wight, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, will ask the next Legislature for an appropriation for the erection of a number of shacks at the State Sanitarium for Tuberculous Diseases, Glen Gardner. That institution has cost upward of a half million dollars in the way of substantial buildings, and now it is discovered that the best results can be obtained by the use of more shacks, or shelters. The permanent buildings, however, can be used for administration purposes.

MILADY'S SILKS AND SATINS AND VELVETS.

A novelty crepe de chine is called velour Salome, another concession to the Salome dance craze. It is a light crepe de chine, having lovely velvet borders.

The ribbed Ottoman silks will be much pushed the coming few months as all of the Parisian houses are using Ottoman ribbed silks. These come in all weights—the light weaves for gowns, the heavy for wraps. The light or faille silk is being made up into evening gowns. These are all silk, but the heavy ribbed weaves have their filling of wool or cotton.

A moire effect showing water lines in extremely narrow stripes is a new idea in moires, and they are made in all colors.

Messalines, the soft satins, and crepes will have great vogue.

A new satin glace has a shot effect that is pretty.

Panne velvets are to be featured, as well as the chiffon velvets, and the newest velvets are of thse classs.

Ribbed velvets are shown, and some of the newest veivets have printed borders of barre stripes, the bands being of graduated widths.

Nearly every material is invaded by the polka dot design, usually in the color of the gowns. Small dots as well as large coin dots are noted. There is no doubt that the season of 1909 will show polka dots in quantities, so no one need hesitate now, if economical, as to the desirability of polka dot designs.

These polka dots are often arranged in designs instead of being placed at equol distances apart on the fabric.

For handsome afternoon costumes the lustrous broadcloths are to be used, for they hold their own in spite of novelties. A fine lustrous broadcloth always looks well, wears well, and is very dressy.

Mildew Stains.

Should the clothes be mildewed, the stains may be removed by a mixture containing equal parts of soft soap and starch, half as much common salt and the juice of half a lemon. This may be spread over the spots, and the article should be laid on the grass all day and all night until the stain entirely disappears.

NEW PASTOR INSTALLED

Rev. Mr. Matthiews Takes Formal Charge of Scotch Plains Baptist Church.

It was a genuine town welcome Rev. and Mrs. Franklin Matthiews received last night at the installation of Mr. Matthiews, as pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, and the reception to pastor and wife held in the church parsonage at the close of the installation. The large congregation was a representative one and included members of the other churches in the village and nearby towns.

The pulpit was prettily banked with flowers, palms and autumn leaves. The committee in charge had hoped to have Rev. Dr. J. C. Buchanan, pastor of the church from 1863 to 1878, present to preside over the service, but his health would not permit him to accept the invitation. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church of Plainfield, consented to take his place.

The evening program was an interesting one, the musical program, which was in charge of Frank Conger, being a feature. Rev. Dr. T. B. Thames, of the First Baptist church, of Elizabeth, was the first speaker of the evening, his topic being, "The pastor and his pupil." Mr. Thames spoke of his personal friendship and love for the new pastor, and said that the northern ministry was pained to hear of his accepting a call to Dixie Land several years ago. "Do not forget," said Dr. Thames, "that your pastor's pulpit is yours in a way, yet in another way it is not and cannot be, for whatever else belong to the church as a whole, the pulpit is the pastor's and he is responsible for it and is expected to uphold its dignity at all times. If you think he is not capable or worthy of the responsibility you should have left him down in Dixie. The pulpit is no more sacred than the pew, but the dignity belongs to the pulpit and it should be maintained at any cost. The man you have called I know will do this for the good of his fellowman and the glory of God."

Rev. Dr. Chambliss gave the charge: "The pastor and his people." "The relation of pastor and people is times liking to the marriage bond," he declared, "the church being the bride. It is customary on such an occasion as this to wish the bride all happiness and to congratulate the groom. For this reason I desire to express my best wishes to the church and extend my congratulations to your new pastor, in the relationship you have assumed. I have known some ministers who actually considered they were doing a church a favor by accepting a call to its pastorate. I can say from personal knowledge of the man that our brother is not one of that kind.

"You have given your religious cares into the keeping of this man. You will still study and look forward, but he is to guide you. If he does this I am sure you will meet your obligations. My only charge to him is that the church expects him to be a man not a boy; a pastor gentle not harsh, agreeable but not servile, one to preach practical truths from the pulpit. Let the people know you as their friend and God will bless your work."

Rev. E. T. Tomlinson, of the Central Baptist church of Elizabeth, followed, delivering the charge of relation of "People to Pastor."

During the services a delightful violin solo was rendered by M. A. Korff, of Plainfield, accompanied by Miss Lottie May Conger on the piano.

The reception at the parsonage was largely attended, the decorations being white and green. Rev. and Mr. Matthiews were assisted in receiving by the women of the church. During the evening light refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and coffee were served.

Dr. Hervey Wood Will Preach.

Dr. Hervey Wood, the temperance orator, will speak at the First Baptost church Sunday morning and evening. He is said to make a convincing address in proving the liquor traffic the enemy of the Christian Sabbath and showing that the open saloon is the world's greatest death-trap. His subject on Sunday will be the "Irrepressible Conflict Between the Church and the Liquor Traffic," showing how detrimental this business is to every other legitimate business and the most deadly enemy of the home and church.

The Devil in Moving Picture.

"The Devil," the greatest success of the season in the theatrical world, is the feature of the moving picture show at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. The films arrived this morning.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL EVENT

Jr. O. U. A. M. Observes the Twenty-first Anniversary of Organization.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., celebrated its twenty-first anniversary in the Council room, last night, in an informal manner. There were about 150 Juniors present, among whom were several charter members. Harvey R. Thorn, who was instrumental in organizing the Council, discussed the work and growth of the order since he first became identified with the organization, twenty-one years ago.

The first meeting was held in Sons of Temperance hall, which was then on the top floor of the City National Bank building. There were forty charter members and Edward Vail, who is still a member, was the first councillor. During the past decade the Council has shown a steady growth and there are at present 357 members. Thirty-five applicants were initiated during the past year and the financial standing of the Council is excellent, the treasury balancing at present something over $5,000.

In the course of the evening, David Bodine, also a charter member, who has held office continuously for twenty-one years and during the past eight years has been recording secretary, was presented with a beautiful gold watch fob with the emblem of the order. Because of ill-health Mr. Bodine has been compelled to resign from office.

The only other members in the order who can compete with Mr. Bodine in the matter of holding offices, are Thomas Currin, Jr., who has been treasurer for the past nine years, and Ephraim Compton, as financial secretary for the past six years.

Shepherd Garretson, of Montclair, entertained the members after the meeting with songs, musical selections and magical stunts, all of which were highly appreciated. He was especially good as a story teller, some of his monologues receiving merited applause. The evening's entertainment was arranged by the good and welfare committee, comprising Roy DeCamp, chairman; William J. Firstbrook, William Meyers and Edward Mosher.

INABILITY TO READ NEW CITY COURT EXCUSE

To the long list of excuses handed out for violations of the shade tree ordinance, a new one was added in the city court, this morning. Richard Yetman, a colored man living on East Third street, was the originator and it got him off on suspended sentence just at a time when it seemed as if he was going to be the first defendant fined for the offense.

Yetman admitted that he had tied his horse to a tree and also that he had told Patrolman Dobson he wouldn't appear in court as told because he could not leave his work. When Judge Runyon asked him if he didn't know it was against the law to use trees as hitching posts and that the newspapers were continually printing the arrests in order to give the ordinance publicity, Yetman replied "no."

"How's that?" the magistrate queried.

"Why, your honor, I'm sorry to say it's because I can't read. I was brought up in Richmond, Va., but never went to school, and although I have lived in Plainfield twenty-five years I've never had a chance to get any education. Not being able to read and living out at the end of Central avenue this tree law passed over my head until I was arrested."

"Well, that's the first time that excuse has been given here and it stands good in my collection of original ones," was the only comment the judge made in letting Yetman go.

Thanked The Daily Press.

When Major W. B. Martin, of the Second Regiment, addressed Co. K at the meeting this week, giving a descriptive account of his trip abroad, he took occasion to thank The Daily Press for its kindness in sending him a wireless message of congratulation while on his homeward journey. He also thanked his many friends in Plainfield for their many expressions of good will.

Presented Fine Portrait.

At the last meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education, the family presented a large sepia portrait of the late Dr. J. B. Probasco, who was a member of the board from 1881-1908. The portrait is 20x24 and is a fine likeness of Dr. Probasco. It will be hung in a prominent place at the High School building.

CIVIL SERVICE TO BEGIN

Statute Drawn Largely By Ackerman and Frelinghuysen Effective Tomorrow.

New Jersey's civil service law, known as the Ackerman bill, under which 3,000 or more of the State's employes will hereafter hold office, becomes officially effective tomorrow morning. In the city of Newark alone, where the law is already effective, there are 2,300 employes under its provisions, and in the county at large, 1,000, so that Essex county has 300 more employes affected by the law than the entire State government. At the meeting of the commission next Tuesday all these employes will be certified to.

The commission has adopted a number of new rules which will be added to those already promulgated, and the entire set is soon to be published, together with the classifications of State and county officials which have been agreed upon.

The unclassified list of officials, who are in no way affected by the law, include the governor, secretary of state, state treausrer, satte comptroller, state auditor, attorney general, chancellor, clerk in chancery, chief justice of the supreme court, judges of court of errors and appeals, justices of the supreme court, circuit court judges, clerk of supreme court, commissioner of banking and insurance, commissioner of public roads, headkeeper of the state prison, commissioner of labor, all members of state boards, associations and commissions, state superintendent of public instruction, principals of state normal schools and members of the county boards of equalization of taxes, all officers and enlisted men in the militia. Senators Ackerman and Frelinghuysen are principally responsible for this beneficial act.

PARISHONERS GREET REV. CHAS. TOWNSEND

A cordial greeting was extended to Rev. Charles Townsend in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, last night, the occasion marking his return to the church as rector, following the action making is a self-supporting parish. There was a large attendance of members of the parish, as well as representatives from the Church of the Holy Cross, including Rev. and Mrs. George A. Warner, and from St. Stephen's church. Rev. Percival Wood, from the Associate Mission, Trenton, was a guest.

The parish house was elaborately decorated for the occasion, there being a profusion of autumn foliage, dahlias and cut flowers. Mr. Townsend, assisted by several members of the parish, received the guests, and all expressed their pleasure upon his return to the church and wishing him success in his labors.

During the evening there was an informal program of music, Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston, violin and Miss Mabel Maxson, piano, rendering several selections in a delightful manner. The rest of the time was given up to general sociability, during which refreshments were served by a committee comprising Mrs. James Campbell, Miss Elizabeth Forster, Mrs. Fred Harris and Mrs. Charles Borden, assisted by other women of the parish.

Mr. Townsend has now entered upon his duties and plans for the winter will be decided upon within a short time. The various parish organizations will resume activities which have made the church one of the most successful in the West End.

W. C. T. U. Supports Fort.

Governor Fort and his stand with relation to the enforcement of the excise laws of New Jersey were commended by resolution at the closing session of the State Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention at Atlantic City yesterday. The women commended him for compelling Atlantic City and other places which had defied the laws of the state to close up. Every time the Governor's name was mentioned there was a clapping of hands.

Another Pole Taken Down.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company yesterday removed its last pole from North avenue, leaving a clear and onobstructed thoroughfare. There are still one or two poles standing in the business section but these will be taken down within a short time. The improvement in the general appearance of the streets where the poles have been removed has been the cause of favorable comment.

TOUCHED WRONG BELL, FIRE ALARM SOUNDED

The children in the Stillman grammar school were given a scare yesterday afternoon, when the fire alarm was accidentally sounded by a visitor to the building. Miss Adelaide Ball, who holds the position of truant officer stopped at the school to see Miss Day, the principal. She called at the office and not finding anyone in at the time, walked to the hall and pressed what she supposed was the call bell.

Quicker than the incidents could be described, Miss Ball was startled to see all of the children marching out of their rooms, through the halls and so out of the building. It was several minutes before Miss Ball fully realized what she did, and then she was profuse in her apologies to Miss Day.

This is not the first time that a similar accident has occurred at one school or another, and in speaking of the matter today, Principal I. W. Travell expressed the opinion that it would be necessary to have a small sign placed near the fire alarm button, indicating what it is and that he believed would obviate any further trouble. The children left the school yesterday in record time, marching out in excellent order, without the slightest interruption.

WESTFIELD ELECTION SPICED.

Opposing Candidates Are Issuing Statements Answering Charge of Critics.

In answer to his critics in the Fourth ward, Westfield, who are opposing his election to the Common Council, because of his record as a school trustee, J. Winter Davis, the the Republican nominee, gave out a lengthy statement yesterday. In it he made full explanation of his action with reference to the naming of Pierson street, and criticized Councilman C. C. Maisbury, one of his chief opponents, for alleged failure to keep an agreement.

Mr. Davis says that his action in insisting that the name of Pierson street be retained was confistent with the action of the voters of his ward at the recent school election, when the favored a resolution in which the name Pierson street was incorporated. He holds that every citizen of the ward voted intelligently, and no adverse crticism of his action can be made with fairness. Maisbury declares that he has kept all pledges to Davis, and will soon make a statement setting forth his reasons for opposing Davis.

Temple Builders' Active.

The Temple Builders' Society, of the First Baptist church, which supports and maintains the Yerkes chapel at Tettu, India, is planning an active winter's campaign to increase its revenue and membership. The officers are as follows: President, Frederick S. Thompson; vice-presindent, Harold Serrell; secretary, Leslie Powlison; treasurer, Ernest K. Powlison. The chapel was built in 1891 at a cost of $260 raised through the efforts of the Young Women's Missionary Society. The chapel was completed early the following year and was named Yerkes chapel, in honor of the late Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, for nearly fifty years, pastor of the First Baptist church. As the young women found it impossible to continue the work it was turned over to the Temple Builders and that society raises $100 a year to employ a native preacher there. The society has a membership of forty.

Mortgagee Closes Business.

The tailoring establishment of William G. Tunison, located in the Boice-Runyon building on Park avenue, was closed today by Constable Hezekiah Hand on a chattel mortgage held by Mary H. Tunison. The goods in the place will be offered at public sale next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to satisfy the mortgagee's claim.

Will Use New Baptismal Font.

There will be infant baptism at Warren chapel Sunday morning by the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelyvey, at which time the new baptismal font will be used for the first time. This is hand-made and handsomely carved and the members of the chapel are well pleased with it. Several babies will be baptized at the Sunday service.

Mrs. Willard M. Maxim.

Mrs. Grace Powers, wife of Willard M. Maxim, died last evening after a brief illness at the home of her cousin, George E. Hall, of Belvidere avenue. The funeral will be held at the residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

ROUSING MASS MEETING

J. M. Thurston, J. S. Frelinghuysen and Others Address Voters.

The Republicans of North Plainfield fired the first gun in the borough political campaign last night, when they conducted a mass meeting and rally in Saengerbund hall. An announced list of good speakers and a fife and drum corps sent through the streets early in the evening, brought out a capacity crowd that included many women. Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman called the meeting to order and introduced Dr. H. K. Carroll as chairman. The speakers included former United States Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska; Hon. E. T. Lovett, of New York; Congressman Ira W. Wood, of Trenton, and county candidates, Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and Assemblyman W. W. Smalley. A colored quartet injected musical harmony into the gathering.

The speechmaking lasted three hours during which Republican principles and doctrines were expounded in varied phraseology but it remained for Senator Frelinghuysen to make the address that created the most enthusiasm in the crowd. He was frequently interrupted by applause of the genuine sort and not the variety induced by patriotic sentiment.

At the outset of his address, the senator took occasion to say that during his three years' term in the State senate, he had been kept very busy with the duties of the office and that while he had acquitted them in the best interests of the people as he thought, he might have made some mistakes.

"It has been my aim during my stewardship," said the senator, "to do the most good for the greatest number of people, not a great deal of good for a few. My automobile law has been severely criticised but it certainly has done no harm to the safe and sane autoists of this State. On the other hand, it has accomplished just what it was intended for—calling a halt on the speed maniacs who used New Jersey's highways with utter disregard of life and limb and bringing a fair proportion of returns in licenses for the damage done to the roads built by the people at great expense. A total of $85,000 was netted from this source the first year, but the repairs to the highways have been so expensive that we had to raise the auto fees and we now get $200,000 a year in licenses.

"The law has done a great deal of good so far but there is still room for improvement in this direction and the most pressing need is an abatement of the dust nuisance. It is not only annoying to people living along the highways used by the autos but it is injurious to the crops. I promise to use my influence, if returned to the senate, to have half the returns from fees expended in putting down oil preparations on the roads to relieve the trouble.

Continuing further, Mr. Frelinghuysen said he was not in favor of the proposed coast highway from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, the estimated cost being $10,000,000. He declared his preference for the building of local roads before taxing the people for an enterprise of this kind.

"If the State has a surplus in its road account," he said, "let it be used to take the burden of repairs off the counties. Somerset spends $5,000 a year in keeping up the highways from Bernardsville to Harlingen and from North Plainfield to North Branch and help from the State would be very acceptable. I favor fifty per cent. State aid for the county roads and will do all in my power to bring it about."

In closing the Senator reviewed his work in the Senate, detailing what measures he had sponsored and how he had voted for others. In this respect he stated he had favored the bill giving State aid for the transportation of rural pupils to the city high schools, the appointment of a commission to inquire into the disuse of the Delaware and Raritan canal, the passing of the act giving voters the privilege of voting for or against the use of voting machines, the Civil Service act and the appointment of the Excise Commission, of which Mayor Charles J. Fisk is chairman. He also introduced the auto act and the Live Stock act and its commission and voted against the primary election law, expressing his opinion that it is "a rich man's law." Before resuming his seat, he called the attention of the voters to the fact that a vote for State Senator this year means a vote for United States Senator during the term.

Former Senator Thurston was the first speaker of the evening and delivered an address crammed full of Republican generalities without making any startling assertions or letting fall anything new in the way of campaign material. He dwelt upon

GET FORT AND FOWLER

Governor and Congressman to Speak at Mass Meeting Here on Oct. 29.

Governor J. Franklin Fort and Congressman Charles N. Fowler will address the big Republican mass meeting here on Thursday night, October 29. It has been expected to have the Governor here for the first mass meeting on Thursday night, October 15, but as told in this paper yesterday he is booked to make a speech at Montclair on that night. On October 21, 22, 23 and 24, he will make addresses under the direction of the National Committee.

Tonight the Republican City Committee will meet to make final arrangements for next Thursday's mass meeting. Chairman W. S. Angleman will announce a list of vice-presidents. A presiding officer will be selected and it is hoped that the names of the speakers can be announced at the same time. There is some talk of asking United States Senator John Kean to make an address at the first meeting. Both rallies will be held at the New Plainfield theatre.

Arrangements have not been made as yet between Senator Ackerman and National Chairman Hitchcock for the appearance of Taft in Union county, which idea it is hoped to accomplish.

NEW ORPHEUM OPENS TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Work is being rushed at Reform Hall where extensive alterations and improvements will be completed in order to have the playhouse open on election night when the first performance will be given. Manager William J. Counihan, of the New Plainfield theatre, who is largely interested in the enterprise as manager and stockholder in the New Jersey Amusement Company, incorporated, High class vaudeville, moving pictures and illustrated songs will form the program.

Performances will be given twice daily and all bookings will be made by William Morris, the big vaudeville agent in New York. Ten cents will be the single price at all matinees while ten and twenty will be the rule at night. A rattling good bill is being arranged for the opening night. Among the headliners which have been booked for early appearance here is Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian.

Mr. Counihan, who will give the house his personal attention, says that scenery and stage effects will be put in probably early next week. The stage has been enlarged and it and the auditorium will be entirely repainted. The New Jersey Amusement Company consists of Mr. Counihan, M. L. Shannon, W. J Mehary and Samuel W. Cunningham.

ADULT BIBLE CLASS ENJOYS A REUNION

The second annual reunion of the adult Bible class of the First Presbyterian church, taught by G. P. Hinman and C. M. Hummer was held last evening in the church parlors and was well attended by about fifty-five members and friends of the class. The early part of the evening was spent in social intercourse and later all partook of a repast served by Mrs. S. D. Kelley and Miss Eva Kelley, assisted by other women members of the class.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor; James E. Church, president of the organized Bible class movement in the State; Superintendent LeRoy H. Gates, President F. O. Dunning, teachers and others made a few brief remarks and offered some helpful suggestions relating to the future of the class. With S. V. D. Burr presiding at the piano all joined in singing "Nearer My God to Thee," and "God Be With You 'Till We Meet Again."

Sixty Days for John Giles.

Charged by Detective-Sergeant Flynn with drunkenness and disorderly conduct, John Giles, of Highland avenue, was sent to jail for sixty days by Judge Runyon, this morning. He admitted his guilt and as he has been before the court six times within eighteen months there was nothing in his favor. Giles was arrested at his home yesterday morning after he had kicked up a disturbance that aroused the enighborhood.

Would-be Scrapper Fined $5.

John Ludge, who was arrested on Watchung avenue, yesterday, as he was inviting any and all comers to a fight, was fined $5 or twenty days in the city court, this morning. He paid the five.

LEASE OLD MUSIC HALL

Keith & Proctor Signed Agreement Today and will Open Playhouse in December.

Following a conference in the office of William M. Stillman, this morning, F. F. Proctor, junior partner of Keith & Proctor, signed a lease for five years for the building formerly known as Stillman Music Hall and for many years Plainfield's representative playhouse. A force of men will at once be placed at work making extensive repairs and alterations and it is planned to open the place on or about December 1 as a first class vaudeville and moving picture theatre. Entrance will be through the old lobby, now occupied as a store by Woolworth & Company, who are to move into the new Sebring building a few doors below before November 1.

Negotiations for teh old hall have been carried on for the past three weeks by Harry M. Sanderson, of Cranford, who acted as agent for Keith & Proctor and who will be manager for them. The men at the conference in Mr. Stillman's office previous to the signing of the lease included Mr. Stillman, Mr. Sanderson, F. F. Proctor, F. F. Proctor, Jr., members of the Woolworth company and Charles P. Sebring. The Woolworth people held a lease on the lobby store and as soon as satisfactory arrangements were made for them to move, they signed an agreement to take the Sebring store for five years with the privilege of five more. As soon as this was accomplished and a right of way to Music Hall was assured, Mr. Proctor affixed his signature to the theatre lease.

The alterations to the old playhouse will call for an expenditure of several thousands of dollars but the estimates have already been secured and the contractors await the word to proceed. Everything will be done in a hurry as Mr. Proctor stated to a Daily Press reporter before leaving for New York that he would arrange to present his opening bill the week beginning Monday, November 30. Daily matinees will be given and the program will bec hanged weekly or semi-weekly.

The Woolworth company will also make alterations to the front of the new Sebring building in order to have it conform to the style adopted by the concern for all of its stores. Mr. Sebring will take out the large plate glass now in and place it in the front of the building he is erecting on Watchung avenue near North. The Sebring block is one of the handsomest structures in the city and the main store is particularly adapted to the needs of the tenants who have taken it.

In speaking of the deal, Mr. Stillman said at noon today that another local paper was decidedly premature in its statement several days ago that the lease had been signed.

"It was not done until this morning," he declared, "following the conference in my office."

Jersey Getting Moral.

New Jersey has jumped into the lead as one of the States in which the Sabbath is most closely observed, according to the Rev. F. W. Johnson, one of the speakers before the State Christian Endeavor meeting at Atlantic City yesterday afternoon. He declared that the closing of saloons Sunday all over the State is one of the greatest victories ever wone by law-abiding people, and prophesied a moral wave toward the Christian citizenship striven for by the Christian Endeavor workers and other organizations.

Accountants to Meet.

The American Association of Public Accountants, which is the national organization of accountants, will hold its twenty-first annual convention at Atlantic City, October 20 to 23. The convention will assemble at the Marlborough-Blenheim, where all the sessions will be held.

Among them are George Wilkinson, Alfred Rose, W. H. P. Veysey, Arthur W. Kenworthy and Edward L. Suffern, all of whom will probably be in attendance.

Gave an Autmun Tea.

An autumn tea was given in honor of Mrs. E. E. Miller, of Petersburg, Va., at the residence of Mrs. C. J. Mackoy, of West Fourth street, Wednesday afternoon. There were about seventy guests. Mrs. Miller is the wife of the former rector of the colored mission connected with Grace church and has been visiting friends in town.

Autumn Brides Should Know These Silks

Many an idea, suggestion and help, in the selection and preparation of the Trousseau, for the bride-to-be, may be had from a peep at these exquisite silks. Every demand of fashion for the Autumn Bride is represented. A profusion of whites, ivories and creams in many kinds of silk will grace our display tables tomorrow, in an exhibition the coming bride will appreciate. And there is much to interest others as well.

There is the Marquisette, one of the new sheer fabrics and one of the leading silks for the new gowns. The bewitching Crepe de Chine, a perfect draping silk highly appropriate for the clinging gowns. The new Messalines, Dianas, Habutais and the old reliable Satin Duchesses stand pre-eminent for first honors in this season's fashionable costumes.

We will not attempt to enumerate the entire collection, but will simply quote a partial list to give you an idea of the variety and our moderate selling prices.

Bound Brook and Somerville will play the deciding game at Somerville tomorrow, which will decide the championship for that section of the State. Each team has won a game and it was decided to play the third contest at Somerville. "Phil" Smith will pitch for Bound Brook, and Jimmie Montross for Somerville.

Tomorrow will see the close of the local baseball season when the Clinton Avenues will meet the Nationals of Perth Amboy. As the two clubs are evenly matched and have been playing fine ball, an exciting contest should result. This will also be the last game Clifford Randolph will pitch for the locals, probably, as he has decided to accept a tryout with Newark. For this reason he will do his best to win the game. He will be opposed by an equally strong twirler and it will probably be one of the best contests of the year.

After tomorrow's game at Crescent Oval, the Clinton Avenues will have their picture taken in a group as the final act on the diamond. A little later the club will enjoy its annual feast, when the announcement of averages will be made.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will have its annual banquet about the middle of the month, at which time gold medals will be awarded each member and the acheivements on the diamond for the past season will be discussed.

Dan Randalph took several excellent pictures of the Clinton Avenues in action on Crescent Oval, last Saturday.

Another season Manager Dorflinger will have the trouble of looking for a good twirler, one that will equal the record of Randolph. At present the local material does not look promising.

Baseball is to be played at Swarthmore next spring. Swarthmore students and alumni friendly to this branch of athletics have been seeking for several years to have representation on the diamond in intercollegiate contests, but heretofore the opposition has been too great. Lacrosse has been Swarthmore's greatest forte in sports, with football to make the college prominent in the varsity world. With the abolition of intercollegiate games on the gridiron came renewed interest in the efforts of those interested in baseball, and now the athletic association has ratified the game by a two-thirds vote.

A canvass among the students shows that the coaches will have plenty of good material from which to fashion a good nine. Several men who were stars in interscholastic baseball will be among the candidates, and the interclass contests which have taken place this fall have developed a number of men proficient in the game. Among the possibilities are Sproul, M. Miller and Wetter of the senior class; Balk, Boughton and Wickham, juniors, Eberle, a sophomore, and Hartman and Murfit, freshmen. A manager is to be elected soon and a schedule will be arranged. New England and Southern trips are contemplated.

FOOTBALL.

The Borough High School football eleven will play the Rahway High School eleven at the latter place tomorrow afternoon. The borough boys expect a victory.

Another football game of interest tomorrow will be that between the Holy Cross club and the Bound Brook High School. As both teams are evenly matched the contest should be a lively one.

The Plainfield High School football eleven is rapidly getting into condition for the season and there is every indication that it will make a good record.

At Princeton, Harold Raymond Medina, also a senior, has been elected to captain the fencing team. Practice has begun in the gymnasium, the following men reporting to Capt. Medina: Colver, Cunningham, Gilmore, Spunt and Wolf, '10; McDonald, '11; and Gardener, Hornbrook and Stewart, '12.

the fact that the American people have been living in a peaceful and prosperous times for the past twelve years and that it would be to their best interests to keep in office the people who have been responsible for it. There have been occasions, of course, he said, when in certain localities the manufacturies have let down for brief periods but in the past ten years there hasn't been one honest, deserving laboring man who hasn't had a chance. The United States has also done well in international relations, he continued, and during the McKinley administration so far advanced in military and naval power that it commands the respect and admiration of all countries.

"Whenever a people are doing well," he said, "they should keep on doing it and the people under whom they are doing it should be let alone until they fail somewhere Bryan says the Republican party of Lincoln no longer exists, that it has degenerated and has surrendered to the corporations, but I believe the men of both parties are growing wiser, stronger and more patriotic than ever before. The Republican party has not broken faith or failed in its promises any year it has been in power."

The senator asserted that since the war of the Rebellion, the one great issue between the Republican parties has been the protective tariff and yet Bryan keeps silent about it. He reviewed the history of the Wilson bill, which the Peerless one made his first great speech in Congress in favor of, and asserted that the country has never known such financial depression as followed its passage. Prosperity was restored, he said, when the Republicans made their great McKinley victory in 1896 and substituted the Dingley tariff act for the odious measure.

"If the Democrats get in again," said Senator Thurston, "it will be because they control the votes of the populace in great cities like New York and Chicago, made up of people who don't know the Constitution from a drug store almanac. The Republican majorities are piled up by the great mass of American working people who have been in this country long enough to know conditions and can be trusted to take care of it. Where people are raising hogs and big crops of corn and wheat it is a guaranteed certainty its a Republican community but where the schools are a curiosity, the churches a mystery and the people are raising, cane, cotton and Hell it's Democratic."

In conclusion the speaker told of Bryan's plan to place a tax on the banks of the country to create a fund from which the depositors of insolvent institutions could be paid. He declared there was about as much sense or justice in it as putting a tax on Plainfield grocerymen to pay the debtors of a business man in Nebraska who failed to meet his obligations. With this fund of Bryan's created, wildcat banks would spring up all over the West in order to exist awhile and then fail in order to get some of the tax money from the sound Eastern institutions. The Democratic candidate of the presidency, he continued, makes a great ado about destroying the trusts but he said that the thing to do in this respect is to regulate not to destroy. He explained the so-called trusts as combinations of capital made necessary by the struggle for commercial supremacy.

Before the meeting closed, Congressman Wood, Assemblyman Smalley and County Clerk A. G. Anderson spoke briefly. The vice-presidents on the platform included Charles A. Reed, E. S. Hooley, W. G. Besler, Dr. Richard Moldenke and Dr. J. H. Cooley. The Plainfield officials were invited to join in the rally but none of them showed up.

Another factory went into blast at the Williamstown glass plant yesterday. Two are now operating at Glassboro and a third will start next week.

More oyster boats are dredging in Maurice River Cove today than for the past five weeks. The oysters are in much better condition than at the opening of the season.

CLASSES FOR BIBLE STUDY

Dinner to Members Marks Opening of Special Course at the Local Y.M.C.A.

The Bible study department of the Young Men's Christian Association was inaugurated last night with a dinner to the members and leaders of the different classes, served by the social work committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary. After the dinner, with George M. Rittenhouse, chairman of the association's religious work committee, presiding, State Secretary L. E. Hawkins, of Newark, delivered a strong and helpful address on "The Value of Personal Bible Study."

Mr. Hawkins prefaced his address with a brief statement showing the importance of Bible study work in the associations of the country and emphasizing the value of the service that the association can render the church by training teachers in its classes for the instruction of Bible teachers. He stated that over 88,000 men were engaged in Bible study in the associations of the country last year.

Mr. Hawkins presented three reasons for personal Bible study. The first, he said, is that the Bible clearly shows a man God's plan for his whole life; the second, that it furnishes non-technical specifications for the building of the best character and the third that the Bible offers a solution to the complex social problems of the day. He urged the men present to apply its teachings to their daily lives, quoting the Chinese student who wrote that he was reading the Bible and "behaving" it.

Emphasizing the vital importance of Bible study, William D. Murray spoke briefly. He said that the Plainfield association had developed out of a Bible class taught by Charles T. Kissam twenty years ago and expressed the conviction that larger and better things can come to the association of the future only as this work is magnified. He hoped that the local association might soon face the condition that some of the associations in the East, notably Madras, India, face now, that of having too few teachers for their classes.

The Bible classes in the association will meet as follows:

Sunday 5 p. m., in the auditorium, "Life Problem," led by Dr. N. H. Probasco. Sunday 5 p. m., in the associatian parlor, "Personal Worker's Class," led by J. H. Manning. Tuesday, 8 p. m., in the director's room, "The Teaching of Bible Classes,' led by W. D. Murray. Friday, 8 p. m., in the parlor, "The Social Significancs of the Teachings of Jesus," led by H. W. Herrman. Friday, 8 p. m., in the director's room, "The Life of Christ," led by Secretary H. E. Parker. Enrollment in these classes is open to all men, whether members of the association or not. No fees are charged.

Raymond Haines to Wed.

The wedding of Miss Anna Roberts, of Martinsville, and Raymond Haines, of Dunellen, will take place at the home of the former's parents next Wednesday afternoon.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

BUILDS YOU UP.

There's Vigor and Vitality in Every Bottle of Rienzi.

Ask any good doctor, and he will tell you hops are a tonic, and malted barley is a perfect food.

One half the people who suffer today from nervous exhaustion, loss of appetite and other common ailments, would be greatly benefited if they would drink a bottle of pure beer at dinner.

Rienzi beer is the famous Rochester beer of the Bartholomay Brewery Co., that the readers of The Daily Press have heard so much about.

It is a pure beer, perfectly brewed and thoroughly aged, with a delightful and satisfying taste.

Henry Haurand, of 68 Somerset street, is the agent for Rienzi beer in Plainfield. It is sold in bottles only, and he would be glad to receive your order by mail or 'phone. Call him up. His 'phone number is 229, and he will promise you prompt and careful service. 10 6 8 9

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A number of the local lovers of the national game witnessed the last stand of the Giants for the National League pennant yesterday at the Polo grounds.

John B. Stillger, of Brooklyn, was the guest yesterday of his parent's, Mr. and Mrs. George Stillger, of Front stree.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. H. Gilmore, of Newark, have been visiting Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Westcott, of the borough.

The weekly prayer meeting will be held at the Baptist church tonight. Rev. Franklin Matthiews will lead.

THE FORUM.

Better Service for Teachers.

Editor, The Daily Press:.... ....

While a plea is being offered by school children and business men for better trolley service, the teachers who are obliged to travel on the Fourth street line, beg that they may be included among those demanding better accommodation. Bad as it is, to have trolley late, it is something worse to have them leave before the time scheduled. Twice, this week, this has occurred with the one o'clock car going south. Arriving at the station in plenty of time, I found the car, not only had left, but was quite out of sight. The next car at the station past the quarter, when anxious passengers wondered why they were delayed.

It seems to me but fair, that when a schedule is made, it should be carried out, especially on so short a run as the Fourth street line, and if it is necessary for the Public Service to inconvenience their patrons by frequently changing the schedule, that they at least bring the change before the public.

I feel that with so large a percentage of school children and teachers who travel on this line there should be better accommodation for them.

A TEACHER.

FORM PRIMARY LEAGUE

Democrats and Republicans Band Together to Defend Direct Nominations Law.

WILLIAM HUGHES PRESIDENT.

Herman B. Walter, Secretary and Assemblyman Edward Kenney, Treasurer—Ready for Battle.

The Direct Primary League was launched in the Continental Hotel, in Newark yesterday. Congressman William Hughes, Democrat, of Passaic county, was chosen as president. Two vice-presidents are to be selected from each county, as was done at yesterday's meeting with reference to Essex, Hudson, Passaic and Middlesex counties. Senator Everett Colby, in response to whose call the league was organized, with his Democratic opponent in the coming campaign for Senator, Harry V. Osborn, will represent Essex; Assemblyman Joseph P. Tumulty and George L. Record, Hudson; Assemblyman Blauvelt and Marelli, Passaic, and Col. Alexander Fordyce, Jr., and William Martin, Middlesex. Herman B. Walker was elected secretary and Assemblyman Edward Kenny, of Hudson, treasurer. The new league is a non-partisan body.

There was considerable discussion as to the new primary law and its effects, and while it was generally agreed the measure was good, there were some portions of it, it was thought, which could be improved. In addition to adopting a resolution approving the present law, the league members talked over amendments intended to be offered when the Legislature meets.

It was also agreed that letters be sent to all Assembly candidates, requesting them to pledge their support against any repeal of the present law. There was one amendment, in particular, which all present agreed would have eliminated much confusion in the recent contest. It refers to the right of the independent candidate to membership in the polling committee when he obtains a nomination. By the amendment offered a candidate could go to the county chairman and have a worker appointed to assist him at the polls.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet tonight. B. F. Hadley will lead and the topic will be "Commending our Society by Diligent Committee Work."

The final rehearsal for the sacred concert to be given at Bethel chapel Sunday night will take place this evening in the chapel edifice.

A sacred cantata entitled "Gentleman to Calvary," by John S. Witty, will be rendered at Bethel chapel next Sunday evening. Exercises will begin at 8 o'clock sharp. A silver offering will be taken.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Miss Daisy Mack, who amuses the large audiences which invariably attend the production of Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, relates the following: A poor Jew boarded a Delancey street horsecar in New York with his son. The boy was tall and ungainly. He seemed at least twelve years old, but when the conductor called for the fares the Jew slowly counted out five pennies. "Here," said the conductor, "where's the fare for the boy?" "Vy, he ain't yet five—" "Five!" growled the conductor. "He's fifteen easy." "Sure, no," pleaded the father. "He can't yet be five. "He—" "Well, he looks a great deal older," the conductor insisted. "Certainly," said the old man, "certainly. Vy shouldn't he? He's had a lot of trouble!"

After all, the main object to be attained in the presentation of musical comedy, is the greater number of effective features of a novel kind to be so crowded into entertaining space, as will share equal interest with a large array of pretty, talented girls, and as many really funny comedians as can be depended upon to relieve the strain of the ensemble or chorus work. Then, too, it becomes a matter of positive necessity to provide scenic equipment, and costume accessories on a scale of superlative elegance in oredr to keep pace with such offerings as "Gay New York" is proclaimed. However, "Gay New York" has one advantage that it would seem hard to overcome, and that is, it tells an intensely amusing story, built upon rational farce lines, and while the plot is made subservient to many explosions of unctious mirth and entrancing melody, nevertheless it lends tangibility and sanity to the whole atmosphere. "Gay New York" will attempt to prove its superiority in this direction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, and judging from the inspiring reports that have preceded it, it is altogether probable that this musical comedy will establish a record whereby others in the future will be judged by, so far as concerns plausibility coupled with novelty and attractiveness.

Messrs. Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom are again to the fore with a comic opera which is said to far outshine their latest collaboration, "Mlle. Modiste," which was written expressly for Mme. Fritzi Scheff. "The Red Mill" has undoubtedly proved the most important success that has been on Broadway for many years, as it continued to play to capacity audiences for one entire year at the Knickerbocker theatre and duplicated the great success in Chicago and Boston where engagements of three months each were played; so its presentation here will surely prove of more than passing interest. The advance reports of the piece, the sort that comes from the privileged ones who have been to New York and witnessed it, indicate that "The Red Mill" will certainly be presented here to a capacity audience next Tuesday night at the New Plainfield theatre.

Union County Court of Common Pleas.

Notice of Hearing Objections to Assessments for Street Improvements in the City of Plainfield.

Thomas J. Hughes, Harry B. MacDonald and Andrew J. Gavett, the Commissioners appointed by the Union County Court of Common Pleas, by order entered on the twentieth day of May, 1908, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent street improvements in the City of Plainfield, under the ordinances of said city specified in said order, (said ordinances being also hereinafter specified) said improvements being the macadamizing of

Park Terrace, from the easterly curb line of Belvidere Avenue to the westerly curb line of Berkeley Avenue;

Berkeley Avenue, from the southerly curb line of Park Terrace to the southwesterly curb line of Leland Avenue;

Webster Place, from the southerly curb line of Putnam Avenue to a point 183 feet north of the northerly side line of Watchung Avenue;

Berckman Street, from the southeasterly crosswalk of South Avenue to the northwesterly crosswalk of East Seventh Street;

Richmond Street, from the southerly crosswalk of Putnam Avenue to the northerly crosswalk of Watchung Avenue;

Kensington Avenue, from the southerly crosswalk of Watchung Avenue to the macadamizing already constructed on Prospect Avenue;

Division Street, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fifth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Sixth street;

John Street, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Seventh Street;

West Second Street, from the southwesterly curb line of Liberty Street to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield Avenue;

Randolph Road, from the centre line of Arlington Avenue to the bridge over Cedar Brook;

Arlington Place, from the southwesterly curb line of Park Avenue to the northeasterly curb line of Arlington Avenue;

Cottage Place, from the northeasterly curb line of Washington Street to the southwesterly curb line of Richmond Street;

Park Lane, from the easterly curb line of Woodland Avenue to the westerly curb line of Belvidere Avenue;

Elmwood Place, from the southeasterly curb line of West Front Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Second Street;

College Place, from the southeasterly curb line of West Eighth Street to the northwesterly crosswalk at West Ninth Street;

Denmark Road, from the present macadam on Berkeley Avenue, southeastly 381 feet;

Sycamore Street, from the southeasterly curb line of East Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of East Fifth Street;

Hillside Avenue, from the present macadam at Evergreen Avenue to a point 540 feet south thereof;

West End Avenue, from the northwesterly crosswalk at West Front Street to the bridge over Green Brook;

under the ordinances of said city entitled

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Painfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved Dec. 15, 1905;

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved July 5, 1906;

"A Supplement to an ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits,' approved July 5, 1906," approved April 1, 1907; and which ordinances were adopted under and by virtue of the act of the legislature entitled, "An act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same," approved June 13, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto, having made and filed in the office of the clerk of said court, a report in writing of their estimates and assessments, accompanied by surveys and maps prepared by the city surveyor under their direction, showing lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, respectively, the cost of the whole work under said ordinances, the portions assessed upon the city at large, and the names, so far as ascertained, of the owners of the said lots or parcels of land and real estate, and the amount of the assessment to each owner for each of said lots or parcels of land and real estate for the said benefits, and the excess thereof to be paid by the city at large, and raised by general tax, and the other matters required by said acts of the Legislature, as by reference to said report and maps will more fully and at large appear.

"An Ordinance for the permanent improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," approved May 16, 1907;

Notice is hereby given, that the said Union County Court of Common Pleas has fixed the Twelfth day of October, 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as the court can attend to the same, at the court house in the city of Elizabeth, as the time and place for hearing before said court any objections that may be made to such assessments, when and where all parties may be heard, and has directed the publication of this notice.

JAMES C. CALVERT,
Clerk of the Union County Court of Common Pleas.

TABASCO LIMERICK.

A soubrette who worked for Papasco
One day kicked up quite a fiasco,
As the hair on her head
Turned from yellow to red

The last word of the last line must rhyme with the last words of the first two lines.

All that is necessary is to send us what you think is the best last line to our Tabasco Limerick with your name and address. Contest closes May 1, 1909, and prizes announced May 15, 1909. Get busy now; tell your friends. Here's a great chance to win an income free.

Remember, this contest is open, free to everybody. Someone must win the above prizes. Why not you?

WHAT IS TABASCO?

For forty years it has been used by cooks everywhere. Every first-class hotel, steamship, restaurant and dining car uses it in the kitchen and upon the table. Tabasco is great for soups, roasts, fish, fowl, game, seafood, for eggs of any style, for the outdoor luncheon or the afternoon salad. Use it in your kitchen all the time.

What makes excellent the cooking of the chef will make delicious the food of the home. Get the Tabasco habit in your kitchen, on your table. One drop works wonders. Buy from your grocer today. He has it; every grocer has it. Ask his opinion.

This contest is open to everybody free. Send in your Limericks in your own way and as often as you please. The fund to pay these prizes is now on deposit with Geo. W. Young & Co., Bankers, New York City.

WON MIXED FOURSOME AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Miss Margaret Goddard and W. Lester Glenney won the mixed foursome golf tournament at the Plainfield Country Club, yesterday afternoon, returning a score of 87,10-77, the lowest for the day. Both players put up a strong game, their driving being accurate and their approaching and putting true. Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton and George F. Schoonaker finished second with a score of 92, 11-81, only four points behind the leaders.

Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Arthur Murphy with a score of 96, 11-85, came in third, while Mrs. A. W. Opp and Henry D. Hibbard finished fourth with a net score of 91. The scores were as follows:

Miss Margaret Goddard and W. Lester Glenney, 87, 10-77; Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton and George F. Schoonmaker, 92, 11-81; Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Arthur Murphy, 96, 11-85; Mrs. A. W. Opp and Henry D. Hibbard, 105, 14-91.

Miss Helen Brown and W. F. Merrill also played, but they did not post their score. The women are now planning a championship tournament to be played at the club within two weeks. There is more than the usual interest in golf among the women and no doubt there will be a good field out to engage in the play. The date will be announced later.

THE HOLY CROSS SECONDS DEFEAT N. P. H. S. SECONDS.

The second football teams from the Holy Cross Club and the North Plainfield High School played their first game of the season on the Cricket Field, yesterday afternoon, and although the school boys outweighed their opponents almost ten and fifteen pounds, the church team administered an overwhelming defeat, the final score being 10 to 0. Holy Cross played all-round better football and each player showed up strong in every department of the game, and naturally feel proud of their first victory.

With a little more practice the school boys will prove a strong aggregation and should have a successful season. The game was refereed by B. J. Phelps, J. Nash was umpire and Ellsworth Bennett and L. Sharpe were timers. The halves were twenty and fifteen minutes. The teams lined up as follows:

N. P. H. S.—Left end, P. Bailey; left tackle, H. Jackson; left guard, W. Giese; centre, J. Abrams; right guard, K. Mair; right tackle, J. Hoagan; right end, W. Taylor; quarterback, E. LaPorte; left halfback, E Scott; fullback, S. Pfluger; right halfback, A. Stiglitz.

FOOTBALL.

The Plainfield Soccer Club will play a return game with the Metuchen F. C., tomorrow afternoon on the South Second street grounds. The game will be called at 3:45 o'clock.

The Holy Cross football team will play the Bound Brook High School eleven on the Cricket Field tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

POLITICAL NOTES.

William V. Steele, of Somerville, was nominated for representative in Congress by the delegates composing the Democratic convention for the Fourth New Jersey district at Flemington yesterday afternoon. He will oppose the re-election of Representative Ira W. Wood, of Trenton, who has been nominated for the fourth

The Republican campaign was opened in Elizabeth, last night, with a largely-attended mass meeting held at the New Lyceum Theatre.

United States Senator John Kean presided at the meeting and during the course of his remarks he particularly urged the voters to rally to the support of Congressman Charles N. Fowler. He spoke strongly in favor of each of the party's candidates. The principal sepakers of the evening were former Governor E. C. Stokes and Representative Barbour, of Connecticut.

The Men's Club of Warren chapel will hold a meeting tonight and enjoy an informal program.

ROTH & CO'S
5th Grand Anniversary

Five years ago Roth & Co. made their initial bow to the public of Plainfield and vicinity.

Our chiefest aim at the very outset was, and always will be to serve you with the best obtainable at prices that defy competition.

How well this has been accomplished is no longer a matter of conjecture, but purely one of history, our ever increasing patronage rendering unimpeachable testimony of its being an undisputed fact.

We are under obligations for the generous endorsement and approval extended in the past, and hope for a still greater measure of your confidence by a rigid determination to live up to our promises, and

DELIVER THE GOODS.

That this event may have more than passing notice, and in fact, we would have it live in your memory as a shining mark of our appreciation.

According to a report sent to the Burlington County Board of Freeholders by the engineer of the State Board of Health separate sewerage systems will be required for the almshouse and asylum at New Lisbon when the Freeholders carry out the State board's order to cease polluting the Rancocas Creek by May 1 next and give Mt. Holly's water supply a clean bill of health.

Irate yachtsmen who claim that bridgetenders along the Thoroughfare, Atlantic City, sit still and swear at the instead of opening the draws threaten to appeal to government officials to force the opening of the bridges when they wish to pass through. The complaint was made to the Board of Freeholders at its meeting this morning and special committees will look up the complaint.

Notices were posted yesterday by the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad that it will remove some of the flagmen, who have been on duty at dangerous crossings, earlier than usual.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

over the 'phone he made an appointment for the next day at eleven o'clock with Hummel, and the result of that interview was that Crane backed Diablo to win him a matter of seventy-five thousand dollars at the liberal odds of seventy-five to one; for Jakey Faust, feeling that he had made a mistake in backing the black, had laid off all his own bets and sent the horse back in the market to the longer odds.

No sooner had Faust congratulated himself upon having slipped out of his Diablo bets than he heard that a big commission had been most skillfully worked on this outsider for the Brooklyn. In his new dilemma he went to Crane, feeling very much at sea.

"They're backin' your horse again, sir," he said.

"Are they?"

"Yes; heavy. He's travelin' up and down in the market. He dropped to thirty, then went back to seventy-five; now he's at twenty; I can't make it out."

"I shouldn't try," advised Crane, soothingly. "Too much knowledge is even as great a danger as a lesser amount sometimes."

Faust started guiltily and looked with quick inquiry at the speaker, but, as usual, there was nothing in his presence beyond the words to hang a conjecture on.

"I thought for your sake that I'd better find out."

"Oh, don't worry about me; that is, too much, you know. I go down to Gravesend once in awhile myself, and no doubt know all that's doing."

A great fear fell upon Faust. Evidently this was an intimation to him to keep away from the stables. How did Crane know—who had split on him? the thought was none the less bitter to Faust that it was all his own fault; his super-cleverness.

"An' you don't want me to work a commission for you on Diablo?" he asked, desperately.

"No; I shan't bet on him at present. And say, Faust, in future when I want you to do any betting on my horses, on my account, you know, I'll tell you."

"I didn't mean—" Faust had started to try a plausible explanation, but Crane stopped him.

"Never mind; the matter is closed out now."

"But, sir," persisted Faust, "if you've got your money all on, can I take a bit now? Is it good business? We've worked together a good deal without misunderstanding before."

"Yes, we have," commented Crane.

"Yes; an' I'd like to be in on this now. I didn't mean to forestall you."

Crane raised his hand in an attitude of supplication for the other man to desist, but Faust was not to be stopped.

"I made a mistake, an' I'm sorry; an' if you will tell me whether Diablo's good business for the Brooklyn, I'll back him now at the shorter price. There's no use of us bein' bad friends."

"I think Diablo's a fairly good bet," said Crane.

"It won't be poachin' if I have a bet, then?" asked the Cherub.

"Poachers don't worry me," remarked Diablo's owner. "I'm my own game keeper, and they usually get the worst of it. But you go ahead and have your bet."

"Thank you; there won't be no more bad breaks made by me; but I didn't mean to give you none the worst of it. Good day, sir," and he was gone.

"Faust has had his lesson," thought Crane, as he took from a drawer the stable-boy's ill-favored note.

"I wonder who sent me this scrawl? It gave me a pointer, though. I suppose the writer will turn up for his reward; but the devil of it is he'll sell information of this sort to anyone who'll buy. Must weed him out when I've discovered the imp. At any rate Faust will go straight, now he's been scorched. I'll just re-enter that bet to the little woman while I think of it. 'Three thousand seven hundred and fifty to fifty, Diablo for the Brooklyn, laid to Miss Allis Porter.'" Then he dated it. "She loses by this transaction, but that won't matter; it will be a pretty good win if it comes off. She may even refuse this, though she shouldn't, for it's a part of the bargain that I was to have a bet for her, a small bet, of course. Yes, yes; I remember, a small bet. But this is a small bet. There was nothing" said about the size of the winnings. She was probably thinking of gloves. Jingo, she has a lovely hand. Hey, Crane, you're silly!" he cried, half audibly, taking himself to task; "doing business in big moneys—a cool seventy-five thousand, if it materializes, perhaps even more—and then slipping off into a mooney dream, vaporing about a girl's slim hand. I suppose that's the love symptom. But at forty; it's hardly my normal condition, I fancy. I'm quite silly," he ejaculated; "but I can't help it. But I can go out and get some fresh air, and I will."

XX.

It was the middle of May. The apple trees had peeped out with pink eyes, and seeing the summer maiden stalking through the land, had thrown off their timid coyness and shaken loose a drapery of white, all rose-tinted and green-shaded, that turned their broad-acred homes into fairy ballrooms.

But all the newborn awakening, all the sweet strength of soul and life that was borne to the waiting land on the wings of soft winds, brought not the hoped-for allotment to John Porter.

At Ringwood they had waited for the springtime. That would work the cure the doctor's skill had failed of. A man of outdoors, it was the house caging that was killing him, keeping him back.

These things were said; but Dr. Rathbone only shook his wise old head, with its world of good sense, and answered: "It is none of these things. The trouble is in his mind; he is fretting. A sensitive man, well in body, may be brought to illness by anticipated disaster. That could not have been the case with John Porter well, but John Porter ill is quite a different matter. It's as I have said before, give him hope, win him races."

So Allis was really glad at the near approach of the time of her trial. The day was coming fast, soon, when she was to go forth with her little band of horses, to strive for the fulfillment of that which had been put upon her.

The nearness of the not-to-be-shirked responsibility drove into her veins an unlooked for exhilaration of strength. She had thought that she would look with dread upon the going away from Ringwood; that a feeling much akin to stage fright would quite unnerve her at the very last. The riding at home, the horse lore, and the almost constant companionship of her father, always among horses and horsemen, though it appeared somewhat dreadful to the village folks, had been as nothing to her. Now that she needed strength for the newer, stranger endeavor, it came to her, even as the blossoms came to the swaying apple trees, great and small.

What wouldn't she do? she asked herself many times, to bring a strength-giving peace to her father's mind.

The prospective commencement of the racing campaign seemed to foreshadow a complete fulfillment of the doctor's prophecy should success smile upon this modern Joan of Arc; for the bustle of preparation was music to the ears of the stricken man, and he fought the lethargic fever of discontent that was over him until his eyes brightened and his face took on a hopeful look of interest.

"Brave little woman," he said to Allis, "it's a shame for a great hulk as I am to lie up here, while you fight the sharks that were almost too much for your father."

Then he spoke a little lower, as a man utters unfamiliar words for the first time. "Your mother said that Providence would look after you. Sounds strange, doesn't it, girl? But I'm glad. Your mother was so bitter—I don't blame her—now she's turned right around. And, Allis, I believe with a little tempting, a little coaxing, she'd almost have a bet on Lucretia in your hands. Funny, isn't it?" And he gave a little chuckle.

Allis hadn't heard her father laugh for a long time. It wasn't much of a laugh, very dry, and very short lived, hardly lighting up his face at all, but still it was the feeble pulsation of humor which showed that the old John Porter spirit was not quite broken.

"About the betting, Allis, you must have Dixon come down here to see me, for the horses are to go to his stable again, aren't they?"

"Yes, father."

"That's right. I thought we had arranged it that way, but I seem to forget things since that bad tamble."

"You don't forget much now, father; you're getting stronger in every way."

"Blarney, girl. But I don't mind; your blarney is like the sunshine that comes through the window. But about Dixon. Have him come down, for we must arrange to back Lucretia—she's worth it. She's been doing well, hasn't she, girl? O, God! why can't I go out into the corn and see the little mare do just one gallop? And then I'd like to sit and look at the trees sway back and forth in the wind. Their swing is like the free gallop of a good horse."

He dropped the brief, fretful remonstrance against fate with an apologetic turning away of his head, and continued about the trainer.

"Lucretia's in the Brooklyn, Allis; you know that, of course. If Dixon starts her, the stake alone will be about enough to run for, for a three-year-old has a tough job ahead in that mob of picked horses. But you'll get a line on her there—I think she'll win with ninety-two pounds up; but if she shows good form, then she'll have to be backed for the Brooklyn Derby. Lucretia's the best three-year-old in the land, I know. We'll have to arrange for that money. There will be a couple of thousand to be had if it seems safe business. You and Dixon will judge of that. You're taking Lauzanne, girl. Is it worth while?"

"Lauzanne is going to do great things for us, father. I'm sure of it."

"Still young, Allis. I talked like that when I was your age. Fancy and horse racing go arm in arm always, and they're like an experienced man of forty hobnobbing with the little love god; they're just about as well mated."

Porter's irrelevant simile caused Allis to start, and Crane's relentless eyes came and peeped at her through the narrow slitted lids.

XXI.

A few days later Mike Gaynor took the stable to Gravesend. Dixon had a cottage there, which he occupied with his wife, and Allis was to stop with them.

On the twentieth of May the horses were settled in their racing quarters. Only four days remained for introducing Lucretia to the Gravesend track; on the twenty-fourth she would take up her ninety-two pounds and be tested to the utmost in the great Brooklyn handicap.

Dixon felt that several things were in her favor. She was as quiet as an old cow at the post; many false starts would improve rather than diminish her chances, for nothing seemed to excite the gallant little brown mare. Her great burst of speed would enable the jockey to get out of the ruck and steal a good place to lie handy at the leader's heels. She could be nursed to the last furlong of the stretch, for the sight of horses in front would not daunt her brave spirit.

Against the mare were two or three rather important factors; she was slight of build, not overstrong, and the crush of contending horses might knock her out of her stride, should they close in. Then there was just a suspicion of lack of staying power in the Assassin strain; Lucretia might not quite last the mile and a quarter so early in the season, being a mare. However, she had a chance.

"But I'd hardly call it a betting chance," Dixon said, speaking to Allis; "there's never been a three-year-old won the Brooklyn yet. There'll be openings enough to put down the money later on—in the Derby, if the mare pans out well."

Allis was in good hands, and she knew it, and would take Dixon's advice. The trainer's opinion was borne out by the betting market; Lucretia stood a long way down in the list. Even Diablo, bad horse as he was supposed to be, was at a shorter price; the heavy outlay of his owner, and some intangible rumors having caused the bookmakers to feel inclined to hold him close up against their chests. His work since his trial with The Dutchman had been quite satisfactory. He looked upon Westley, the jockey, as a friend, and strode along in his gallops as though he had never sulked or shown temper in his life.

Favoritism for the Brooklyn was divided between The King, a five-year-old that had won it the year before, and White Moth, a three-year-old, winner of the last year's Futurity.

Jockey Redpath had been riding Lucretia. At last Dixon had been singularly fortunate in the matter of jockeys. Redpath was just making his reputation, making it as all jockeys' reputations are made, by winning races.

On the twenty-second Dixon gave Lucretia a good strong three-quarter gallop over the handicap course; on the twenty-third she had a quiet canter; and on the morning of the twenty-fourth, the eventful day, she poked her mouse-brown nozzle over the bar of her stall when Allis came to look at her and seemed to say: "I'll do my part to-day."

Nothing could have been wished for in Lucretia's appearance that wasn't there, except just the faint suspicion of a sacrifice of strength to speed. But if the frame wasn't there, the good strong heart was; the courage and the gentleness and the wisdom, and the full glow of perfect health.

For hours the trains had borne to Long Island crowd after crowd of eager New Yorkers. Lovers of horses, lovers of gambling, pure and simple; holiday makers, and those who wished to see the Brooklyn run out of sheer curiosity; train after train whirled these atoms of humanity to the huge gates of the Gravesend arena. Betting ring, and paddock, and lawn became alive; tier after tier, from step to roof, the serrated line of white-faced humanity waited for the grand struggle.

Down in the betting ring men of strong voices bellowed words of money odds, and full-muscled shoulders pushed and carried heads about that were intent on financial business.

Out in the paddock, a small brown mare of gentle aspect, with big soft eyes, walked with easy stride an elliptical circle. Her fetlocks kissed the short grass in an unstable manner, as though the joints were all too supple. Inside of the circle stood Allis Porter and a man square of jaw and square of shoulder, that was Andy Dixon. Presently to them came Mike Gaynor.

"We're all ready, Mike," said Dixon, with square solemnity. "When they've beat the little mare they'll be catchin' the judge's eye."

"There's nothing left now, Mike, but just a hope for a little luck," added the girl.

"Ye're talkin' now, Miss Allis. Luck's the trick from this out. The mare'll have a straight run this trip."

A little man in blue jacket and white stars joined them, saluting Miss Allis with his cap in white. "Are you going to win, Redpath?" asked the girl.

"I'm going to try, miss. She's a sweet mare, but it's a big field. There's some boys riding that ought to be in the stable rubbing horses."

"You'll have to get out in front," said Dixon, speaking low, "your mare's too light to stand crowdin' an' even if you have to take her back for a breather after you've gone half the journey, she'll come again, for she's game."

"Them Langdon fellows thinks they've got a great chance wit' our cast-off, Diablo," volunteered Mike. "I had a peep at him in the stall, an' he's lookin' purty fit."

"He never was no class," objected Dixon.

"If ye'd see him gallop the day he run away, ye'd think he had class," said Mike. "Bot' t'umbs up! ye'd a t'ought it was the flyin' Salvator."

"Well, we'll soon know all about it," declared Dixon. "There's the saddlin' bell. Have you weighed out, Redpath? Weight all right, ninety-two pounds?"

HUNTING DEER ON HORSEBACK

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1885, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

ALL kinds of hunting on horseback—and most hunting on horseback is done with hounds—tend to bring out the best and manliest qualities in the men who follow them, and they should be encouraged in every way. Long after the refleman, as well as the game he hunts, shall have vanished from the plains, the cattle country will afford fine sport in coursing hares; and both wolves and deer could be followed and killed with packs of properly-trained hounds, and such sport would be even more exciting than still-hunting with the rifle. It is on the great plains lying west of the Missouri that riding to hounds will in the end receive its fullest development as a national pastime.

But at present it is almost unknown in the cattle country; and the ranchman who loves sport must try still-hunting—and by still-hunting is meant pretty much every kind of chase where a single man, unaided by a dog, and almost always on foot, outgenerals a deer and kills it with the rifle. To do this successfully, unless deer are very plenty and tame, implies a certain knowledge of the country, and a good knowledge of the habits of the game. The hunter must keep a sharp look-out for deer sign; for, though a man soon gets to have a general knowledge of the kind of places in which deer are likely to be, yet he will also find that they are either very capricious, or else that no man has more than a partial understanding of their tastes and likings; for many spots apparently just suited to them will be almost uninhabited, while in others they will be found where it would hardly occur to any one to suspect their presence. Any cause may temporarily drive deer out of a given locality. Still-hunting, especially, is sure to send many away, while rendering the others extremely wild and shy, and where deer have become used to being pursued in only one way, it is often an excellent plan to try some entirely different method.

A certain knowledge of how to track deer is very useful. To become a really skillful tracker is most difficult; and there are some kinds of ground, where, for instance, it is very hard and dry, or frozen solid, on which almost any man will be at fault. But any one with a little practice can learn to do a certain amount of tracking. On snow, of course, it is very easy; but on the other hand it is also peculiarly difficult to avoid being seen by the deer when the ground is white. After deer have been frightened once or twice, or have even merely been disturbed by man, they get the habit of keeping a watch back on their trail; and when snow has fallen, a man is such a conspicuous object deer see him a long way off, and even the tamest become wild. A deer will often, before lying down, take a half circle back to one side and make its bed a few yards from its trail, where it can, itself unseen, watch any person tracing it up. A man tracking in snow needs to pay very little heed to the footprints, which can be followed without effort, but requires to keep up the closest scrutiny over the ground ahead of him, and on either side of the trail.

In the early morning when there is a heavy dew the footprints will be as plain as possible in the grass, and can then be followed readily; and in any place where the ground is at all damp they will usually be plain enough to be made out without difficulty. When the ground is hard or dry the work is very much less easy, and soon becomes so difficult as not to be worth while following up. Indeed, at all times, even in the snow, tracks are chiefly of use to show the probable locality in which a deer may be found; and the still-hunter instead of laboriously walking along a trail will do far better to merely follow it until, from its freshness and direction, he feels confident that the deer is in some particular space of ground, and then hunt through it, guiding himself by his knowledge of the deer's habits and by the character of the land. Tracks are of most use in showing whether deer are plenty or scarce, whether they have been in the place recently or not. Generally, signs of deer are infinitely more plentiful than the animals themselves—although in regions where tracking is especially difficult deer are often jumped without any sign having been seen at all.

The bullet had broken the backs of both.

Although still-hunting on foot is on the whole the best way to get deer, yet there are many places where from the nature of the land the sport can be followed quite as well on horseback, than which there is no more pleasant kind of hunting. The best shot I ever made in my life—a shot into which, however, I am afraid the element of chance entered much more largely than the element of skill—was made while hunting black-tail on horseback.

We were at that time making quite a long trip with the wagon, and were going up the fork of a plains river in Western Montana. As we were out of food, those two of our number who usually undertook to keep the camp supplied with game determined to make a hunt off back of the river after black-tail; for though there were some white-tail in the more densely timbered river bottoms, we had been unable to get any. It was arranged that the wagon should go on a few mils, and then halt for the night, as it was already the middle of the afternoon when we started out. The country resembled in character other parts of the cattle plains, but it was absolutely bare of trees except along the bed of the river. The rolling hills sloped steeply off into long valleys and deep ravines. They were sparsely covered with coarse grass, and also with an irregular growth of tall sage-brush, which in some places gathered into dense thickets. A beginner would have thought the country entirely too barren of cover to hold deer, but a very little experience teaches one that deer will be found in thickets of such short and sparse growth that it seems as if they could hide nothing; and, what is more, that they will often skulk round in such thickets without being discovered. And a black-tail is a bold, free animal, liking to go out in comparatively open country, where he must trust to his own powers, and not to any concealment, to protect him from danger.

Where the hilly country joined the alluvial river bottom, it broke off short into steep bluffs, up which none but a Western pony could have climbed. It is really wonderful to see what places a pony can get over, and the indifference with which it regards tumbles. In getting up from the bottom we went into a wash-out, and then led our ponies along a clay ledge, from which we turned off and went straight up a very steep sandy bluff. My companion was ahead; just as he turned off the ledge, and as I was right underneath him, his horse, in plunging to try to get up the sand bluff, overbalanced itself, and, after standing erect on its hind legs for a second, came over backward. The second's pause while it stood bolt upright, gave me time to make a frantic leap out of the way with my pony, which scrambled after me, and we both clung with hands and hoofs to the side of the bank, while the other horse took two as complete somersaults as I ever saw, and landed with a crash at the bottom of the wash-out, feet uppermost. I thought it was done for, but not a bit. After a moment or two it struggled to its legs, shook itself, and looked round in rather a shame-faced way, apparently not in the least the worse for the fall. We now got my pony up to the top by vigorous pulling, and then went down for the other, which at first strongly objected to making another trial, but, after much coaxing and a good deal of abuse, took a start and went up without trouble.

For some time after reaching the top of the bluffs we rode along without seeing anything. When it was possible, we kept one on each side of a creek, avoiding the tops of the ridges, because while on them a horseman can be seen at a very long distance, and going with particular caution whenever we went round a spur or came up over a crest. The country stretched away like an endless, billowy sea of dull-brown soil and barren sage-brush, the valleys making long parallel furrows, and every thing having a look of dreary sameness.

At length, as we came out on a rounded ridge, three black-tail bucks started up from a lot of sage-brush some two hundred yards away and below us, and made off down hill. It was a very long shot, especially to try running, but, as game seemed scarce and cartridges were plenty, I leaped off the horse, and, kneeling, fired. The bullet went low, striking in line at the feet of the hindmost. I was very high next time, making a wild shot above and ahead of them, which had the effect of turning them, and they went off round a shoulder of a bluff, being by this time down in the valley. Having plenty of time I elevated the sights (a thing I hardly ever do) to four hundred yards and waited for their reappearance. Meanwhile they had evidently gotten over their fright, for pretty soon one walked out from the other side of the bluff, and came to a standstill, broadside toward me. He was too far off for me to see his horns.

As I was raising the rifle another stepped out and began to walk towards the first. I thought I might as well have as much of a target as possible to shoot at, and waited for the second buck to come out farther, which he did immediately and stood still just alongside of the first. I aimed above his shoulders and pulled the trigger. Over went the two bucks! And when I rushed down to where they lay I found I had pulled a little to one side, and the bullet had broken the backs of both.

While my companion was dressing them I went back and paced off the distance. It was just four hundred and thirty-one long paces; over four hundred yards. Both were large bucks and very fat, with the velvet hanging in shreds from their antlers, for it was late in August. The day was waning and we had a long ride back to the wagon, each with a buck behind his saddle. When we came back to the river valley it was pitch dark, and it was rather ticklish work for our heavily laden horses to pick their way down the steep bluffs and over the rapid stream; nor were we sorry when we saw ahead under a bluff the gleam of the camp fire, as it was reflected back from the canvas-topped prairie schooner, that for the time being represented home to us.

His legs hardly so much as twitched.

This was much the best shot I ever made; and it is just such a shot as any one will occasionally make if he takes a good many chances and fires often at ranges where the odds are greatly against his hitting. I suppose I had fired a dozen times at animals four or five hundred yards off, and now, by the doctrine of chances, I happened to hit; but I would have been very foolish if I had thought for a moment that I had learned how to hit at over four hundred yards. I have yet to see the hunter who can hit with any regularity at that distance, when he has to judge it for himself; though I have seen plenty who could make such a long range hit now and then. And I have noticed that such a hunter, in talking over his experience, was certain soon to forget the numerous misses he made, and to say, and even to actually think, that his occasional hits represented his average shooting.

One of the finest black-tail bucks I ever shot was killed by lying out in a rather unusual place. I was hunting mountain-sheep, in a stretch of very high and broken country, and about mid-day, crept cautiously up to the edge of a great gorge, whose sheer walls went straight down several hundred feet. Peeping over the brink of the chasm I saw a buck, lying out on a ledge so narrow as to barely hold him, right on the face of the cliff wall opposite, some distance below, and about seventy yards diagonally across from me. He lay with his legs half stretched out, and his head turned so as to give me an exact center-shot at his forehead; the bullet going in between his eyes, so that his legs hardly so much as twitched when he received it.

It was toilsome and almost dangerous work climbing out to where he lay; I have never known any other individual, even of this bold and adventurous species of deer, to take its noonday siesta in a place so barren of all cover and so difficult of access even to the most sure-footed climber. This buck was as fat as a prize sheep, and heavier than any other I have ever killed; while his antlers also were, with two exceptions, the best I ever got.

Three men sat down at a restaurant table. "Bring me a very rare steak," said one. "I want a rare steak, too," said the second man, "but I want it very rare. Just have the sides seared a little, and let the blood run out of it." Then the third man said, "Bring me a rare steak from an animal which has not been killed, but just crippled."

C. E. CONVENTION ENDS

Reports and Election of Officers Mark Final Sessions at Atlantic City.

630 SOCIETIES IN THE STATE.

Big Gains in Membership Shown—Sabbath Is More Closely Observed in New Jersey.

The "morning watch" meeting that marked yesterday's meeting of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union's annual convention at Atlantic City was led by President John T. Sproull. The convention's sessions endede last night and the Plainfield delegates returned today.

The annual report of the State Bible study work was read by Rev. Walter B. Greenway, of Jersey City, formerly president of the Essex Union.

Rev. Dr. Floyd Tomkns conducted a "quiet hour" service.

Rev. Abram Duryee, of Hackensack, submitted the report of the State evangelistic department.

An open parliament on "Junior and Intermediate Work," was a feature of this afternoon's session.

The report of the secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown, gave a most interesting summary of Christian Endeavor statistics throughout the State. The year's work done by the Young People's, the Intermediate and the Junior organizations:

Number of Young People's societies, 630; Intermediate societies, 35; Junior societies, 412; total, 1,077. Membership of Young People's societies, active, 11,813; Young People's societies, associate, 3,430; Interediate societies, 442; Junior societies, 6,568 total, 22,253. Number of societies added: Young People's, 35; Intermediate, 7; Junior, 40; total, 82. Number of societies disbanded: Young People's, 45; Intermediate, 7; Junior, 12; total, 64 Number of societies increasing ten per cent or ore, Young People's, 181; Junior, 96; total, 277. Number of members added to societies: Young People's 1,9484; Intermediate 102; Junior, 1,523; total, 3,573.

The societies making the largest percentage of gain during the year were the Young People's of the River Edge Congregational church, 230 per cent, and the Junior Society of the Morristown First Baptist church, 250 per cent.

Other statistics were: Number uniting with the church from societies, Young People's 669; Intermediate, 20; Junior, 271; total, 960. Contributions to missions, Young People's, $6,882; Intermediate, $124; Junior, 1,161; total, $8,167. Contributions to other objects, Young People's, $6,393; Intermediate, $118; Junior, $1,386; total, $7,897. Grand total of gifts, $16,064.

The banner missionary societies were: Young People's, Westfield Presbyterian, giving $518; Intermediate, Ridgewood Reformed, giving $55, and Junior, Weehawken, giving $50. The banner societies in membership were: Young People's, Glassboro, Methodist Protestant, 165, Intermediate, 40, and Junior, Elizabeth, Greystone Presbyterian, 158.

During the year five Young People's societies gained in membership 100 per cent or more, the River Edge Congregational, 230 per cent.; the Closter First Congregational, 157 per cent.; the People's Mission, Jersey City, 137 per cent.; the Camden Third Presbyterian, 130 per cent.; and the Trenton Wilbur Chapel, 100 per cent. Twenty-three societies gained 50 per cent. or ore. Among the Junior societies twelve gained in membership 100 per cent or more.

New Jersey has jumped into the lead as one of the States in which the Sabbath is most closely observed, according to Rev. F. W. Johnson, one of the speakers at the meeting, late yesterday afternoon. He declared that closing of saloons Sundays all over the State is one of the greatest victories ever won by the law-abiding people, and prophesied a moral wave toward Christian citizenship, striven for by the Christian Endeavor workers and other organizations.

These officers were elected:

President, J. T. Sproull; firse vice-president, Rev. Dr. W. D. Stultz; second vice-president, Rev. A. W. Anderson; third vice-president, A. Harry Moore; secretary, Miss Ida B. Stevens; treasurer, William Baxter; associate secretary, Miss Jessie Edwards.

Miss Cornelia McKee, of Brooklyn, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. J. Leader, of 63 Duer street.

Mrs. S. C. Peck, of West Front street, has returned from a visit at Wellsley, Mass.

CITY COMMITTEE PLANS

House to House Canvas to Be Made to Swell Registry List on Thursday, Oct. 27.

A SMOKER ON OCTOBER 20.

No Speaker Yet Announced for Mass Meeting on Thursday Night—To Name Vice Presidents.

The Republican City Committee last night decided to have a thorough house to house canvass made before the last registry day on Tuesday, October 27. In many districts the registry is far from what it should be and the local G. O. P. leaders are anxious to make the poll book as large as possible. This work will be non-partisan in character.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith advised the committee that he would obtain from the State Committee a speaker of State reputation for the first mass meeting to be held at the New Plainfield theatre on Thursday night. The list of vice-presidents will be announced by Chairman W. S. Angleman on Monday.

On Tuesday night, the local committee will hold a smoker at Republican headquarters in the Coward building. Senator Ackerman, Assemblymen Pierce and Kirstein and Assembly Nominee Schwartz as well as Captain Robert Kirkland, the candidate for sheriff, and all the local candidates including Mayor Fisk will be present. All Republicans are inare invited to attend.

The last mass meeting will be held on Thursday night, October 29, at the New Plainfield theatre and as told exclusively in this paper, Governor Fort and Congressman Fowler will be the speakers.

WILL NOW ENLARGE POLICE STATION BARN

The police department obtained the necessary $1,347.50, at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, with which to complete the improvements in and about the police "bungalow." The asked for amount was taken from the annual appropriation made to the department, and resolutions accepting the offer of Alexander Milne to do the work and appropriating the money were offered by Chairman Buxton, of the finance committee, and adopted.

According to the resolution the $1,347.50 will be charged to and paid out of the police funds for 1908, and Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh was requested to prepare the contract between the city and Alexander Milne and the city clerk was authorized to execute the same.

In the meantime, it having been discovered that the stable adjacent to the police "bungalow" is not large enough for the purposes for which it is intended, Mr. Buxton last night offered a resolution appropriating $700 with which to enlarge the building. When this resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote, there was no comment. Neither was there any public explanation as to the details of enlargement of the building. The committee will start the improvement, including the laying of sidewalks, drains, artificial stone for the court yard, excavating for a cesspool, as well as enlarging the stables.

"The Survival of the Unfittest."

A notable address is promised the men of Plainfield at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow afternoon, when Dr. Harvey G. Furbay, of New York, will speak on "The Survival of the Unfittest." The remarkable parallel between their lives and as similar power of forceful, witty and dramatic utterance have cause Dr. Furbay to be frequently likened to John B. Gough. Everywhere this address has made a profound impression. It is a most convicing presentation of the great work done by the Rescue Mission of New York, one of the largest of which is directed by Dr. Furbay.

Essex Fair Will Open Today.

The Essex County Fair, formerly the New Jersey State Fair, which held forth for years at Waverly Park, opened today at Olympic Park, Newark, for a ten-day run. There are exhibits of every kind, useful as well as interesting to both the rural and city populace; the products of the farm, dairy, and manufactory, and all kinds of fruits, vegetables, flowers, poultry and cattle. There is also a dog show and a horse show, besides the various other amusements, including trotting every day but Sundays.

FARMER'S "BANK" BURNS

Union Village Man's Money in Mattress Destroyed when House is Consumed by Fire.

HIS LOSS IS FOUR THOUSAND.

Had Hid His Earnings Away and In Excitement Forgot It in Hurry to Save His Piano.

Putting money beneath a mattress for safe keeping proved costly for Charles Davis, of Union Village, yesterday. Fire broke out in his home at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, completely destroying the structure and its contents together with $900 that had been hidden in a bed on the second floor until an opportunity could be had to place it in the bank. The money was the accumulated returns from the season's sale of peaches and other fruits. The total loss is about $4,000.

The origin of the fire is a mystery but as near as can be determined it started in the room where the $900 was stowed away. When the family discovered the flames it was utterly impossible to get anywhere near the money although Mr. Davis made a despetate attempt. The neighborhood was alarmed and a dozen or more volunteers responded but a lack of water prevented them from being of any great service. Several men managed to get a piano out and a few articles of fruniture but beyond that nothing was saved. The barn and other farm buildings were not reached by the flames.

HOPE MEN'S CLUB GIVES A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of Hope Chapel, a very enjoyable evening's enterlainment was given in the Chapel last night. The main feature of the affair was a stereopticon lecture by the Rev. L. R. Howard on "An Old Town by the Sea." Mr. Howard was up in the vicinity of "The Old Town" during the past summmer and in an interesting anl instructive manner related incidents about Portsmouth, which was the old town referred to, and the surrounding vicinity. Mr. Howard spoke of the lives of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, whose home is kept as a memorial and is one of the attractions of that city; Mrs. Celia Thaxter, who lived just outside of the harbor on the Isle of Shoals; and of William Dean Howells, who still has a summer home in Portsmouth.

Mrs. L. R. Howard sang in a very pleasing manner, several songs that were written by Mrs. Thaxter, and Mrs. G. Stuart Simons gave recitations from the works of the two authors mentioned that were much appreciated. George Henry Fisher, Jr. was in charge of the lantern and the views shown on the screen were excellent.

The committee in charge of the affair was George Firstbrook, James Penny, and John Slorah.

Gettysburg Pictures.

Scenes of the Battlefield of Gettysburg, the combat where thousands of Union and Confederate troops were killed on the third day of the encounter, July 3, 1863, comprise a new series of moving pictures at the Bijou theatre in East Front street. The peach orchard, the wheat field, missionary ridge, little round top and big round top are shown as they appear today studded with costly monuments and statues to brigades, regiments, officers and men who fought to preserve the Union of States.

Slight Fire in Borough Home.

Plumbers working in the kitchen of Frederick Harrington's residence on Rockview terrace, yesterday afternoon, started a slight fire by getting a fire pot too near a can of gasoline. The floor began blazing and an alarm was turned in from box 154. The borough department responded but there was practically nothing to do when the men arrived. The damage was trifling.

Mr. and Mrs. Ammon Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ammon, of Greenbrook, entertained forty friends at their home, last night, in honor of their wedding which took place on June 21. Music, games and dancing were features of the gathering. The host and hostess received numerous handsome gifts in honor of the occasion.

Lost His Job; Got Arrested.

Hugo Walzenbach, a baker employed by a borough man, got fired from his job, this morning, and kicked up a row because he didn't like the way it was done. The cops got him and he will be given a hearing tonight.

TUMULTY TO ADDRESS BOROUGH'S DEMOCRATS

Joseph Tumulty, of Hudson county, one of Democracy's silver-tongued corps, will be the principal speaker at a big mass meeting to be held on Thursday nuight. The rally will be held at Debele's hall in Chatham street under the auspices of the North Plainfield Democratic Club, of which former Assemblymen S. S. Swackhamer is president.

Other speakers will include Major Nelson Y. Dungan, candidate for State Senator; Clarence Garretson, candidate for assemblyman, and George Anderson, candidate for county clerk, will also make some brief remarks. Major Dungan is expected to reply to the speech made by his opponent, State Senator Frelinghuysen at Saengerbund hall on Thursday night.

ABANDONS MINISTRY TO JOIN SALVATION ARMY

Abandoning the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church to become a recruit in the Salvation Army forces, Rev. Walter Scott Stranahan, of Canada, has been assigned to the Plainfield barracks as an aide to Captain Arthur Hopkins. The assignment made by Col. Mcintyre, of the Provincial corps, is but a temporary one and after a short time, the minister will be given the rank of captain and placed in charge of a station in some other city.

Rev. Mr. Stranahan has been in the ministry for ten years. He is a graduate of the Garrett Bibical Institute of Chicago and of the Northwestern University. Before accepting a call to Canada, he was pastor of an M. E. church in a Chicago suburb. Tomorrow night, he will preach at the Salvation Army meeting. His subject will be "Greatness in God's Sight." There will be special instrumental music and singing.

SUPERINTENDENT KREBS HOST AT A RECEPTION

The members of the North Plainfield Board of Education, the teachers of the borough schools, together with their friends, to the number of about sixty, enjoyed a delightful informal reception given at the Somerset school last night by Superintendent H. C. Krebs. The affair was arranged by Mr. Krebs and intended to afford the teachers and members of the board to become better acqpainted, especially with the new members of the faculty.

The auditorium, where the reception was held, was tastefully decorated for the occasion with flowers, autumn leaves and American flags. At the outset Mr. Krebs explained the purpose of the affair and extended to all a most cordial greeting, also expressing the wish that the coming year would be a successful one and that the teachers would cooperate in carrying forward the high standard set for education in the borough schools.

During the evening the occasion was enlivened with a selections by a stringed orchestra and another feature was soprano solos by Miss May Conroy. After the rendition of an informal program refreshments were served.

MISS ALICE MEHL TENDERED SURPRISE PARTY BY FRIENDS.

Twenty-five friends of Miss Alice Mehl, of Madison avenue tendered her a surprise party at her home last night. It was arranged by the Misses Marion Blimm and Mary Wierenga and proved a delightful affair. Music and games were enjoyed until 10:30 when supper was served and it was midnight before the guests departed for home.

Those in attendance included the Misses Adelaide Cole, Gertrude Blimm, Marion Thompson, Charlotte Sutton, Fanny Buckley, Ella Buckley, Grace Debele, Elsie Moore, Ethel Mehl, Marjorie Mehl, Madeline Blimm and Mary Wierenga, Clifford Cole, Richard and James Sutton, George Mehl, Jr., George Buckley, John Richardson John Mehl, Jerry Hart, Harvey Pearce and Elmer Blimm.

Don't Forget to Register.

Tuesday, October 27 is the last day to register. The polls will be open from 1 until 9 p. m. If your name is not on the registry list, you cannot vote.

STILL TALK FIRE HOUSE

Hitch Now Over the Term of Bonds to Be Issued for the Improvement.

THIRTY YEARS TOO LONG.

The City Fathers Will Probably Arrange for $15,000 Ten Years Issue on Tuesday Night.

The "fifty-seventh" attempt to secure favorable action on the proposition to locate a fire-house in the East End of the city and equip the same, was made at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night. Chairman Herbert Buxton, of the finance committee, presented a petition signed by sixty-two residents of the Netherwood urging this improvement, and Mr. Hibbard, chairman of the fire and building committee, moved that the previous resolution authorizing the appropriation of $15,000 for building and equipment be taken from the table. This done, he then moved its adoption.

By the way of explanation, Mr. Hall, who has championed the improvement, stated that Corporation Counsel Marsh had informed him that it was not necessary to appoint a sinking fund commimssion, that the Common Council could act in that capacity, the same as in the matter of school bond issues, and this would not be establishing any precedent. It would not even be necessary to sell the whole issue of bonds at once. A portion of them could be disposed of now and the rest later.

While there was not a single one of the ten members present who did did not consider the fire-house a necessity, there was strong opposition to the issuance of $15,000 worth of bonds for a term of thirty years, and for this reason the resolution appropriating that sum under those conditions, failed to pass, five members voting against it and five for it. Afterwards it was learned that some of those who voted against it were willing to vote for a ten years issue and when this was learned a call was prepared for a special meeting to be held in Tuesday night, October 13, when it is hoped to pass the resolution so that the work may be started.

In support of the resolution, Mr. Hall said that the plans approved by the committee are the best that could be obtained, that there is no unnecessary ornamentation or room, and only such things as will be an absolute necessity have been included in the plans. Mr. Buxton spoke in support of the proposed improvement, adding that while the resolution calls for $15,000 it is possible that the building and equipment may cost considerably less.

In response to a question, Mr. Hibbard stated that while it was proposed to start the work immediately, it was realized that it could not be completed before the first of the year. Mr. Taylor wanted to know if it was not customary to make such appropriations through an ordinance, instead of a resolution and to grant a public hearing.

In reply Mr. Buxton said that he thought ample hearing had been given and the petition presented at the meeting answered the purpose. Mr. Suydam objected to the issue of bonds for thirty years, and while he realized the necessity of the firehouse, he also called attention to the fact that the Fletcher fire was the last conflagration of any importance in that part of the city, it was recognized that ten apparatus would not have saved the house as the hydrants were frozen.

Mr. Hall further explained that it was Corporation Counsel Marsh who suggested the thirty-year term, although it could be fixed at ten years. This was suggested because it was believed that a better price could be obtained for the bonds.

Another member who opposed the thirty year term was Charles C. Randolph, while President Tolles expressed the opinion that a better way might be found to obtain the money and thus escape the long term for such a small issue. He opposed the method, not the improvement, and believed that the matter should be held up for the present pending a solution. Any way much could not be done in the way of building this year.

An excellent argument was presented by Mr. Mygatt as to why the bonds should not be issued for thirty years. He said that until the $95,000 worth of school bonds were issued the city never had a sinking fund, and with another similar issue the city would not be able to get away from this undesirable feature. Under the proposed plans there will be money to be invested by the Common Council and no restrictions are imposed as to the investment. Such action might entail future Councils.

FOIL WOULD-BE-BURGLARS

Finding Them on Return Home, Farmer Summons Aid and One is Captured.

PRISONER DREW A KNIFE.

But Was Laid Low by a Well Directed Blow—Taken to Jail—His Pal Escaped.

Following a fierce hand-to-hand struggle on the bank of the Passaic river near Mount Bethel, last night, Frank Cope and his father-in-law, William Mernagh, captured one of two men who had been lurking in the neighborhood for the purpose of committing a robbery. The fellow drew a wicked-looking knife when he found his escape cut off but it failed to have any deterrent effect on his captors and they felled him to the ground with well directed fist blows. Before Justice of the Peace Lemuel Tunison the prisoner gave his name as John Kessman but refused any further information. He was committed to the county jail at Somerville.

Cope was returning from this city to his home, late last night, when he noticed the two men lurking in the shadow of a hedge running along his property. He pretended not to see them but on going to the house apprised Mr. Mernagh of his discovery and the two stole back quietly. The strangers became aware of their approach when within a short distance away and both started on a run for the river. One of them escaped by swimming across the stream but the other turned to give battle and was caught. He admitted that he and his companion had contemplated robbery but he denied knowing anything about the man who escaped.

FINED FOR VIOLATION OF SHADE TREE ORDINANCE

The first fine for a violation of the shade tree ordinance was imposed in the city court, this morning. Ralph Laura, a peddler of dry goods, was the first victim and it cost him a dollar to be reminded that the place to tie his horse is a hitching post and not one of the maples on Richmond street. He might have gotten off on suspended sentence but he got tangled up in an excuse improvised for the occasion.

Since the police have been enforcing the ordinance against tying horses to trees, there have been a great many arrests but heretofore Judge Runyon has suspended sentence on all offenders. The matter has now been given sufficient publicity to apprise every citizen of the law and flimsy excuses for violations are to be passed up. The fine imposed this morning was the first to drop and, though only a small amount, is counted upon to be a big factor in putting an end to the practice.

MRS. MAXIM'S FUNERAL TOMORROW AFTERNOON.

The funeral service of Mrs. Willard M. Maxim, who died Thursday night at the home of her cousin, George E. Hall, on Belvidere avenue, will be held from the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will officiate. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Maxim was the daughter of the late Lucius H. Powers, and was born in Springfield, Mass. Her father was associated with his brother, L. J. Powers, in business under the firm name of the Powers' Paper Company. L. J. Powers, who is still living and conducts the business, was at one time Mayor of Springfield and served on the staff of the Governor of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Maxim was married in Brooklyn, where she lived for many years after the death of her parents. She was a prominent member of the Marcy Avenue Baptist church, Brooklyn. Her husband, who survives, is engaged in the manufacture of soaps and perfumes in that city. Mrs. Maxim was a sufferer from heart trouble, which became more severe two weeks ago and resulted in her death. She was a woman of rare Christian qualities and beloved by all who knew her.

Mrs. Eliza M. Dunham.

Mrs. Eliza M. Dunham, wife of John Dunham, of near Metuchen, died at her home yesterday. She was well known in Plainfield. The funeral will be held at the late residence Durham road, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Piscataway.

CLOSE CLEANER FACTORY

New York Vacuum Concern's Local Shop Closed Here Following Receivership.

FILLED ALL OF ITS ORDERS.

Several Plainfielders Formerly Interested in Company Which Manufactured a Patent Device.

Notice was posted in the Vacuum Cleaner Company's plant on upper North avenue, this mornnig, that with the close of today's working hours the factory would shut down for an indefinite period. The force of employes has been gradually reduced for several months so that only twenty-five or thirty men remain. Of this number, ten will be retained for the purpose of making a complete inventory of stock and machinery and it will give them work for a week or more.

The plant went into the hands of receivers on May 15, last, who took charge of the company's affairs at that time. There were then on hand a number of unfinished contracts and as these have now been disposed of word came from the New York offices to suspend operations. It is possible that the company's affairs may be straightened out so that the plant can be operated against within the near future.

The concern has been manufacturing the large vehicle cleaners and has been in no wise affectd by the numerous smaal vacuum machines placed on the market, despite rumors to the contrary.

David T. Kenney, William B. Besler and other Plainfielders were interested in the company before it went into the hands of the receivers but at the present time have no connection with it. Messrs. Kenney and Besler are at present the controlling factors in the recently incorporated New Jersey Vacuum Cleaning company, with principal offices in Newark, which is in a prosperous condition.

The local factory gave employment to a large number of skilled machinists when it was first opened and was counted one of the city's most important industries. The plant is located near the Netherwood station on the north side of the tracks and is equipped with all modern machinery and accessories.

FIRST LONDON MAIL BY THE PENNY POST

Great Britain sent to the United States by the Lusitania which arrived yesterday, the first mail to be carried across the ocean at the recently reduced postage rates. Among the very first letters to be delivered was one to State Senator Ernest R. Askerman, of this city, sent from London by the Junior Philatelic Society. The letter was enclosed in an elaborately designed envelope commemorative of the new postal era and reads as follows:

"London, Oct. 1, 1908.

"Sir—Enclosed in a special designed souvenir envelope we greet you by the first penny post mail to leave England under the new postage arrangement. The envelope should bear the postmark, October 1, the date on which the new rate, which we trust will bring out our two great nations into closer bonds of friendship and business relationship comes into force. We are, sir, yours faithfully,

"The Junior Philatelic Society.
"ARTHUR SELINGER,"

The envelope carring the letter bears the English penny stamp which has for its centre design the head of King Edward VII. The color and value is the same as the two-cent United States stamp. Senator Ackerman is one of two Americans belonging to the Royal Philatelic Society, of which King Edward is president.

In the same mail The Daily Press received a letter from London bearing the penny stamp.

Rev. John Y. Brook to Preach.

At the request of the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church, Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of the Reformed church at Asbury Park, will preach morning and evening tomorrow in Trinity Reformed church.

Announce Engagement.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Elizabeth U. Moore, of this city, and George B. Bishop, of Newport, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Hunting, of East Second street, are parents of a daughter born to them yesterday. She has been named Ruth Viola.

THE BOY NEXT DOOR.

I know the baddest boy that lives next door.
You see that place where my shin-
bone is sore?
Well, that there's where he hit me with a chunk
O' coal. Th' fellers said I got no
spunk
Becuz I didn't hit him back again
For hittin' me; but ma, she's told me, "Hen,
Don't never go an' fight, for that is bad."
Still,, that mean boy, he made me
awful mad.
Some boys I know uv would uv fit him back
An' told bad words for that awful whack
He give my shin; but they ain't got no ma
Like mine is—she's the best I've ever saw.
An' so I bear in silence all th' pain
An' all his dares to fight him is in vain.
I'm good, you bet; I hardly ever swore.
Besides, I'm even with that boy next door—
I hit 'im with a brick th' day before.
—Strickland W. Gillian in Chicago News.

THE WOMEN WHO WRITE.

Miss Seraphina Bludgeon Spies,
She pursed her lips and rolled her eyes,
But still the fellow wouldn't look!
She rouged her cheeks and dyed her hair.
But all in vain! Men didn't care.
And so she went and wrote a book.

Miss Arabella Macklin Snow,
She learned to scrub and learned to sew,
And learned to wash and learned to cook,
And tried each scheme and tried each plan.
But still she couldn't get a man—
And so she went and wrote a book.

Miss Gwendolen Van Winkle Dare,
She traveled here and traveled there.
But traveling she then forsook!
Alas, she couldn't find a beau,
Her heart was full of weary woe—
And so she went and wrote a book.

For the Baby's Crib.

Something that will interest all mothers is the infant's sanitary crib, chair and walker combined. The crib is built of polished wood, trimmed with aluminum corner pieces and furnished with a white drill body. The canvas body is so designed that it holds the baby securely, yet comfortably, and with freedom. Lying down, sitting or standing, it is impossible for the child to fall out. The crib can be instantly changed into a chair designed to support the baby in every posture without straining the body. The canvas flap in front is used as a table for the child to rest its toy on. The canvas body is easily hanged and can be washed as often as desired, therefore insuring sanitary conditions.

Mrs. Edward Vail, of Elmwood place, is detained at home by illness.

AMUSEMENTS.

Miss May Irwin will play "Mrs. Peckham's Carouse," which has met with success at the Garrick Theatre, in London in the spring, in one of Charles Frohman's theatres.

The new Evans bust of Miss Maude Adas has just been finished and is placed in the lobby of the Empire Theatre, New York. The work of a comparatively unknown sculptor, Rudolph Evans, this bronze likness of Miss Adams is an unusually happy piece of work.

When Miss Ethel Barrymore comes to the Hudson Theatre, New York, in her new play "Lady Frederick" the whole Drew family will be in town. Miss Louise Drew is achieving the most creditable work of her brief stage career as a member of Miss Billie Burke's company in "Love Watches." Her father, John Drew, has the best play provided him in years in "Jack Straw;" so with Miss Barrymore located at the Hudson, the reunion of the family will be complete.

"Mater," the brilliant new comedy of "love and laughter" by Percy MacKaye now being presented under the direction of Henry Miller at the Savoy Theatre, New York, is probably the greatest success of the new metropolitan season. Played by a splendid company including Isabel Irving, Charles A. Stevenson, Frederick Lewis, Hazel MacKaye and John Junior, it is giving delight nightly to as many theatre lovers as can crowd into the Savoy. The New York critics, almost unanimously are enthusiastic about "Mater," and say that it raises Mr. MacKaKye to the front rank of contemporary playwrights, and that it adds another laurel to the chaplet now being worn by Henry Miller as an upholder and producer of all that is best in modern drama. The New York Sun gave a column of praise for the wit, humor and satire of "Mater."

In the production of the new comic opera, "The Golden Butterfly," at the Broadway Theatre, New York on Monday, music lovers are promised an event of more than ordinary interest, as the work is the latest contribution of Harry B. Smith and Reginald de Koven to the lyric field.

Grace Van Studdiford, for whom Smith and de Koven also wrote "Maid Marian" and "Red Feather," is the star. Miss Van Studdiford will be remembered as the best prima donna the Bostonians Opera Companyever had. Miss Van Studdiford has some beautiful numbers in the new opera, notably "Do not Forget Me" and "The Butterfly and the Clover." She is a beautiful woman with a beautiful voice, and she is equally attractive in her acting. In "The Golden Butterfly" the authors have written a light opera which returns to the style of "Robin Hood" and other productions of some twenty years ago, and which has a real heart interest story with a plot.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi," at the Bijou, is elected to a long term of prosperity by overwhelming popular vote of New York's playgoers. William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grismer have picked another winner and created two more successful stars. Thomas A. Wise and Douglas Fairbanks are capital foils, the first as a cheery, courtly Southern statesman of the old school, a type of sterling honesty; the other as a breezy audacious and assertive young New York correspondent. They are the heart and brains of a combine that overwhelm Senatorial graft and trickery. The new comedy is American to the back bone, and immensely amusing. As "The Times" described its effect "the audience laughed until their sides ached and then some more." The striking catch lines in the various New York criticisms would fill a column. Most significant is the praise of the people who see this vital, stirring play and tell others to see it. Success came swiftly for money was turned away at the second performance. "A Gentleman from Mississippi" will crowd the Bijou for months. Seats twelve weeks ahead are already announced.

Proctor's Theatre, Newark.

During the week of October 12, the chief theatrical happening in Newark will be the grand program. Elfie Fay, whose engagement a few weeks ago was suddenly terminated by illness, has fully recovered from her indisposition and will sing in her inimitable way the "Belle of Avenue A" and some brand new ditties. That sterling English actor, William Hawtrey, and company will produce a bright one act comedy entitled "Compromised." Without doubt one of the cleverest of female jugglers Zelma Braatz will gain praise with her grace and dexterity. Something of a decided novelty, the Hawaiian Trio, will offer a pretty musical act, enhanced with a picturesque setting of that Pacific island. The costuming is also very appropriate. Emma Francis and her Whirlwing Arabs in a lightning like acrobatic turn. Back to his own again comes Newark's favorite ventriloquist Wm. C. Whittle, after a series of conquests on the other side with his ventriloquial novelty, "In the Battle Feld." Watson and Morrissey Sisters will be seen in a neatly costumed and up-to-date singing and dancing turn. Two dusky hued performers, Anderson and Coines, will sing and dance their way into favor. A new series of animated pictures.

A Beautiful Woman.

Her surroundings should be in harmony, and can best be made so by a well kept home. The L. & M. Pure Paint makes the home beautiful. It preserves it and prevents decay. The cost per gallon ready for use is only $1.20. It wears for ten years and longer. Thirty-three years of continuous use is evidence.

Woolston & Buckle, Plainfield; H. C. Meyer, Scotch Plains; P. W. Brakely, Dunellen, L. & M. Paint Agents.

John W. Kern, candidate for Vice-President, will be in Elizabeth Wednesday evening, October 14, and the Democratic City Committee is making hasty preparations for a big open-air rally in Jackson Park.

Governor Fort opened the Hudson County Republican campaign Thursday night in Elks Hall, Jersey City. The hall, which has a capacity of twenty-five hundred, was filled, and mention of the names of Roosevelt, Taft and Hughes was met with deafening applause. Governor Fort received an enthusiastic reception. He stripped Bryan of all his new issues and uncovered the forgotten planks of twelve years ago.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

The National Baseball Commission has issued a statement as to regulations governing the world's championship series; also the schedule of games. The rules heretofore governing these contests will apply, but a new regulation as to four umpires will replace the old. Attention is also called to the new rule preventing the paying of bonuses to players before or after the game.

The schedule is: October 10, at Detroit; 11, at Chicago; 12, at Chicago; 13, at Detroit; 14, at Detroit; 15, at Chicago.

The schedule as adopted was determined by lot, as is provided for by the rules. If any of the games scheduled at any park is postponed on account of rain or any other cause the teams will be required to play such postponed game on the first day available. In case it becomes necessary to play the seventh game the city in which it is to be played will be determined by the commission.

The following players will be eligible to participate in the games, and no others: Chicago National League Club—Brown, Howard, Marshall, Sheckard, Chance, Hofman, Moran, Slagle, Durbin, Kling, Overall, Schulte, Evers, Kreh, Pfiester, Steinfeldt, Fraser, Lundgren, Reulbach, Tinker, ZiZmmerman.

Detroit American League Club—Coughlin, Jones, Cleary, Schaefer, Cobb, eJnnings, Rossman, Thomas Crawford, Killian, Schmidt, Willett, Downes, Killifer, Summers, Winter, Donovan, Mullin, Suggs, McIntyre.

President Pulliam has selected as umpires from his league Henry O'Day and William Klem, and President Johnson has selected John F. Sheridan and T. H. Connelly. The official scorers are A. J. Flanner, of the Sporting News, and Francis C. Richter, of the Sporting Life.

GOLF.

Gray hairs were as much in evidence on the course of the Apawamis Golf Club as the yellow and red leaves in the autumnal foilage of the trees Thursday. The competition was the fourth annual one for senior players arranged at Apawamis by a special committee, Horace L. Hotchkiss, the originator of the plan, and Edmund C. Converse. The latter is president of the Fairfield County Golf Club and he has just presented a $500 trophy to be played for in the Connecticut team championship. By commercial ratings the wealth of the contestants would run into many millions, but the good golf they have was most talked about during the competition. There were seventy-nine cards returned, sixty of the players entering from clubs in the Metropolitan Golf Association territory and the others from clubs near many faraway cities or towns.

No prize list could have been more liberal, nor prizes better worth winning. As relishes, there were prizes for the best net scores of the morning and afternoon, while in the solid thirty-six hole feast there were prizes for the two best net and gross scores or six prizes in all.

The competition was only open to golfers of 55 years of age or over. More than one was very willing to tell by how few days he had gained eligibility, but there was a diffidence in advancing a claim to be the Methussleah of the party. A. Milne, president of the Scarsdale Golf Club, owned to 76 years, but e golfed with the vim of a youngster. He learned the game while attending the high school at Montrose, Scotland, 1844-47, and in the latter year won the town's open medal. From 1851 to 1895 Mr. Milne had no opportunity to golf, but as the courses began to increase about Manhattan from that year on he has made up for lost time in his favorite recreation.

Eugene Frayer, a Manhattan lawyer and Englewood golfer, swept the boards by winning three net score prizes. He won the morning special with 91, 15—76, and that of the after noon with 90, 15—75. The conditions prevented a player from taking more than one prize, and instead of leaving with his arms filled with trophies Frayer had to be content with the lowest net score prize, with 181, 30—151. The second net prize went to James Bless, a Newark banker, at 197, 40—157. He beat out J. B. McDonlad, the subway contractor, by two and Herman Wendall of the St. David's Golf Club, Philadelphia, by three strokes. There was a tie for the two gross score prizes between Dr. Carl E. Martin, who gains his degree from music and not medicine and was Connecticut State champion in 1900, and James D. Foot, who has not needed to work since he organized an industrial company a decade ago. The tie was at 166. Each had every round in 83. They are well known tournament players, and Foot never went on a golf course until he was 50 years old.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

J. G. Dalrymple has been elected captain of the swimming team at Pennsylvania. He has been a member of the squad for two years and has done much in the way of winning the aquatic championship for the Quaker college. He was a member of the swimming relay team last season and is fast in the 220-yard event. Dalrymple is in his final year at the dental school.

Activities on track and field are under way at Princeton. The annual fall track games are to be held on the University Field next Tuesday afternoon, the events arranged being the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes, the 440-yard run, the 220-yard low hurdles, the 120-yard hurdles, the running high and running broad jumps, the pole vault, putting the 16-pound shot and the hammer throw. Class numerals will be awarded for winners with gold, silver and bronze medals for first, second and third places. The half-mile, one-mile and two-mile runs have been eliminated, due to the condition of the field, and the medals intended for winners in these events will be awarded in conjunction with novice cross country runs, a two-mile race on October 16 for the 880-yard medals, a three-mile race on October 23 for the one-mile medals and a 4½ mile event on October 30 for the two-mile medals. W. L. McGee, 1909, has been elected captain of the cross-country team.

FOOTBALL.

With the playing of the game at Lawrenceville yesterday the Princeton freshman eleven began its schedule of seven games. There are several changes from the schedule of last season, and only one game, that with the Yale youngsters, will be staged in Princeton. Both Exeter and Andover are to be played, and the Syracuse 1912 team will face the Tiger first year men for the first time. Boys' High of Brooklyn has been dropped from the list. The Princeton freshies will play in Exeter on Saturday. A week later the eleven will appear in Andover. Mercersburg will be played at Mercersburg on Oct. 24. The final day of this month is open. The Syracuse freshman eleven will be met in the up-State city on Nov. 4 and the lads from New Haven will invade Princeton on Nov. 7.

Bound Brook Cancelled Game.

The game scheduled for today at Somerville between the West Ends and Bound Brook, has been cancelled by Manager Newhouse, of Bound Brook, for reasons best known to himself. The West Ends will play New Brunswick instead.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

William R. Hackett, near Salem, has an orchard of peach trees, the fruit of which is just beginning to ripen.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

With Apologies to the Great Bard.

Scene: A graveyard. Democratic headstones all about. Gravedigger singing.—

In youth, when I did love, did love,
Democracy it was very sweet,
To contract—free trade ah by behove,
O, Democracy it was a beat.

Enter Bryan and Kern at a distance.

Bryan: Has this fellow no feeling of his business that he sings in a Democratic graveyard?

Kern: Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness to bury Democrats.

Bryan: 'Tis ever so; I was buried twice and am now a reincarnation.

Gravedigger throws up a skull.

Bryan: That skull had a tongue in it. It might be the pate of a free-silver politician; one that would circumvent all natural laws.

Kern: It might be my Lord, and suspend the law of gravitation. By the way, does our platform say anything about that?

Byran: Or of an imperialist who would raise all the stock ghosts and frights to scare the people whom you and I love so much.

Kern: Ay, my Lord, we are not looking for office and care nothing about its honors. We are unselfish; impersonal.

Gravedigger throws up another skull.

Bryan: There's another; why may that not be the skull of a Democratic platform builder. Where are his fine words and nice balances now, his science, his skill, his clever appeals and his tricks. Hum! It this the result of his finese? Let's away, the reminder is too personal.

Kern: Where is he now? His flashes of brilliancy that were about to set the nation on a roar? Aaway! Awayp! I'm with you, the thing is as hollow as our present campaign.

I thank you for your past courtesies.

Yours truly,
JOSHUA JENKS JUDSON.

Jersey City Water Main Breaks.

A break in the Jersey City Water Supply Company's pipe under the Hackensack River yesterday was discovered by the Street and Water Commissioner. The company must repair it. This is the fourth break of a supply main in five years. Commissioner Finke says he will appeal to the Chancery Court for protection for the city against water supply diminution through the bursting of mains.

Salesman, Out of Work, Ends Life.

Despondent because he failed to obtain work, Adam Cramer, fifty-two years old, a salesman for sixteen years with Acker, Merrall & Condit, of New York, committed suicide last night by drinking carbolic acid. Cramer lost his place last July. He leaves a wife and five children.

What We Long to Do Satisfied in the Heavenly World

13th of a Series on Heaven by

REV. DR CHARLES E. HERRING

I love to think of Heaven as the place where we shall be able to do what we long to do. We shall carry then into that world something more than our capacity; we shall take our longings. All we could never be in this world and longed to be, we shall be in the world to come.

It would not be satisfactory to some souls to tell them that they will take their capacity to the other world because they think their capacity is so limited. They have longed for capacity. They have desired to do certain things they have seen others do, and they have felt that they could do them, were they not hampered by some bodily infirmity, by poverty or by lack of opportunity. They have had dreams of the the things they love, and they have failed to realize their ambitions because they lacked opportunity. Heaven, therefore, to be perfectly satisfactory, must to to them the place where they are free to realize the deep longings of their hearts. With this hope inspiring them they can say:

"What is our failure here but a triumph's evidence
For the fulness of our days."

We are limited here because there is some impediment in the bodily vehicle of expression. We are not all that we long to be, and shall be, but we believe that

"All we have wished, or hoped, or dreamed of good shall exist,
Not its semblance, but iself.
The high that proved too high, the heroic
For earth too hard."

We have all read of the achievements of surgery in reference to this body of ours. A man for example is weakminded, or possesses immoral traits, but a surgical operation often transforms him. What was the trouble with that man's life? Simply this, that his brain did not perfectly represent him and his possibilities. It is a well recognized fact that sometimes mental and moral disturbances are due solely to physical causes. An all-seeing and loving God knows what is caused by pure sinfulness, and what can only be charged to imperfection in bodily organization. This earthly body carries out the souls demands, but O, how imperfectly! You want to do, and be, and you can't, and how you chafe against your limitations. Don't you suppose that the very things you long for will be realized in the after-life? You are more than you can possibly imagine, but death will be a liberation to you—a liberation of your hidden powers—and when liberated, you will be able to make progress along the lines you love.

Heaven will be the place of satisfaction for the unfortunate man whose life has been a series of misfortunes. Something has hampered him; some imperfection in his environment or physical being. But in that world, he will be so perfect that the body will know no weariness nor incompetence; the soul no sorrow nor sin; ignorance will not incapacitate; uncertainty will not disquiet."

To Swedenborg, Heaven is the counterpart of this earthly life. Our occupations here, will be our occupations there; only grander opportunities will be ours in that world for the display of all our powers. There will be opportunities there for the thinking man which are inconceivable now. I would rather put it in this way; the things we love to do, and long to do, we shall do there. That not only means that we shall take with us our capacity, but our latent capacity; the capacity that never had a chance for display in this life, because we have been so hampered by some mental or physical infirmity.

The Buddhist Heaven, "Nirvana," has been interpreted by oriental scholars to mean a place where the soul is annihilated; a place or a condition that is reached after that soul has passed through numberless existences on earth. That seems poor satisfaction to us, but the religion of Buddha is based on the misery of life, and therefore, the only rest is the rest of practical annihilation. Professor Hoffding of Copenhagen, offers another interpretation. "Nirvana," he says, is a form of existence which appears as nothingness to us because absolutely unrelated to anything we have experienced on earth. That, we must confess, is a better hope than the hope of annihilation, but the conception is totally at variance with the revelation of our Lord. The heavenly world is in intimate relation with the experiences of this life. It is a continuation of this life. The experiences of this life have their value, for while there will be no suffering in that world we are assured that the sufreings of this earthly plane are working out the eternal glory.

Every experience, therefore, is of moment which the Lord permits us to pass through, for in some way, these experiences are working out the eternal weight of glory. Heaven is not the opposite of all we know, as a Buddhist pictures it. It is not the contradiction of the life that now is, for that would mean that all our life here is valueless. Christ declares that while the life hereafter far exceeds our life here, it is continuous with this life. Into that world we shall carry over not only our capacity, but the instincts and longings of our nature.

It is for this reason that we say that this life is a perplexity, if there is no other life. Prof. Momerie has well said that "it will require a future to redeem the present from contempt." It certainly is true that this life is contemptible if there is no other where the longings of the human soul will be realized. You put meaning into this life if you regard it as only a preparation, as only the beginning of a life that bye and bye is to be unspeakably glorious. There is injustice and imperfection here. It isn't always the good man that flourishes while the bad man suffers.

Think of the good men that have suffered and died for their religious convictions. They have not been rewarded in this life. They have died for their faith. Do not

"The facts of life confirm the hope,
That in a world of larger scope,
What here is faithfully begun
Will be completed, not undone."

The experiences of this life only have a meaning as we see them in the light of eternity. Shelley thought of himself as being shipwrecked into life. It was so because the glory of the eternal world did not shine in upon his life.

Kant, the German philosopher, believed that man must be immortal because he has a conscience. "Conscience points a man to perfection; to a perfection that cannot be realized on earth. If there is nothing more than earth for man, man is overweighted on the moral side of his being."

Men possess ideals which they are never able to realize in this life. Beethoven dreamed of harmonies that he could never set to music. The great Raphael confessed that his greatest art work was not perfect. He had visions of perfection which he could never accomplish.

Why is it that we possess ideals that we never seem able to realize? Our visions are ever greater than our accomplishments. Some of us do not even begin to realize our visions. We seem to be so unfitted and incapacitated for what we long for. What does it all mean? The answer is clear, and the answer is the only solution to the problems of this life. It is this, that the Lord teaches you and me that the life of peace and satisfaction, is the life that is lived on eternal lines. You have been thinking of eternity as time after the life in this world. The Lord speaks of it as a present possession. You will never die. Death in the Scripture, is called an Exodus, for it is the crossing over from a condition of bondage and limitation, to the condition of heavenly freedom. You will carry over your capacity. Yes, and you will carry over your longing, what you would be if something had not handicapped you. Your very dreams will be realized, for if were not so He would have told you.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

J. Wotley Gangloff, humorist and dialect story teller, will give an entertainment Wednesday night in Excelsior hall, under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Methodist church. This will be the first of a series of entertainments the League will give during the winter.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours. Morning preaching at 10:45, B. Y. P. U., 7:15; evening preaching service at 8 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Mathews will preach at both services.

Mrs. George Frentz, who recently underwent a serious surgical operation at Muhlenberg Hopsital, continues to improve and will soon be able to be around again.

The Baptist Sunday school has presented the church with new hymnal, this speaks well for the school and shows that it is in a flourishing condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Archibold, of Westfield, have been visiting Mr. Archibold's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Archibold, of Washington Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Clark, of Westfield avenue, are the parents of a daughter, born Thursday night.

Miss Marion Goodwin entertained the weekly Bible study class, at its weekly meeting last night.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Corey, of Park avenue, are entertaining Miss Pearl Goodwin, of New York.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The funeral of Mrs. Howard Elliot, was held at Marconnier chapel yesterday afternoon. It was largely attended as Mrs. Elliot has a great number of friends. The service was conducted by Rev. Tucker Landsdale assisted by Rev. C. W. Y. Attlee. The interment was at the South Plainfield cemetery.

The services will be held as usual in the Baptist church tomorrow. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee will take for his morning subject, "The Garments of the Christian," and for the evening, "The Love of God."

The five and ten cent socialble given last evening by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church, proved to be of a most interesting character and was a great success in every way.

The subject for the hCristian Endeavor meeting at the Baptist church will be "Commending our Society by Dilligent Committee Work."

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Zugbaum, of Plainfield, visited friends in the village yesterday.

Miss Lillian Norman is visiting her grandparents for a few days at South River.

Mr. Mygatt thought it extremely probable that the law might be amended this witner so as to give Plainfield the necessary relief, and with this in view he opposed the issue on the proposed basis. He also added that Mr. Montgomery, who was unable to attend the meeting had suggested what might be a good plan, that is sell the West Second street fire-house and take the proceeds for a new house in the Netherwood district. The apparatus from the West Second street house could be placed at headquarters. Again, Mr. Mygatt said that before the issue of bonds terminated it might be found necessary or desirable to abandon the East End house and that would only complicate matters.

Meeting Mr. Mygatt's argument squarely, Mr. Hall said that the idea of abandoning a fire-house that is such a necessity seemed preposterous, and besides he thought that it was a matter of quibbling over methods, while the residents of the Netherwood section are pleading for the improvement. He declared that property owners of the Second ward pay more taxes than any other ward in the city and it would be a big mistake to hold the matter up any longer. If the house is started now it could be under cover by Christmas. He did not believe that the expense would place a burden on future generations and characterized the action of the opponents to the improvement as one of procrastination.

Mr. Mygatt resented this imputation and said that the fire committee is asking the Council to decide a matter in two weeks which the committee has been considering for many months.

When the vote was taken it resulted in a tie, five members voting for the resolution and five against. The meeting then adjourned, but immediately afterward it was arranged to meet again on Tuesday night, October 13, when it is hoped that the resolution will be adopted.

No Hunting in Tracking Snows.

WARREN CHAPEL MEN HOLD A RECEPTION

Under the auspices of the Men's Association of Warren chapel, an excellent musical and literary entertainment, including an address by S. S. Swackhamer, was enjoyed by the members and their friends last night. The chapel was decorated for the occasion with autumn foliage and flowers. In the absence of the president, A. J. Stiglitz, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor, took charge of the program which opened with an organ solo by William Dunn, organist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Andrew J. Stiglitz favored the audience with a soprano solo, "Life's Lullaby," after which Mrs. J. O. McKelvey read a story entitled "Sally Ann's Experience," and gave a dialect story. Then Mrs. Stiglitz sang "Enchantment," and "Sing Me to Sleep," for an encore.

After this program, which was greatly enjoyed, S. S. Swackhamer gave the address of the evening. He had no chosen subject, but devoted his remarks entirely to the importance of men's associations in the church and that of keeping the body and mind in the best of condition for Christian service. He also referred to the great good that is is possible for men to do in church work and his words were a source of encouragement.

The entertainment was in charge of a committee of which Gibson Smith was chairman, while J. W. Gavett was chairman of the refreshment committee, which served ice cream, cake and coffee during the social hour.

PEOPLE'S LOBBY HAS LAWMAKERS' RECORDS

Arrangements were made at an executive committee meeting of the People's Lobby, at Newark yesterday, for the distribution of the Legislative Record, a manual containing the position taken and the vote cast by candidates for re-election on each important bill introduced in the recent Legislature. It also tells the views of those who are named for the first time as candidates for the State's lawmaking body.

The Record is divided into three sections. The first gives the careers of those approved by the Lobby; the second of those opposed, and the third those who are neither favored nor opposed. R. Henry Depew, of this city, is president of the People's Lobby; Walter Linbarger, of North Plainfield, is secretary, and James E. Martine, of this city, is one of the vice-presidents.

FORT'S SON DEFENDS AUTOIST.

Manfred Naar, peace justice, explained to Governor Fort yesterday afternoon at Trenton why he charged Standish Chard, secretary to Justice Hough, of the New York Supreme Court, with violating the speed laws while going to and from the interstate fair one day last week.

Leslie R. Fort, the Governor's son and secretary, was an occupant of the car on the return trip, and he declared the charges to be absolutely without justification. Mr. Fort said it took two and one half hours to make the run to Lakewood, a distance of forty-three miles.

The Governor, too, had some cases to take up with the "squire," and upon inquiring into his methods of dealing with violators was informed that he never penalized "good" people. The "squire" said he had dismissed between six hundred and seven hundred cases of violations reported to him within the last few months. He added that on the fine stretch of road which his constables patrolled practically every motorist violated the law. He denied any attempt at blackmail, which had been charged by numerous automobilists.

Nathan E. Reed a Bankrupt.

Nathan E. Reed, of East Orange, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court yesterday at Trenton. He places his liabilities at $277,116 and his assets at $22,146. The assets consist mainly of $21,870 in stock of the Anti-Friction Journal Box Company of Arizona, whose shares are listed at $1 par value.

LEGAL AMUSEMENTS

AL. W MARTIN

Al W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

It is significant to observe the more recent development of musical comedy and to mark especially how far the efforts to legitimatize this class of entertainment have proceeded. For example we are to have a presentation of "Gay New York" at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night wherein, so to speak a real dramatic flavor is imparted to the lengthy chain of fun and music novelties that go a great way towards supplying the actual wants of the depressed theatre frequenters, and the comedy story seized upon to lend poignancy and solidity removed from the familiar schemes to introduce special numbers, is regarded a happy thought in behalf of "Gay New York," as it gives stamina and tone to the doings of the actors and invites no severe criticism concerning uncalled-for license and liberties indulged in. Even the introduction of a whole shipload of pretty girls is said to be a warranted consideration as the construction of "Gay New York" was made to this end, and the room prepared for their song, vim and other acceptable contributions could not very well have been better appropriated.

Irene Langford in "Gay New York," at New Plainfield Theatre Monday night.

Scene in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at New Plainfield Theatre, today, matinee and night.

"The Red Mill," the much discussed comic opera by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, presented by Charles Dillingham's company, will be given at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night, in the same complete manner as during its all-year run at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York City, three months, Grand Opera House, Chicago, and three months at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, where the innumerable features of the escape from the mill, the Dutch Kiddies, the Broadway Soubrettes, the Fifth Avenue Girls, the Boxing Dance, the Motor Beauties, the Bowery Belles and the no end of Victor Herbert's brilliant and popular music, will all form an entertainment of refreshing refinement and good cheer, with all the requisites of an unusually clever performance.

May Ward in "The Cash Girl," at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, October 17, matinee and night.

RHEUMATIC FOLKS.

Are You Sure Your Kidneys are Well?

Many rheumatic attacks are due to uric acid in the blood. But the duty of the kidneys is to remove all uric acid from the blood. Its presence there shows the kidneys are inactive.

Don't dally with "uric acid solvents." You might go on till doomsday with them, but until you cure the kidneys you will never get well. Doan's Kidney Pills not only remove uric acid, but cure the kidneys and then all danger from uric acid is ended. Here is Plainfield testimony to prove it.

Mrs. C. Rosester, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe backaches also occasionally attacks of rheumatim. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from my kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of the remedy and am soon well again. My daughter and her husband have also used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

next Saturday afternoon and night when the John J. Reisler Amusement Company present for the first time here Miss May Ward in "The Cash Girl." The piece is in three acts, and as may be implied deals with the laughable yet amusing commonplace view of department store life. Each of the three acts are garnished with new musical numbers staged in an original manner. Miss Ward, who has been a vaudeville favorite for many years is best known through her pleasing skit, "May Ward and her Eight Dresden Dolls." Miss Ward is one of the youngest stars on the stage and is generally proclaimed to be one of the most able. She is a dainty little woman with a keen sense for comedy, while her voice is pure and sweet. The actress is also a clever dancer, these together with a most pleasing personality are the cause of her wonderful popularity.

MATERIALS FOR THE NEW WINTER GOWNS.

When replenishing the wardrobe at this time of year it is well to select materials that will not be too thin to wear as autumn days approach. Usually the linens—the coat and skirt suit and the jumper dress—are still fit to wear, while the frocks that seem to suffer most in summer time are the sheer lawns and dimities that are used for afternoon festivities and Sunday-go-to-meeting occasions.

One's wardrobe usually contains three or four of these gowns, and they are the most charming and dainty things imaginable, but toward the middle of September there grows a need for something fresh, something appropriate for afternoons and evenings that seems to breathe of autumn.

In selecting such a gown choose a material that is soft, yet not so pliable that it is almost impossible for the home dressmaker to manage.

A good material for such a gown is foulard, or one might use crepe foulard or voile. Of course, the very newest dresses are of satin, but, while this may not be expensive—for liberty satin is procurable for 75 cents the yard—the material is so narrow that it requires a great deal to make even the simplest dress.

Voiles, on the other hand, are quite possible, and we have eolienne and many materials which are called by various names, each interesting in its own way.

We are all familiar with eolienne. It is a material of silk with a cord effect running across the breadth of the goods. Its prices range from $1 to $2 the yard, and it meausres forty-six inches in width. Besides the plain eolienne, there are variations of the same. Some are woven with a silk diagonal, while others have a broken line. All of the eoliennes are soft and pliable and make up beautifully in the present mode. The eolienne with fancy designs costs $2 the yard.

Of voiles there are three varieties: silk, wool and cotton. Cotton voile is appropriate only for summer wear but wool voile is the material that is always wrth buying, for it wears perfectly and always looks well. It comes plain and with a shadowed check, and usually costs from $1 to $1.50 the yard. Plain wool voile may be purchased for as little as 75 cents the yard, and it measures from forty to forty-six inches. Voiles must be made up over silk, and usually taffeta is best for the purpose.—Washington Star.

ABOUT THE CARE OF THE FURNACE.

Proper placing of the registers in the rooms as regards the exterior openings, such as windows and doors, after taking into consideration the direction of the prevailing winds in winter and also with some consideration of the length of pipe required in the cellar to reach the riser, is a prime consideration. Badly placed and too small registers account for more than 50 per cent. of furnace troubles.

Second, the furnace must be properly placed in the cellar and the pipes leading to the risers must not only be proportioned to the size of rooms to be supplied, but also to the length of run in the cellar and the amount of rise which can be given them.

A third item is that the opening which is to supply fresh air, whether taken from the basement or, what is preferable, from the outside, must be of at least three-quarters the capacity of all the pipes leading from the furnace, the other 25 per cent. being a rough allowance for the expansion of air brought in cold and raised to 90 or 100 degrees. The cold air duct, preferably a galvanized iron pipe of heavy weight, should be carried above ground, so as to avoid any chance of evaporating any seepage water, but not alongside the furnace, where it may become warm and set up a "back draft."

You will readily appreciate that furnace heating is an art, not a science, and even the most successful occasionally make mistakes.

Excise Report on Dec. 15.

The State Excise Commission will make its report on Dec. 15 to Governor Fort. Chairman Fisk will make no advance statement but it is expected that the commission will recommend a $1,000 fee and some amendments to the Bishops' law. The commission will oppose Sunday selling but will urge that home rule prevail in other respects.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Copyright, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"All right, sir. It was a close call to make it, though; there was a few ounces over."

Dixon held up his finger to the boy that was leading Lucretia and, nodding his head toward the stall, led the way.

"We're number seven, Mike," said Allis.

"There's luck in odd numbers, said Rory O'Moore," quoted Mike.

"I've a superstitious dread of seven," the girl said; "it's the one number that I always associate with disaster—I don't mind thirteen a bit."

XXII.

Regally, one after another, in stately file, the turf kings, decked out with the silken jackets, crimson and gold, and blue, and white, and magpie, passed through the paddock gate to the newly smoothed course. Very modest and demure number seven, the little brown mare, looked beside the strong-muscled giants, bright bay, golden chestnut, and raven-wing black, that overshadowed her in the procession. Some of this thought came to Allis, sitting in the stand. What a frail little pair they were, both of them, and to be there battling for this rich prize that was so hardly fought for, by strong men athirst for gold, and great horses a-keen for the gallop!

Ah, there was Diablo, the very number Allis had said carried no dread for her, thirteen. What a strange coincidence. What a cruel twist of fate it would be if he were to win!—he looked equal to it. A man sitting at Allis' elbow suddenly cried in a loud voice: "Look at the big black; isn't he a beaut? Number thirteen. That's a hoodoo number, if you like; it's enough to give a backer cold feet."

"I thought you weren't superstitious, Rex;" this was a woman's voice.

"I'm not, an' I'm going straight down to back that black, thirteen and all."

On Allis' other side one of the party was sticking off the horses by their numbers as they passed. "One, two, that's White Moth; they say she'll win; three, Red Rover; four, what's that? That's George L.; five, six, seven; just look at that little runt. What is it? Oh, Lucretia. Might as well run a big calf, I should think."

"She's just lovely," declared a lady in the party. "She's as graceful as a deer, and I'm sure she'll run as fast as any of them."

"Can't live in that mob; they'll smother a little thing like her," declared the man, emphatically. "Where are we—ten, eleven. The King, that's the winner for a hundred. Look at him. He carries my money. It's all over now; they can't beat him. That's a fine looker, though, thirteen—Diablo, eh? What's that horse Diablo, George?" turning to one of the men.

"No good—a maiden; I looked them all up in the dope book; how they expect to win the Brooklyn with a maiden gets beyond me."

Allis' gaze dropped to the grass lawn in front of the stand for a minute, her eyes seeking repose from the strain of watching the horses as they went down to the starting post. How fretfully erratic were the men who dotted its green sward with gray and solemn black! How like ants they were, crossing and recrossing each other's paths, twisting and turning without semblance of an objective point. Yes, they were like an army of ants that had been suddenly thrown into confusion. Within all that inclosure there seemed no one posssessed of any calm. To the quiet girl it was a strange revelation; no one could have as much at stake as she had, and yet over her spirit there was nothing beyond the lethargy of depression. No; no one is calm, she thought. Ah, the assertion was too sweeping. Coming up the steps, just at her right, was a man who might have been walking in a quiet meadow, or a full-leafed forest, for all there was of agitation in his presence. A sudden new thought came to Allis; she had never seen that face distraught but once. The collected man was Philip Crane. A tinge of almost admiration tingled the girl's mind. To be possessed of calm where all was nervous strain was something.

Suddenly the unimpassioned face lighted up; the narrow-lidded eyes gleamed with brightened interest. As eagerly as a boy their owner, Crane, came forward and saluted Allis.

Allis had sought to be alone in this short time of trial; she was hardly sure of herself. If Lucretia failed she might break down; for what would come to her father should the message home be one of disaster? Even if the little mare won her joy might lead her to commit strange pranks; she felt that her heart would burst out of sheer joy, if she did not shout in exultation, or caper madly, as she had seen others do in the hour of victory. She was sorry that Crane had come.

"I was looking for you," he said; "I want to see you win this race; that is, if—I mean, like every other man here, I have harked back to my natural instinct of covetous acquisition and had a bet on."

"Not Lucretia?"

"No—I've bet on Diablo. Langdon thinks he'll win. Do you remember the agreement about his purchase?"

"What was it? I've half forgotten it."

"Just a little bet on your account, you know."

"Oh, I remember; but that was only in fun, wasn't it?"

"It was part of the bargain, and it's on. You'll take it, won't you, if he wins—"

"They're off!" Some one had shouted the magic words from the head of the steps. In a second every voice of the thousand was stilled, and there was only the noise of shuffling feet, as eager watchers stood up to see the horses.

"It's a false start," said Crane, quietly, turning toward the girl. "It would have been well for you, Misss Allis, had the starter let them go. Lucretia was well out in the lead; it was Diablo's fault, too, that they had to go back—he was left standing."

Crane's voice was Fate's voice. Would there never be anything but Lucretia and Diablo, seven and thirteen, thirteen and seven?

"Diablo's a bad horse at the post," ejaculated Crane, letting his field glass rest for an instant on his knee; "he just backs up and shakes his head viciously; evidently he doesn't like the idea of so much company."

"How is Lucretia acting, Mr. Crane?"

"Perfectly. You must have instilled some of your own patience into her."

The girl hardly heard the compliment.

"The starter is having a bad time of it; that makes six false breaks," said Allis' companion; "it will end by his losing patience with the boys, I fear, and let them go with something off in a long lead. But they say this Fitzpatrick is a cool hand, and gives no man the best of it. He'll probably fine Diablo's rider a hundred dollars; I believe it's customary to do that when a jockey persistently refuses to come up with his horses. Just look at that!—the black fiend has lashed out and nearly crippled something."

"Not Lucretia, Mr. Crane!" gasped Allis.

"No, it's a chestnut—there they go! Good boy, Westley. I mean Diablo's jockey has done a fiendish clever thing. He came through his horses on the jump, carried them off their feet, they all broke—yes, the flag's down, and he's out with a clean lead."

Down in front a bell was clanging viciously; people were rushing with frenzied haste from the betting ring and clambering up the steps of the stand; in the stand itself the whole vast mob had risen to its feet, and even now the rolling beat of eager hoofs was in the air, hushed of the mob's clamor.

Yes, Crane had spoken truly; a great striding black, along whose neck hung close a tiny figure in yellow and red, was leading the on-coming horses. Allis strained her eyes trying to discover the little mare, but she was swallowed up in the struggling mob that hung at Diablo's heels. As they opened a little, swinging around the first turn, Allis caught sight of the white-starrred blue jacket. Its wearer was quite fifth or sixth.

"Lucretia is doing well," said Crane; "she's holding her own; she's lapped on White Moth."

It seemed strange to Allis that any thought should come to her mind at that time other than just concern for Lucretia, but she caught herself wondering at Crane's professional words of description. For the time he was changed; the quick brevity of his utterance tokened an interested excitement. He was not at all like the Crane she knew.

"Lucretia's doing better," her companion added a few seconds later. "If I were given to sentiment, I should say her gallop was the poetry of motion. She deserves to win. But honestly, Miss Allis, I think she'll never catch the black; he's running like a good horse."

Allis could not answer; the strain was too great for words.

"Your mare is creeping up, Miss Allis; she's second to the black now, and they've still a good three furlongs to go. You may win yet. It takes a good horse to make all his own running for a mile and a quarter and then win. His light weight may land him first past the post. There are only four in it now, the rest are beaten off, sure. Diablo is still in the lead; White Moth and Lucretia are a length back; and The King is next, running strong. It's the same in the stretch. Now the boys are riding. Lucretia is drawing away from White Moth—she's pressing Diablo. You'll win yet!"

His voice was drowned by the clamor that went up from every side. "Diablo! White Moth! Lucretia!" What a babel of yells! "He's beat! Come on!" It was deafening. All the conjecture of months, all the hopes and fears of thousands, compresssed into a few brief seconds of struggling endeavor.

Allis had sat down. There was less frenzied excitement thus.

"God of Justice!" it was Crane's voice, close to her ear; his hot breath was on her cheek; he had leaned down, so that she might hear him. "Your jockey has sold you, or else, Lucretia quit. I thought I saw him pull her off. I'm sorry, Miss Allis, God knows I am, though I've won—for Diablo is winning easily." Then he straightened up for an instant, only to bend down again and say: "Yes, Diablo has won, and Lucretia is beaten off. Perhaps it wasn't the boy, after all, for it's a long journey for a three-year-old. Can I do—anything for you? Let me see you down to the paddock."

"Thank you," the girl answered, struggling with her voice. "Yes, I must go, for Dixon will be terribly disappointed. I must go and put a brave face on, I suppose. It's all over, and it can't be helped. But you've won, and I congratulate you."

"Poor old dad!" she muttered to herself, "to have fairly given away Diablo just when he was ready to win a big race." She was glad to get away from the cataract of voices that smothered her like great falling waters. There was little exultation. If it had been any solace, to her, she had much companionship in her dashed hopes; for Diablo, the winner, had not been backed by the general public; the favorite, White Moth, had been beaten.

After the first outburst a sullen anger took possession of the race-goers. They had been wronged, deceived; another coup had been made by that trick manipulator, Langdon. How carefully he had kept the good thing bottled up. If the mob could have put into execution its half muttered thoughts, every post about the Gravesend track would have been decorated with a fragment of Langdon's anatomy.

Crane accompanied Allis to the paddock gate; and she continued on to the fatal number seven stall. Lucretia had just been brought in, looking very distressed after her hard race. Two boys were busy rubbing the white-crusted perspiration and dust from her sides; little dark rivulets of wet trickled down the lean head that hung wearily.

"Well, we lost!" It was Dixon's voice at Allis' elbow. "That'll do," to the boys; "here, put this cooler on, and walk her about."

Then he turned to Allis again. "She was well up with the leaders half way in the stretch; I tho't she was goin' to win."

"Was it too far for her, Dixon?"

The trainer did not answer at once. His knitted brows and air of hesitating abstraction showed plainly that this question of Allis' was one he would prefer to answer days later, if he answered it at all.

"Didn't she stop suddenly?" Allis asked again.

"I couldn't just see from where I was what happened," he replied, evasively; "and I haven't asked the boy yet. Ah, here he comes now," as the jockey returned from the weighing scales.

Redpath seemed to think that some explanation was necessary, as he came up to Allis and the trainer, so he said: "The little mare seemed to have a chance when I turned into the stretch, an' I thought once I was goin' to win; but that big black just kept galloping, galloping, an' I never could get to his head; I'd a been in the money, though, if somethin' hadn't bumped me; an' then my mount died away—she just seemed to die away."

"Well, we're beat, an' that's all there is to it," declared Dixon, half savagely; then he added, "an' by a cast-off out of your father's stable, too, Miss Allis. If there's any more bad luck owin' John Porter, hanged if I wouldn't like to shoulder it myself, an' give him a breather." Then, with ponderous gentleness for a big, rough-thrown-together man, he continued: "Don't you fret, miss; the little mare's all right; she'll pull your father through all this; you just cheer up. I've got to go now an' look after her."

When the trainer had gone the jockey turned to Allis, hesitatingly, and said: "Dixon's correct about the little mare; she's all right. I wouldn't speak even afore him, though he's all right, too, but—" and he looked about carefully to see that nobody was within earshot. "I could a-been in the money."

The girl started. Crane had said that the jockey had stopped riding.

"Yes, miss; you mustn't blame me, for I took chances of bein' had up afore the stewards."

"You did wrong if you didn't try to win," exclaimed Allis, angrily.

"I did try to win, but I couldn't. I saw that I'd never catch that big black; he was going too strong; his long stride was just breaking the little mare's heart. She's the gamest piece of horseflesh—say, Miss Porter, believe me, it just hurt me to take it out of her, keeping up with that long-legged devil. If I could a-headed him once, just got to him once—I tried it when we turned into the straight—he'd have quit. But it was no use—the mare couldn't do it. With him out of the race I'd have won. I could a-been second or third as it was, but it might have done the little mare up so she wouldn't be any good all season. I thought a bit over this when I was galloping. I knew she was in the Brooklyn Derby, an' when I had the others beat at a mile, thinks I, if the public don't get onto it, Mr. Porter can get all his losses back in the Brooklyn derby. That's why I eased up the little mare. You don't think I could do anything crooked against you, miss? Give me the mount in the derby, an' your father can bet his last dollar that Lucretia'll win."

"I hardly like it," answered the girl. "I know you did it for my sake, but it doesn't seem quite right. Don't do anything like this again. Of course, I don't want Lucretia pushed beyond her strength, nor cut up with the whip, but she ought to get the place if she can. People might have backed her for the place, and we've thrown away their money."

"The bettors will look after their own interests, Miss Porter, and they wouldn't help you a little bit if you needed it; they'd be more like to do you a bad turn. If I'd driven the mare to death, an' been beaten for the place, as I might have, the papers would have slated me for cruelty. You must believe that I did it for the best, miss."

"I do, and I suppose I must thank you, but don't do it again. I'd rather you didn't carry your whip at all on Lucretia; she doesn't need it; but don't ease her up if you've got a chance till you pass the winning post."

As the two finished speaking, and moved away, a thin, freckled face peered furtively from the door of stall number six. Just the ferret-like eyes and a knife-thin nose showed past the woodwork, but there could be no mistaking the animal. It was Shandy.

"I've got you again," he muttered. "Blast the whole tribe of you! I'll just pip you on that dirty work, blowed if I don't."

XXIII.

That night Allis spent hours trying to put into a letter to her mother their defeat and their hopes in such a way as to save distress to her father. She wound up by simply asking her mother to get Dr. Rathbone to impart as much information as he deemed advisable to his patient.

They were a very depressed lot at Dixon's cottage that evening. They had lost, and that's all there was about it. Why talk it over? It could do no good. Dixon would nurse up Lucretia, and work back into her by mile gallops a fitting strength for the Brooklyn derby. With incessant weariness he rocked back and forth, back and forth in the big Boston rocker; while Allis sought to compose the letter she wished to send home.

With apathetic indifference the girl heard a constrained knock at the cottage door; she barely looked up as Dixon opened to a visitor. It was Crane who entered.

At almost any other time his visit would have been unpleasant, but tonight Dixon's constrained depression weighed heavy on her spirits and irritated her.

"Luck was against you to-day, Dixon," exclaimed the visitor.

"They were too strong for the little mare," answered the trainer, curtly. "Our cast-off won, of course, but there were a half dozen in the race that would have beaten Lucretia, I fancy."

Allis looked inquiringly at the trainer; he had not talked that way to her. Then a light dawned upon the girl. She had not associated Dixon with diplomacy in her mind. She knew that he could maintain a sullen silence, but here he was actually throwing out to the caller a disparaging estimate of Lucretia's powers. This perpetual atmosphere of duplicity was positively distasteful. Perhaps to-night she was more sensitive to depressing influences; at any rate she felt a great weariness of the whole business.

Crane had spoken to her on his entry. As she was writing, he had continued his discussion of the race with Dixon; perhaps, even—it was a hopeful thought born of desire—he had come to see the trainer. Crane's next words dispelled that illusion. It was in answer to an observation from Dixon that he was forced to go to the stables that Crane said: "If Miss Porter has no objection I'll remain a little longer; I want to discuss a matter concerning her father."

Allis felt quite like fleeing to the stables with Dixon; but the trainer had passed out before she could muster sufficient moral courage to put in execution her half-formed resolve.

"I wanted to speak about that wager on Diablo," began Crane.

A thrill of relief shot through the girl's heart. Why had he troubled himself to come to her over such a trifling matter?

"I put the bet on some time ago," he continued, "when Diablo was at a long price. It was only a trifle, as we agreed upon—" Allis noticed that he laid particular stress upon "agreed." "But it has netted you quite a nice sum, three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars."

Crane said this in a quiet voice, without unction; but it startled the girl—she stared in blank amazement. Her companion was evidently waiting for her to say something; seemed to expect an exclamation of joyous approval. She noticed that the gray eyes she so distrusted had taken on that distasteful peeping expression, as though he were watching her walk into a trap.

"I cannot take it," answered Allis, decisively, after a pause.

Crane raised his hand in mild protest.

"It was good of you, kind; but how could I accept a large sum of money like that when I am not entitled to it?"

"You are—it's yours. The bet was made in your name—I entered it at the time in my book, and the bookmaker is ready to pay the money over."

"I can't take it—I won't. No, no, no!"

"Don't be foolish, Miss Allis. Think what your father lost when he parted with Diablo for a trivial thousand dollars; and it was my fault, for I arranged the sale. Your father's needs—pardon me, but I know his position, being his banker—yes, he needs this money badly."

"My father needs a good many things, Mr. Crane, which he would not accept as a gift; he would be the last man to do so. We must just go on doing the best we can, and if we can't succeed, that's all. We can't accept help, just yet, anyway."

She was bitter; the reference to her father's troubles, though meant partly in kindness, angered her. It caused her to feel the meshes of the net drawing closer about her, and binding her free will. The fight was indeed on. Almost indefinably she knew that to accept this money, plausible as the offering was, [illegible] to Crane.

Crane brought all his fine reasoning now [illegible] on Allis, but failed signally in his object. He was unaccustomed to being balked, but the girl's firm determination was more than a match for his admirable sophistry. He had made no headway, was quite beaten, when Dixon's opportune return prevented absolute discomfiture. Crane left shortly, saying to Allis as he bade them good night: "I'm sorry you look upon the matter in this light. My object in coming to-night was to give you a little hope for brightness in your gloomy hour of bad luck; but perhaps I had better speak to your father."

"I'd rather you didn't," she answered, somewhat pleadingly. "Dr. Rathbone has cautioned us all against worrying father, and this could have no other result than but to distress him."

Allis' letter had been completed, but she now added a postscript, telling her mother briefly of Crane's insistence over the bet, and beseeching her to devise some plan for keeping this new disturbing element from her father.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS RESUMES FALL ACTIVITY.

The annual fall dinner, which marks the resumption of activity on the part of the members of Judge Runyon's Bible class, at Hope chapel was held at the chapel last night and the members of the class and a few invited guests spent a very pleasant evening in an informal manner. Following the dinner the various numbers spoke of experiences during the past summer and informal speechmaking was the order of the evening. Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of the chapel; G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday school, and Prof. I. W. Travell, assistant superintendent, were the guests of the class and spoke of the work carried on by the young men and congratulated the judge on having kept up their interest for such a long period of time. Some of those present have been members of the class for eight years.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Benjamin Evans, chairman, Charles Vincent, Marcus Clarke, Wallace Morton and Russell Randolph.

Hospital Day in Bayonne.

This will be Hospital Day in Bayonne, and five hundred persons will make a canvass of the entire city and collect contributions to help pay for the new building which is being constructed in East 30th street. The building will cost $45,000, and the directors have $20,000 of this amount. It is expected the necessary $25,000 will be contributed by the residents today. They have been asked to give one-half a day's pay or income. In response to a proclamation by Mayor Garven, many residents will display flags.

Carpenter Killed by Fall.

Warren Sheckler, twenty-one years old, a carpenter, was fatally injured yesterday by falling from the roof of one of the buildings of the Central Railroad shops, at Elizabethport. He was repairing a skylight when his foot slipped and he rolled down the roof to the edge and then dropped thirty feet. His skull was fractured and he died an hour later without regaining consciousness. He lived with his widowed mother at Washington avenue and Pearl street. He was unmarried.

Perjurer Gets Five-Year Sentence.

Silas Huber was senteced to five years in state prison yesterday at Paterson, by Judge Francis Scott for perjury. Huber pleaded guilty to having given false testimony in the murder trial of Samuel Mustol, last June, when Mustol was being tried for the murder of Frank Monochino, a barber, who was killed on Garret Mountain. Mustol was convicted of murder in the second degree and is serving a thirty-year sentence.

Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Dufford, of Middle Valley, have been spending the past week with relatives in this city.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

There will be a Bible study meeting at 338 McDowell street, Monday night at 8 o'clock, conducted by A. M. Saphore, of Newark.

Dr. Hervey Wood, of New York, will occupy the pulpit at the First Baptist church, tomorrow morning and night and talk on temperance.

Miss Josephine Martin and Miss Agnes Bailey, the new soprano singer swill sing in the choir at Grace M. E. church, tomorrow morning and evening.

Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will deliver a lecture before the Epworth League of the M. E. church, High Bridge, Thursday night, October 15, on "James Whitcombe Riley," reciting several poems of the author.

The Sunday school Teachers Union will meet Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. building. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea will teach the lesson and George E. Hall will conduct the devotional exercises. James E. Church will speak on "Oragnized Class in Our Sunday-school."

Delegates from the Baptist church of this city, who attended the Woman's Foreign Missionary meeting held at Stelton yesterday, were Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, Mrs. A. E. Finn Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. George Robbins, Mrs. James L. Manning, Mrs Harry Moore, and Mrs. Chas. Steiner.

JERRY WALSH VICTIM OF A SURPRISE PARTY.

Jerry Walsh, of Madison avenue, was made the happy victim of a surprise party at his home last night, when twenty-five of his friends called without any previous announcement. The self-invited guests were prepared to make merry and a most enjoyable time was had until after midnight. Music, games and dancing formed the principal diversions and supper was served in conclusion. The party was arranged by Miss Nellie Walsh.

The young people in attendance included the Misses Nora Callahan, Marion Blimm, Ruth Moore, Madeline Seaman, Ruth McCarthy, Beulah Rogers, Helen Roberts, Sadie Lee, Henrietta Pedelflous, Margaret McDonough, Dorothy Smith and Nellie Walsh; Jack Kenney, Carl Wilson, Thomas Ricketts, Jack Ricketts, Harold Rogers, John McDonough, William Coyle, Earl Moran, James Lynch, Eddie O'Loughlin, Frank Casey and Thomas Bebout.

In the City Court.

Two hard looking characters giving the names of John Kelley and James White were arrested by Patrolman John Kelley, yesterday afternoon, for selling notions without alicense. This morning Kelley was sent to jail for thirty days for addressing vile language to Captain Frederickson when the latter attempted to search him before he was placed in a cell. Sentence was suspended on White.

PERSONAL.

B. K. Davis, of this city, has been visiting relatives at Middle Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. T. R. VanZandt, of Madison avenue, have returned from a visit with relatives at East Millstone.

A. L. Andrews, who is engaged in business in the South, has returned to his home on Grove street for a vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller, of Glen Gardner, who were recently married, have moved to this city, where they will reside in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Golding, of Buffalo, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Rappleye, of Westervelt avenue, the borough. Mrs. Golding and Mrs. Rappleye are sisters.

Mrs. Wickersham, her daughter, Miss Wickersham and granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Hibbard, of East Seventh street, were among the passengers on the steamship Celtic, which arrived in New York yesterday. They have been spending the summer abroad.

Socialist Candidates Here Monday.

Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for President, and other candidates of the same party, will arrive in Plainfield aboard "The Red Special," Monday morning at 11:35 o'clock. Word of the approaching visit was received today by T. Evans, of 338 East Third street, Socialist candidate for the Assembly. The visiting candidates will address the people of Plainfield for an hour from the train which will be side-tracked on East Third street, near Church. Mr. Debs will deliver the same address given in Boston last Monday. From Plainfield "The Red Special" will go to Elizabeth and Newark.

Fall Issue of "Musical America."

The special fall issue of "Musical America," without doubt the leading publication of the kind, is out and, as usual, it contains a wealth of good, wholesome information of particular interest to lovers of music. In addition to general news concerning musical events, there are also to be found a number of interesting stories about noted musical artists. Announcements of coming important events in the world of music are features not to be overlooked.

Bookmaker's Sentence Reduced.

After a fight which has lasted more than a year "Phil" Stone, the bookmaker, has succeeded in having Judge Ten Eyck reduce a sentence that was passed upon him when he was convicted in the Essex county courts. He was convicted of gambling and sentenced to two years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $2,000. His attorney filed an appeal, and it was not until today that the sentence was recalled. Judge Ten Eyck imposed a new sentence of $1,500, but suspended the prison term.

Held For Libelling Politicians.

Joseph J. Marx, Jr., who conducts a printing establishment at Hackensack, and his foreman, John L. Compton, have been indicted by the Bergen County rand Jury for printing an anonymous libellous political circular, which was sent through the local mails at Hackensack two days before the recent primaries. The men were arrested a week ago. They will be arraigned on Monday. The circular is alleged to have defamed several Republican leaders here.

—A. W. Titsworth, of this city, has been elected manager of the freshman class track team at Rutgers College.

STOCK LYRIC.

(For Mooning Swains.)
Fair are your cheeks as roses rare;
(All who write rhymes have said this.)
Your eyes are bright as stars at night.
(A million girls have read this.)
Ah!—(Here insert her name.)
Your lips are life's elixir!
(Or say, "Love's scintillating flame,"—
"Most either one will fix her.")

Girl with the fascinating curl,
(First lesson, this is simple!)
My heart beats true to none but you.
(Now shy one at her dimple!)
Ah!—(Here insert her name.)
Your lips are like old wine, dear,
(Or put—far more sedate and tame—
"I would that you were mine!" here.)

Love, by yon disc moon high above,
(An oath's the proper caper)
I swear you this—a true heart's kiss!
(Try this on scented paper.)
Ah!—(Here insert her name.)
This passioned rhyme must woo you!
(Here make a bid for lasting fame.)
Who hasn't loved ne'er knew you!

—Stacy F. Baker, in Puck.

Saved!

At last the entire visible stock of lumber had been used up.

"What's the matter," asked the father of a large family, "with using the old wooden bedsteads piled up in the attics?"

Here was a practically exhaustless source of supply that nobody had thought of, and mankind eagerly adopted the suggestion and ran up the price remorseless on the paper trust. —Chicago Tribune.

During Changeable Weather.

"Mr. Uplate," said the lady, "it is now after ten o'clock. I really cannot keep the breakfast waiting for you so long every morning."

"Madam," replied the lazy lodger, with dignity, "if you think I am going to endanger my health by rising before the day is far enough advanced for me to tell whether I shall have to put on my winter flannels or my gauze underwear, you are entirely mistaken."

Fame.

Unsuccessful Author.—Jack, your fame is spreading wonderfully. Only this afternoon a friend of mine asked me to try and secure your autograph for him.

Successful Author—All right, Tom; glad to oblige him. Who is it?

Unsuccessful Author — Isaacstein, the money-lender. He wants it on the back of my promissory note.

Nothing in Vain.

The poet died without knowing what he had been created for.

"To starve!" was his one best guess.

Of course he was in error. Could he have looked forward only a hundred years or so, and beheld the cheap skates who should then be making a fat living writing about him, he must have understood better. Almost nothing is created in vain.—Puck.

CLOSED PORTALS.

Eureka Chapter, No. 2, Order Eastern Star, will initiate two candidates from Plainfield on Monday night, at its temple, 111 First street, Elizabeth. Members of sister chapters and master masons are invited.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, met last night, received one application. Committees were named for the annual entertainment and dance and for a smoker and entertainment at the next meting of the Court. Progressive euchre will also be a feature for those who enjoy the game.

POLITICAL NOTES.

When Governor Fort returned to the State House yesterday he found a number of requests from the speakers' bureau of the Republican National Committee urging him to take part in the campaign in various States. Later in the day he received a telegram from Charles H. Keating, director of the speakers' bureau, asking him to address a mass meeting in New Haven on Wednesday. This invitation he acceped. He was also asked to speak in Indiana.

A Seasonable Delicacy.

A good filling for peppers is hot boiled rice which had stirred in with it melted butter, grated cheese and salt to season. Allow a tablespoonful of butter and two of grated cheese to each cup of rice. This makes a delicious accompaniment to cold meat.

In baking the peppers cover for the first half hour, then uncover and brown the rice, which should be mounded. In this case the peppers are cut in two lengthwise, each half being filled with the seasoned rice.

Pistol Fired in Prosecutor's Home.

The home of District Attorney Samuel A. Atkinson, at Mount Holly, came near to being the scene of a tragedy yesterday afternoon, when a revolver which was not supposed to be loaded was discharged, killing the family dog and narrowly missing the body of one of Mr. Atkinson's children. Thomas Atkinson, fourteen years old, was playing with the pistol, from which it was thought all the cartridges had been removed.

Insulated Wires Afire.

A still alarm was turned in at fire headquarters, yesterday afternoon, for a blaze in electric light wires beneath the Berckman street bridge. Boys playing about the structure threw blazing waste among the strands, causing the insulation to catch. No. 2 hose wagon was sent out and the trouble was quickly stopped.

Editor, The Daily Press:

WOMEN HARD DRINKERS

Rev. Dr. Wood Says They Consume Intoxicants in N. Y. Department Stores.

CLASSES THEM AS SALOONS.

Lauds Gov. Fort and Denounces Atlantic City Hotel Keepers Assassins Spurred on by Liquor.

Handling the liquor traffic without gloves, Rev. Dr. Hervey Wood, secretary of the Temperance Committee of the Baptist General Convention, addressed a large congregation at the First Baptist church, yesterday, and presented a strong arraignment of facts. His morning subject was "The Irrepressible Conflict Between the Church and the Liquor Traffic," and in the evening it was "A Vital Question."

During the course of his remarks in the morning Dr. Wood defined clearly the position the church should occupy in its fight against the liquor traffic if it would follow the divine injunction. He took occasion to speak of the underhanded methods employed by the liquor dealers to combat the good influence of the church, and declared that several department stores in New York were nothing more nor less than open saloons. In this connection he said that in one New York department store there was removed every day for nearly three weeks before Christmas six bushel baskets of empty whiskey flasks from the women's rest room, indicating to what extent women have acquired the taste of liquor.

Dr. Wood deplored the practice of American girls going abroad in search of titled husbands and without mentioning any names called attention to a number of international marriages that have terminated disastrously.

Continuing along the same line of thought, last night, Dr. Wood took for his text, "Quit Ye Like Men, be Strong." He declared that we have a grand form of government but that it is being abused. It is now a question as to whether the Republic is not doomed to be swamped in alcohol. Right here in New Jersey the liquor interests have defied the Governor and the laws and the Governor issued a proclamation that unless the liquor dealers of Atlantic City obeyed the laws he would call out the State militia. Dr. Wood characterized the liquor business to be the most lawless thing known. He said that the question before the people of New Jersey today is shall the laws be obeyed or shall these lazy foreign saloon-keepers run things.

"I never saw anything equal to the impudence of the hotel and saloon-keepers of Atlantic City," continued Dr. Wood. "They said that for fifty-four years they had been allowed to sell liquor on Sunday and they could see no reason why they should be stopped. There is today a strong movement under way to legalize the sale of liquor on Sunday, and it is the duty of the church to prevent this.

"A statement made by several well-known scientists declares that no parent can indulge in drinking alcoholic beverages without injuring the future offspring before it is born. Statistics from the London War Department show that of the volunteers for the South African War seventy-five percent were rejected because of physical defects largely due to drink. I was a pastor in New Jersey at the time of the Spanish-American War and I could tell you facts about the New Jersey soldier boys and drink that would bring a blush of shame to your face. I admire Governor Fort for his stand, insisting that the laws of the State shall be obeyed."

Dr. Wood then referred to the assination of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley and stated that in each case the assassin went directly from a saloon to commit his dastardly deed, showing the influence of the saloon in the matter of crime.

"I was a pastor in Paterson for thirteen years and lived there when the blackest crime in the history of the State was committed in a saloon," said Dr. Wood. "I refer to the Jennie Boscheiter murder. Some people are so mawkish that I understand that efforts are now being made to get those redhanded murderers out of State Prison. I say let them stay in prison until they have served the full penalty. There are 11,000 saloons in New Jersey one for every seventy men. Thomas Hayes, president of the Liquor Dealers' Association, recently said, 'We hold the balance of power, and if the Republican party will not give us what we want, we will turn them out and elect Democrats.' I implore you to do all in your power to save New Jersey from the demon rum and its harmful influences."

FOWLER SCORES BANKERS

Fifth District Congressman Closes Bryan's Schemes with Am. Bankers' Assn. Ideas.

WANTS ESSENTIAL REFORMS.

Charles N. Fowler Puts Himself on Record as Opposed to Guarantee of Bank Deposits.

In response to urging by numerous commercial organizations, Representative Charles N. Fowler, of the Fifth Congressional district, chairman of the House committee on banking and currency, yesterday expressed his opinion of the scheme for guaranteeing bank deposits, which William J. Bryan has made one of the chief issues of his campaign.

Mr. Fowler's statement in part follows:

"I doubt whether there is any one who is more utterly and absolutely opposed to Mr. Bryan's preposterous and ridiculous scheme for guaranteeing bank deposits than I am. It is just as absurd as it would be to pass a law requiring that all life insurance companies to insure all lives without any explanation of those insured; or a law requiring all risks without examination of the property.

"Rejection and condemnation must necessarily follow an understanding of his scheme, which was put forward as a vote catcher and not because he understood the economic principles and practices of banking. Indeed, I do not recall his application of any economic principle during his long public career that has been sound.

"But Mr. Bryan's proposition is no more untenable and superficial than are the twelve reasons given by the American Bankers' Association, at Denver. Every one of the grounds advanced by that association, apparently against the principles of equal protection to all bank creditors, note holders and depositors, will dissolve as quickly as Mr. Bryan's fallacy upon a clear understanding of the principles involved, and a full appreciation of the financial and currency conditions existing in this country at the present time.

"Until the bankers of the United States are authorized and compelled to supervise themselves and made responsible for themselves, we shall not secure the reforms that are essential to the protection of all bank credits, to the more steady and permanent employment of labor, the protection of the manufacturer, the merchant and commerce generally against our annual spasms and periodic cataclysms.

EDUCATIONAL WORK AT YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASS'N.

The teaching force in the language department at the Young Women's Christian Association has been somewhat changed because of the illness of Franklin Fheida Nichaelis, of the German class, who has been obliged to return to Germany. The services of Mrs. Hanch, who has lately come from Strassburg, Germany, have been secured. Miss Bateman, who has spent several years in France, will conduct the French class.

Both these classes will meet in the evening; German on Thursday, and French Tuesday. The educational department will begin work next week. The teaching force and equipment has been secured to give the best possible results to those who come into the classes. An interesting and instructive winter is before all who join.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

Perth Amboy's New Majestic Opened a Year Ago.

A year ago Saturday, October 10, 1907, the city of Perth Amboy was given its first real playhouse, when the New Majestic theatre was thrown open to the public for its initial performance.

Barely completed, the New Majestic was invaded by a throng that night which was sindicative of the desire of the people of this city for a place of amusement such as Counihan & Shannon planned and such as they have succeeded in making the Majestic. The year at Perth Amboy's playhouse has been a most successful one.—Perth Amboy News.

Praises for LaVere's Band.

A feature of the annual horse show at Montclair, Saturday, was the delightful instrumental program furnished by Ben LaVere's band from this city. It comprised eighteen men and the Plainfielder was highly complimented for their meritorious work. The band was immediately re-engaged for next season and several other functions at Montclair. Saturday's program included a soloist, Will Fowler, who sang between several of the classes.

WM. H. TAFT VISITS JERSEY NEXT MONDAY

William H. Taft started out early today on his second tour of the campaign. It will take him through Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey and West Virginia.

Mr. Taft will spend three days in his home State, and they will be full of the hardest work that he will have to face in the campaign.

United States Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, will accompany Mr. Taft through Ohio. When the candidate strikes out into the South he will be accompanied by Leslie M. Shaw.

Two new stops have been scheduled for Mr. Taft in New Jersey on October 19. They are Trenton, from 7 to 9:40 o'clock in the morning, and Camden, from 11:45 to 12:30. Mr. Taft will also cross over in Delaware on October 19, speaking at Wilmington at 3 o'clock. He will end the day at Baltimore. State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman is negotiating with National Chairman Frank Hitchcock for Taft's appearance in Union county, but so far his efforts have not been successful.

IN STAGES OF "D. T'S" SHE PROMISED TROUBLE

Police headquarters was called up on the 'phone, Saturday, by an excited West End resident who declared over the wire that the presence of a cop was needed at the home of Mrs. Kate Ward, at Third and Halsey streets, or she would have the place set afire and the children burned up. Detective-Sergeant Flynn went down and found Mrs. Ward helplessly intoxicated in the house and a roaring hot stove threatening to start a blaze any minute. The children had chased out of doors and neighbors were looking after them, so the officer took her to headquarters in a cab.

Mrs. Ward told Judge Runyon, this morning, that she had gotten drunk on one glass of whiskey but that it was really worriment over family troubles that made her succumb so quickly. Her husband had been drunk for three days, she said, and he hadn't brought a cent home for three weeks. She claimed to have been hunting for him Saturday morning when she gave way to despair and took the whiskey for a bracer.

Mrs. Ward was before the court for helpless intoxication of September 20 last and she was told by Judge Runyon then that her reappearance would mean a jail sentence. The police corroborated her story of hard luck, however, and for this reason the magistrate gave her another chance. She promised faithfully that her conduct would be exemplary from now on.

His Diamonds Pinched?

In the advertising columns today, Charles H. Denman, king of the fans at Westfield and the effervescent one in Union's baseball circles, offers $5 reward for the return of a diamond studded fob, marked "Westfield Baseball Team, 1902." According to his tale of woe, it was "lost or lifted in Plainfield on the evening of September 21." How or why, is not stated.

TERMINAL READY JAN. 1

Jersey Central's Liberty St. Ferry House Promises to Be a Model.

MORE THAN FOUR YEARS' WORK

Improvement Has Been Pursued Without Interrupting Traffic —J. O. Osgood's Achievement.

It was announced today that the new Liberty street terminal of the Central Railroad of New Jersey would be thrown open to the traveling public about January 1 next. For several days one of the new slips has been used in connection with the temporary waiting room, but by the end of the year, what is left of the old station will be consigned to dismantling crews. While the new terminal and the proposed bridge across West street will not be entirely finished until some months later, the ground floor waiting rooms, ticket offices and both ferry slips will be in shape to put into permanent commission.

As the bulkhead line has been moved some 180 feet riverward, West street at this point will be 200 feet wide from the easts line to the face of the new building, an increase in width of 130 feet.

The general designs of the new building follows the Ionic type, the front elevation being rendered in copper. So far as possible the entire structure has been made fireproof, wood being used only for the trim of windows for which quartered oak has been chosen to harmonize with the massive high-backed settees. The walls of the main waiting rooms on both the ground floor and the second floor giving access to the upper decks of ferryboats, will be done in artistically moulded plaster with a deep wainscoting of Istrain marble.

One of the great advantages that pasengers will gain in the new terminal will be the bridge across West street connecting the upper floor with exits and entrance on Liberty street, concrete piers for the span having already been laid.

The task of erecting the new terminal without interrupting the great daily tide of incoming and outgoing traffic, has been a long and arduous one and beset with not a few difficulties for Chief Engineer Joseph O. Osgood of the Central and G. F. Morse, engineer in charge of the works. The first step was the demolition of old pier No. 14 adjoining the old passenger station on the south and the building of a new pier 300 feet long and renumbered 11 was started September 23, 1904. This preliminary was done by the Municipal Department of Docks and Ferries. At the end of this pier which will later be extended 50 feet and used for freight—a temporary ferry slip was installed. This was begun in the following November and as soon as boats could tie up to the bridge, slip No. 2 adjoining on the north, was placed out of commission and the erection of a platform for a new and permanent slip in its place was undertaken. By the middle of the following May, the present makeshift ferry house was ready for use and the old structure was abandoned. Simultaneously, dredging for the foundation of the bulkhead wall, a necessary support of the new station and slips, was started and by July, the filling in with broken stone—the initial stratum of the bulkhead foundation—was well under way.

Some idea of the stalwartness of this formation may be gathered from the fact that more than 21,000 cubic yards of crushed stone was dumped among piles, 35 to 75 ft. in length, and driven to solid rock. On this substantial basework was built the bulkhead wall containing 44 blocks of reinforced concrete, weighing 50 tons each and resting on piles cut off 16 feet below low water mark.

REV. DR. C. E. HERRING TO BECOME A BENEDICT

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Miller, of Indian Orchard, Mass., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alice Catherine Miller, to the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Miss Miller has been a resident of this city for several years and has been active and prominent in the work of the First Presbyterian church.

Dr. Herring, one of Plainfield's leading pastors, was graduated from the College of the City of New York, Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary. He pursued post-graduate work at Oxford University, Oxford, Eng., making a special study of comparative religion, theism and philosophy. He was called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church, sixteen years ago and has continued to serve that church faithfully ever since. About a year ago the New York University gave him the honorary degree of Ph. D. No date has been announced for the wedding.

EARLY MORNING MOVER ARRESTED FOR SURLINESS

Changing his boarding house at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, led to the arrest of Thomas Henderson, colored, and his subsequent arraignment in the city court today. Patrolman Tobias Nolan saw him ambling along West Third street, near Plainfield avenue, at the early hour, with a couple of big bundles of clothing and other effects on his back, and when he asked him to explain Henderson became very surly. It was learned after he was taken in custody that he caused a disturbance in Thornton's pool room Saturday night.

"I told him I wasn't doing anything out of the way, just so," said Henderson, in explaining the arrest to Judge Runyon; "I told him I had nothing in the bundles except my old clothes, just so. When he asked me to let him see, I threw the outfit down so he could look for himself, just so; and then I told him I lived here a long time and was no thief, just so."

"Fine story," said His Honor; "Five dollars or twenty days, just so."

Although Nolan didn't know it, Henderson has been around Plainfield for a long time and is acquainted with nearly all the other cops. He is one of the negroes who participated in the cutting and stabbing of the borough police on Christmas eve, 1905, for which two of the assailants are now serving ten and fifteen year sentences. Henderson turned state's evidence and escaped with six months in the county jail.

TRINITY CONGREGATION HEARS PLEASING YOUNG PREACHER.

Upon the invitation of the consistory, Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of the Refored church at Asbury Park, occupied the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church, at both the morning and evening services, yesterday. Mr. Brook is a young and vigorous preacher, magnetic in appearance and posessing a powerful rich voice. He delivered two excellent sermons to Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck's flock without notes, which were fully enjoyed by large congregations.

The morning theme was "Faith," the text being from Hebrew 11, first part of sixth verse: "But Without Faith it is Impossible to Please Him." The evening theme was "The Cross of Christ," Galatians 6:14.

Among Rev. Mr. Brook's congregation last night was the pastor-emeritus, Rev. Dr. Schenck.

Mr. Brook visited the Sunday-school session in the afternoon, where he made a brief but helpful address.

EUGENE V. 'IN OUR MIDST'

Debs, the World Owes Me a Living Candidate for President, Did Not Speak.

BERKELEY HEIGHTS IS SAFE.

"Red Special" Just Blows in, Turns Around and Blows Right out Again—Pshaw, Voters Forget to Attend Meeting.

"Apathetic Plainfield" was treated to a five-minute treatment of Socialism this morning when "The Red Special," the party's $30,000 train which is "sweeping from coast to coast with a message of Freedom to wage-"slaves" lay on the Church street siding while State Secretary W. B. Killingbeck, of Orange, harrangued a small group of fifty voters and as man aliens attracted by the campaign music of "The Red Special" band.

Mr. Killingbeck said that Plainfielders were apathetic. He was right. He called the voters "wage-slaves"—and at this the Republican majority of Dunellen, who stood smoking near the outskirts of the crowd, almost drew out his red bandanna and joined the cause of Eugene V. Debs, the "world-owes-me-a-living" candidate. By the way, Mr. Debbs couldn't speak at Plainfield. He was in bed in his private car on the special, undergoing treatment for an attack of chills which he developed at Philadelphia last night. (This is a fact.)

The State Secretary urged his hearers to break up the dynasty of "Theodore I." "You wage-slaves," he said, "must remember that there are two parties in the United States today. The Republican and Democratic parties, both owned by the trusts, form one; the Socialist party, owned by you, is the other. Vote for your party."

"The Socialist party," he went on, "is not merely going to lop off a few rotten branches on the Capitalistic tree. It is going to cut down that whole tree of Capital, which has made the United States a nation of wage-slaves." The speaker was introduced by William James, a former Plainfielder, who now lives in Newark. The special left town at 11:35 o'clock, five minutes before it was advertised to arrive here. "The Red Special" band, "comprising musicians from fifteen States," dispensed campaign music through the "principal streets of the city" before the meeting, where several young women Socialists distributed campaign literature.

The special left Philadelphia at 8 o'clock this morning. On account of the candidate's illness, it passed by Jenkintown and Hopewell, and at Bound Brook it was backed off on a siding. There were no speeches there, however, and the band, after a long look out of the windows of their car, played "Dreaming," sitting down, until the train pulled out again. The schedule was crowded to allow the "Red" to reach Elizabeth at noon. Here the State Secretary addressed about 6,000 shopmen from the Singer Sewing Machine plant. They were less apathetic. Mr. Debs spoke at Military Park, Newark, at 3 o'clock and this evening will address meetings at Kurz's Colosseum, Newark, and Commonwealth Hall, East Orange. A riot among 2,000 persons, in which a girl and fourteen men were arrested, marked the "Red Special's" visit to Philadelphia last night.

As a counter move to E. V. D. and his vote-gatherers, William Jeffery, the Berkeley Heights Bungalow Man, distributed Taft buttons in this city this afternoon. He says Berkeley Heights is safe. A telephone from John Cooper says Warren township is safe. So this section will continue on "the ever tenor of its way."

Wins a Blue and a Silver Cup.

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton was among the prize-winners at the Montclair Horse Show on Saturday, her entry, "Ruby," receiving a blue ribbon; also a handsome sliver cup in the runabout class. Mrs. Stockton handled the ribbons in a faultless manner, winning the applause of the spectators.

SOCIETY SEES WEDDING

Miss Gladys Urner Becomes Mrs. Oscar R. Graham, Jr., Before Brilliant Gathering.

AT SCOTCH PLAINS CHURCH.

Rev. Harle Wallace Hathaway Officiates at Marriage of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Urner's Daughter.

Miss Gladys Urner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Urner, of Martine avenue, Fanwood, and Oscar R. Graham, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar R. Graham, of Elizabeth, were married Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, in the presence of a large and fashionable throng of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Elizabeth, Fanwood, Plainfield and distant points. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Harle Wallace Hathaway, of Philadelphia, former pastor of the Madison avenue Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, of which the bride is a member.

The attendants of the bride were the Misses Helen Doe and Anna Poppenga, of Elizabeth; Margaret Gibbs, of Pittsburg; Helen Biglow, Marguerite Cone and Madeline DuBuch, of New York, as bridesmaids; Mrs. Royal S. Cleaves, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. Richard Tull, of Fanwood, as matrons of honor; Miss Margaret C. English, of Elizabeth, as maid of honor and Catherine Morse, of Philadelphia, and Gladys Stahl, of New York, as flower girls.

The best man was Clarence J. Busby, of Elizabeth, and the ushers were Charles A. Urner and Arnold Urner, of Fanwood; Royal S. Cleaves, Lincoln Cleaves and Harrison McCann, of Elizabeth, and Frank Morse, of Chicago.

The bride's gown was of white satin and princess lace, and she wore a tulle veil and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaids were gowned in pink messaline and they carried white chrysanthemums, while the matrons of honor were gowned in light green messaline, trimmed with silver and they carried white chrysanthemums. The maid of honor's gown was of green messaline, trimmed with duchess lace and she carried pink roses. The flower girls were gowned in white organdie, trimmed with lace over pink silk and they carried baskets of flowers.

The mother of the bride was gowned in apricot marquisette over satin, trimmed with gilt braid, rose point lace and red rose buds, while the groom's mother wore a gown of black lace thread over white silk.

The church was elaborately decorated for the occasion with a profusion of hydrangeas, pampass grass and autumn leaves, while the decorations at the house, where the reception was held, consisted of hydrangeas, salvia and pink and white chrysanthemums, artistically arranged throughout the reception hall, parlors and dining room.

The ceremony and general arrangement of the bridal party were attractive. The ushers led the way, followed by the flower girls, maid of honor, matrons of honor, bridesmaids and the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her in marriage. At the altar they were met by the groom and his best man and officiating clergyman. The wedding march was played by Miss Jane Whittemore, organist of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the couple received the congratulations of their many relatives and friends assembled. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Graham left for an extended tour. Upon their return they will reside in a new house at El Mora, which the groom has erected and furnished.

The bride received an unusually large collection of handsome and valuable gifts, including silverware, China, cut-glass, furniture, a complete set of mahogany furniture and a silver service, the furniture and service being from the bride's parents. There was also a pleasing exchage of gifts among the members of the bridal party. The bride's gift to the groom was a gold watch fob, while she received from the groom a brooch of pearls and diamonds. The bride gave her attendants gold brooches set with pearls, and silver teaspoons to the flower girls. The groom gave his ushers amyethist scarf pins and the best man link cuff buttons.

The bride is a most estimable young woman and a favorite in a large circle of friends both at Fanwood and in Elizabeth, her former home. Her father is vice-president of the Urner-Barry Company, publishers, of New York. The groom holds an excellent position in the contracting department of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, in the company's New York offices.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield's Board of Education has taken up the question of pupils' tickets on the street railway. Under the franchise children attending school are entitled to tickets at three cents each. Since the schools opened they have not been able to procure them without going to the office of the company in Elizabeth. The board will try to compel the trolley company to put the tickets on sale in town.

The annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association will be held in the Westfield Presbyterian church Thursday, October 22. Arrangements are being made to entertain the delegates at a luncheon by the home department of the Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday-schools.

Miss Lydia H. McDonald, formerly of Westfield, and Walter Cosgrove were married Saturday afternoon at the Bloomingdale Dutch Reformed church, New York city.

Evangelist J. J. Wicker conducted both services at the Westfield Baptist church yesterday, closing the special services that have been held there the past week.

The Peckham disorderly conduct case, which has been pending before Justice of the Peace Collins for five months, will come up for final argument next Saturday.

LITERARY

The front cover of this October number is in full colors and alone is worth the price of the magazine, which is now on all news stands. The hunting season, which is now on, occupies more notice in this number than some of the other sports, and the illustrations are particularly satisfying as all of them represent actual scenes. Sportsmen generally will appreciate the table giving the full season for game both in the United States and Canada, and a full study of this may save some of them heavy fines. This number of Recreation is profusely illustrated and altogether will appeal to the lover of outdoor sports.

The live wire of practical interest runs through the October Atlantic, vitalizing all its articles and illuminating its varied pictures of life. John Bates Clark continues the Atlantic's study of Socialism by an article on "Education and the Socialistic Movement." With pungent criticism and pertinent suggestion an able New York editor discusses optimistically the question which is the daily despair of the thoughtful—"Is an Honest Newspaper Possible?"

The coming of the fall months of the year is aptly symbolized in the fine picture (in colors) of Halloween fun which decorates the front cover of the October American Boy, and the contents will be found most enjoyable by grown-ups as well as the boys. The serials by Houston, Tomlinson, and Optic are continued, and Weir's story of Circus life is concluded.

Whether it is watching airships daringly smash a record or keep in elbow touch with all of the great moving figures in public life, Joe Chapple, editor of the National Magazine, always seems to be "Right there." The October National fairly glistens with autumn radiance of lively, entertaining and truly readable literature that is so characteristic of the sprightly Boston magazine. Whether the feats of hazardous airship flights, chats with aeronauts, or giving a glimpse in strenuous campaign days of the home life of the candidates—all is there.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The regular services were held at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, yesterday, in charge of the new rector, Rev. Charles Townsend.

Under the auspices of the Women's Home Missionary Society a musical and literary entertainment will be held at Grace M. E. church, Tuesday night, October 20.

The Men's Club of the First Baptist church, will meet in the main auditorium tonight and listen to an illustrated lecture by L. V. F. Randolph on "Constantinople." The women of the church and congregation are invited. Afterward the club will elect officers for the year.

The Latest in Hats.

It is a pity that so many of the picture hats are beginning to droop in front again. There is no doubt that a brim low over the eyes gives these features expression and size, but it does so at the expense of the face in general.

Nothing is less becoming that a hard line of straw across the forehead, hiding the hair. Even where this is not absolutely disfiguring, which is often the case, it gives an impression of hardness which few women would care about. The softest face looks less soft under such an arrangement. The same effect can very often be had simply by putting the hat on to a bandeau. This rises it, while keeping the drooping outline in which very often lies the smartness of the hat. But even then the hair should be dressed very high and very softly.

Trianon hats are very fashionable just now, those wide, wandering creations, with enormous brims and one or two large flowers for their only trimming, with perhaps a touch of black velvet. They are charming to beauty, but rather unkind to mediocrity.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The Cape May County Teachers' Institute will be held at Ocean City next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Falling from a porch, Rebecca Smith, five years old, of 1066 Ferry avenue, Camden, fractured her right arm Saturday.

The 116th anniversary of the Methodist church at the head of the Tuckahoe River, was observed with special services yesterday.

Members of the Cape May fire department have presented Chief Jos. H. Hanes with a gold badge in recognition of twenty-two years of service in that office.

The Gloucester County Principals' Association will meet at the Woodbury High School, October 24, to discuss numerous matters of interest to the heads of public schools.

Injuries sustained by Mrs. Mary E. Henry, widow of Ethan Henry, in a fall last Monday, resulted in her death Thursday night at her home in Millville. She was eighty years of age.

Fifty members of the Morris Guards of Atlantic City, accompanied by a band and two-score friends, left Saturday on a special train for Hagerstown, Md., where they will encamp for two weeks.

Stranded on Perriwig bar in a dense fog, a party of prominent Trentonians returning from the celebration of Founders' Week in Philadelphia spent Thursday night in midstream in the Delaware river.

The Woodbury piano works, which have been operated on about half time all summer, are now working almost full handed, with every prospect for a big winter. A shipment of pianos was made to Honolulu last week.

David E. Dinsmore, of Camden, has the unenviable reputation of having been under the influence of liquor for more than a year. The police in the Recorder's Court Saturday testified that he had been drunk nearly all the time.

John J. Christy, a Woodbury plumber, discovered Saturday that he had broken collarbone and broken rib. He fell about twenty feet upon a radiator last Wednesday, but did not know until Saturday that he had broken bones.

His left foot caught between bumpers of cars in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards in Camden yesterday, John Shotts, of 804 Elm street, a brakeman, was so badly injured that the member probably will have to be amputated.

Joseph Schaub, of Passaic, who deserted from the United State steamer Buffalo on September 22, was captured by Detective Benjamin Kober, yesterday afternoon, at the spring tank at Garfield. He enlisted on December 23, 1907.

By the will of the late Mahalath Hulick, of Daretown, whose death occurred two weeks ago, as the result of a fall, Hallie H. Linch, a favorite niece, receives the family Bible and furniture, one piece of which is nearly two hundred years old.

Anthony Ruchier was received into the General Hospital, Paterson, Saturday afternoon suffering from a badly gashed hand. The patient was injured at the Cooke shops of the American Locomotive Works, where he is employed as a laborer.

LION KILLER'S AUTO HIT BARN.

Edward H. Radel, the Middlesex county resident who gained fame by killing Nero, the lion which escaped from Washburn's Circus, on the Bound Brook River road recently, after it had terrorized the neighborhood, had a narrow escape from a serious injury, while running his automobile near Swartswood Lake Saturday. The machine ran into a barn and passed half through it before it was stopped.

Mr. Radel and his wife are stopping with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Brickner, at the Waldmere, Newton. Saturday he made up a fishing party composed of Charles Brickner, a son of his host, and Charles Hotalen. The machine had not been working very well, and while trying to make the turn from the main road to the lake, the brakes refused to work.

The machine was going rather fast and Mr. Radel was unable to keep it in the road. It headed for an old barn, near John Emmons' farmhouse. Before the occupants could jump, the car hit the barn and crashed through the side. Save a jar and being struck by flying pieces of wood, no one was injured and the damage to the machine was comparatively slight.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Options have been secured on most of the big halls of Essex county for the evening of Saturday, October 24, with the idea that William Jennings Bryan will make his North Jersey visit then. Mr. Bryan had partially promised to be at Newark Thursday, but that is now considered out of the question.

Charles Warren Fairbanks, Vice-President of the United States, and the man who will succeed him in office will speak in Newark this week. That isn't a prophecy, either. With Mr. Fairbanks at two meetings, one in Newark, the other in East Orange, tonight will appear James S. Sherman, Republican nominee for Vice-President. Wednesday evening John W. Kern, of Indiana, Democratic nominee for the same high office, will address two big meetings in this city. So it is pretty safe to say that the successor of Mr. Fairbanks will be Newark's guest one one or the other of the occasions. Mr. Fairbankss reached Newark yesterday, and was the guest last night at the South Broad street residence of former Governor Franklin Murphy, State Republican chairman.

Mr. Bryan has been doing his best for some weeks to follow up Taft. On a tip that the Republican State Committee polls show that Taft will carry Nebraska by 35,000 majority, a number of wagers have been put up within the last twenty-four hours on the basis of 4 to 3 that Taft wins in Nebraska.

Mr. Bryan returned home Saturday from his trip through Missouri, and spent most of the time sleeping and resting at Lincoln, Neb.

HOLY NAME PARADE.

6,000 Catholic Men in Demonstration at Elizabeth.

Elizabeth's Holy Name rally yesterday eclipsed any of the demonstrations heretofore held, both in point of attendance and fervor. There were 6,000 men in line, while 10,000 of their fellow Catholics gathered to see them march. The procession passed over the principal streets of the city, ending at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where benediction was pronounced by the venerable Dean Gessness while thousands of the faithful knelt on the bare ground and thousands more of diver faiths looked on.

Monsignor O'Grady, of New Brunswick, delivered the sermon, lauding the Holy Name Society for its great work in fighting blasphemy. St. Mary's Holy Name Society joined in the celebration.

Miss Hester Jones, of Brooklyn spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Leader, of Duer street.

FEAST OF SUCCOTH BEGAN FRIDAY NIGHT

Another Hebrew holy day is being observed which began Friday night and continues eight days. Unlike the solemnities of Yom Kippur, when fasting is required, the Hebrews are now indulging in feasting.

Booths of tree branches and greenery have been erected in the gardens of some of the orthodox Hebrews. During the seven days those who observe the festival will sleep in the rustic booths. It is also called the Feast of the Tabernacles.

The custom is in commemmoration of the children of Israel, living in temporary houses made of trees while the Lord led them in the wilderness during forty years. Translated, Succoth literally means booths. The feast of Chag Ho'Osif, or gathering of the harvest, is observed simultaneously. According to Judges 16, it was at this time of the year, marking the autumnal harvest and vintage season, that the men of the tribe of Jacob took to themselves wives by hiding in the vineyards at Shiloh and carrying off the maidens who came out to the dance. Great hospitality, good-will and mirth was witnessed on this occasion.

The ceremonies at the Synagogue Children of Israel during the festival will consist of simple services, but next Friday night the celebration of the close is observed by processions of the congregations bearing branches of palm, willow and myrtle. They will march seven times around the aisles, singing hosannas. This is in compliance with the law of Deuteronomy xvi., 14, which ordered seven days of rejoicing by families and servants, clergy and strangers, orphans and widows and the whole community.

On the next night, or on Saturday, October 17, the Jewish people celebrate the feast of Simohath Torah, or the feast of rejoicing, with the law. It is the custom on this occasion for the people to again march about the synagogues, but instead of the branches, they carry the scrolls of the law and sing.

To set these blocks and level up the foundation on this massive abutment, it was necessary to employ relays of divers and the task was slow and tedious. By November, 1906, the bulkhead wall was finished and the permanent foundation of the new ferry house was started. Something like 2,000 piles were used in the foundation which was completed June 3 last, and on July 18 the fireproofing of the walls and steel work of the superstructure was in order. As the staunch metal frame gradually rose higher and more crosss sgirders were set in place the heat-resisting hollow bricks kept pace with the growing steel work until the entire ground floor has been enclosed, the second floor is well advanced, and half of the roof has been put on. In the meantime the side "racks" of both of the permanent slips have been extended some 50 feet farther into the river the reconstruction of these and the new "clusters" at the ends consuming in the neighborhood of a thousand piles exclusive of those driven for the foundation and another thousand used only temporarily.

MR. AND MRS. H. C. IRONS PRESENT BAPTISMAL FONT.

Infant baptism at Warren chapel yesterday morning by the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, was of unusual interest by reason of the fact that he announced that the new baptismal font, used for the first time for infant baptism, was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Irons, of this city. It is considered one of the handsomest in the city. It is beautifully carved and was made by hand.

The following infants were baptized yesterday: Ruth Eleanor Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Charles D. Wheeler; Howard Aaron Winn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Winn; Myrtle Evelyn Sackett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie C. Sackett. In the afternoon Mr. McKelvey baptized Fred Breem, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Breem at their home at Richmond and East Third streets.

Celebrated Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Neidig, of Manning avenue, celebrated the fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home, yesterday afternoon, by entertaining twenty-five relatives and friends at dinner. The guests were mostly from New York and Brooklyn. Mr. and Mrs. Neidig received numerous appropriate presents.

May Pass Resolution.

The Common Council will hold a special meeting tomorrow night when it is proposed to adopt the resolution providing for the appropriation of $15,000 for a new fire-house on South avenue in the Netherwood district. It is believed that if a ten year term is agreed to as the length of time to issue the bonds, the resolution will go through.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Schomp, of Oxford place, are the parents of a son, born to them on Saturday.

Good Bed Comfortables.

When you buy Comfortables you naturally are particular about what you are buying, and it's to Particular People we like to tell about our famous "Perfection" Comfortables. They are made in an absolutely sanitary, non-sweatshop factory, are filled with clean white new cotton, entirely free from waste and shoddy. By a special process the filling is carded in one sheet, making it very light and fluffy. The colorings are silkolene and sateen, nicely tufted. It's really hard to tell them from a home-made comfortable, yet they cost no more than the poorer kinds. They range in price as follows:

1.19, 1.59, 1.98, 2.25, 2.39, 3.25 and 4.50.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINFIELD AND FANWOOD.

Rev. and Mrs. Franklin Mathiews have been entertaining Mrs. Robert Troll and Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Fuller, of Jersey City at the Manse, over Sunday.

Several of the local fans, who hate to give up the game, journeyed to New Brunswick yesterday to see the Carteret-New Brunswick game.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Muir, of Newark, spent Sunday with Mrs. Muir's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Meyer, of Front street.

Mrs. Maria Noble, who has been visiting her son, William B. Noble, of Park avenue, has returned to her home in Newark.

Miss Jennie Johnston led the weekly meeting of the Epworth League held in the Methodist church last night.

Mrs. George L. Dunn led an interesting meeting of the B. Y. P. U., held last night in the church parlors.

Fanwood Council R. A.. holds its semi-monthly meeting tomorrow night in the library rooms.

Miss Cora Miller has been detained at home several days with an attack of the grippe.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

At the Christian Endeavor business meeting Saturday night at the home of Frank Kellogg, it was decided, on the recommendation of the music committee, to purchase fifty copies of Alexander's Gospel Songs. The question of an entertainment next month was discussed at some length, but the matter was not acted upon. F. Kellogg and Edward Horn were appointed as members of the committee which is arranging for the State convention, which will be held in Plainfield next year. The former was appointed on the general committee and the latter on finance committee.

Howard Elliot, who lost his wife last week, is staying at present at the home of his wife's prents on Plainfield avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Chamberlain, of Somerville, spent yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorne.

Mrs. Allen and her daughter, Verna, are at Carlisle, Pa., visiting friends.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Miss Sarah Currie will speak in Warren chapel, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. She will tell of her experience in her New York work and the free-will offering will be given to her for that work.

SWEDE FALLS FROM TRAIN; TAKEN TO THE HOSPIAL.

Gustave Johnson, a Swede, employed as a fireman on on ocean liner, fell off a westbound freight train between North avenue and Netherwood about 1 o'clock this afternoon, receiving severe injuries to his back. He was removed to the hospital, where it is said he will recover.

Johnson does not speak a word of English, but as far as could be learned, he and a friend landed in New York yesterday and the pair were stealing a ride to Philadelphia on a freight. In some way or other Johnson fell off the train before it reached this city. The friend continued on his journey unmindful of the accident to Johnson.

West End Boys' Long Walk.

Clinton Firstbrook and Bertram Smith, two West End boys who have gained a reputation as pedestrians, walked to Princeton and back, Saturday. They left Plainfield at 7 a. m. and reached the college town in time to see the football game at 3:45. Leaving there at 5:45 they reached home at 2:15 yesterday morning.

A Sunday Morning Runaway.

A horse belonging to George Laura, of Somerset street, ran away as the owner was driving it along South avenue, yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The animal threw the wagon against a tree, tearing off one wheel and otherwise damaging the vehicle. Laura was thrown out but escaped unhurt.

First Anniversary Sermon.

Her Horrid Neighbor.

"I don't like our neighbor across the hall," announced a pretty little bride in a West side apartment house.

"What's the matter with her?" asked husband.

"She's so queer. Yesterday I was expecting Dr. Blank and his wife to call and I had to go out for a few minutes. I asked Mrs. Neighbor if she would keep the key to our apartment and I would pin a note on our door, telling Dr. Blank where to find it, so they could get in and wait for me. She said she would, but that I would better describe the doctor, so she would not admit burglars who might read the note.

"I told her she would be sure to know Dr. Blank, because he was a dentist and an awfully nice man; and, Howard, she laughed right in my face! What do you suppose made her do that? I don't think she's a bit nice!" —N. Y. Press.

Didn't Know.

A wealthy gentleman, residing in a southern city, has a negro coachman who recently took unto himself a wife. A week or two later the master asked the man how they were getting on.

"Oh," replied the bridegroom, "ma wife thinks money grows on trees, I reckon. All de time she keeps pesterin' me foh some change. If it ain't half-a-dollar, it's a quarter or less she wants."

"What on earth does she do with the money?" said the gentleman in surprise.

"I dunno," was the reply. "Ain't neveh give her none yet."

May Find Market in Sudan.

A British officer in the Sudan suggests that the educating of the natives in the matter of wearing apparel will be a work of time. "Their purchasing power is still far greater than their expenditure," he writes. "Many an Arab owns 200 head of cattle and only one shirt."

Lightning in Role of Jailer.

In playing pranks about a house a bolt of lightning locked Wallace, fourteen-year-old son of William J. Wheeler, in a closet at Worcester, Mass., but failed to release him again. The boy was in the house, when a bolt completely wrecked the dining room, forcing the windows out onto the lawn. He sought refuge in his favorite place, the cupboard, and had no sooner entered it than the bolt hit the door and locked it. He remained there until his parents came home and heard his shrieks for help.

She Knew Her.

"Your friend, Miss Passay, has become quite chummy with Miss Newcombe. I don't suppose there's much difference in their ages." "I can't answer for Miss Newcomer, but there isn't any difference in Miss Passay's age. She has been 21 for the past ten years, to my knowledge."

In the Borough Court.

The following cases were disposed of in the borough court between Saturday night and this morning: Barney Tracey, drunk and disorderly, twenty days; Lucy Smith, colored, same charge, $5 or five days; Hugo Walzenbach, disorderly conduct, sentence suspended; James Whelan, using profane language, $3 or ten days.

Strong Love.

"And you told her you loved the ground she walked on?" said Count Hickoff.

"Ah, yes, monsieur," responded Count Subrosa.

"And did she believe it?"

"Most assuredly, Count. You see, she was standing on her father's rich coal mine."—Chicago News.

At New Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Dan Mason and Arthur Hart, two of the clever comedians of "Gay New York" company, which appears at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, spent last summer in London. On their way back Mason was terribly seasick. He suffered for several days. "One morning," said Hart, "Mason came out of his stateroom and ran into a lady who was coming along the passageway clad in the scantiest raiment. She screamed and sought a place of refuge. 'Don't be alarmed, madam,' the sick comedian exclaimed, 'I shall not live to tell of it.'"

Tomorrow night at the New Plainfield theatre a performance of the new comic opera, "The Red Mill," by the Messrs. Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, will be given by Charles Dillingham's capable company, in as complete a manner as during its entire year engagement at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York city, three months, Grand Opera House, Chicago, and three months at the Colonial theatre, Boston, all last season. The company numbers sixty members, including the cute little Dutch Kiddies and a chorus which for youth, beauty and talent has seldom been approached in a musical offering. The organization will arrive at a seasonable hour tomorrow morning, which will allow of a complete rest for the evening performance, while oceans of time is permitted the mechanics to set up "The Mill" and have everything in readiness for a snappy and bright presentation.

Catchy music, clever comedy,

May Ward in "The Cash Girl," at the New Plainfield Theatre Saturday Matinee and night.

beautiful scenery, new effects, pretty girls, and May Ward are announced as the one best bet in John J. Reisler's new musical comedy, "The Cash Girl," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night.

Extremely Fancy Slippers.

A golden buckskin slipper will cost $7. The dainty color is much lighter than the lightest tan, being more of a cremy yellow and is worn with white, Copenhagen blue or a dress of its own color. The slipper has a large plain buckle and the flap above shows three distinct points, otherwise the slipper is noticeable for its plainness.

Tim Cronin in "The Cash Girl" at New Plainfield Theatre Saturday Matinee and Night.

ANY WOMAN CAN RAISE FINE CHICKENS.

It is a pleasure to me to give you any instructions I may about raising fowl, but truly I am a poor one to instruct another, for my success is as much due to thoughtfulness and love for fowl and chicks rather than any professional knowledge. One must be willing to give constant care and watchfulness to any pen of fowl if she would make them anything more than merely what they are named. Anything with feathers on that lays eggs is a hen, but why have a lot of parti-colored ones with sizes running from three to five pounds when one can, with vedy little extra expense, have a pen all of one color, carefully chosen as to color, size and shape, and can say with pride: "Those are my fowl." I am not surprised that more people do not know of the orpington breed, for it is not at all common as yet. It was imported from England a few years ago by a Mr. Cooke In my previous letter I mentioned there were three colors of this breed, the black, white and buff. There is also the jubilee, or spotted orpington. They are exhibited at the winter poultry show in Mechanics' Hall each year, although to me they do not show their beauty there as when grouped together in a large family. The rose comb has one advantage over the single comb. It can stand a greater amount of cold weather without freezing.

We have the single comb and the roosters sometimes freeze them in a very severe cold spell.

Now as to color, sometimes the clear buff will show a black or a few white feathers from some black breed. That chick should be kept separate from those intended to law for hatching. The rooster has quite a reddish blanket from crown down over the back, while the pullet is a clear dark buff.

The best sitter is the short-legged fowl and they will stay on their eggs until they die if not removed to eat and drink. We will suppose you have carefully chosen your eggs or have bought a sitting from some reliable dealer (we bought five pullets and a rooster and hatched our own). It is best to have them attended to by the same person always and that one gentle and kind. Every day while the sun is high and warm (between noon and 3 o'clock p. m.) they should be carefully lifted from the eggs, the nest covered to hide it, and the sitter be fed all the corn she will eat and given a dish of fresh water. Let her stay off from 15 to 20 minutes to eat and exercise and be sure she drops her stool before going back upon the eggs, otherwise she will mess her nest and eggs.

Be sure to powder her well before putting her to sit, once more in about one and a half weeks and again the day before the eggs are due to pip. That keeps her free from lice while she is so heated, and the chicks will be stronger if free from them. My chicks have one hard boiled egg every morning for one week to insure against diarrhea; also one handful of fine chick scratch or feed every hour for three weeks. Have a shallow dish for water and change it several times a day, washing it each time in clean cold water. Every night take in all drinking dishes and thoroughly wash and clean them with a small brush and pinch of soda in water. We never neglect to do this to all drinking dishes the year around, and in three years have had but one sick hen, and she took a cold which brought on roup. Keep hens well powdered, houses and roosts cleaned often, well supplied with fresh water in summer and with the chill off in winter. Raise oats for their winter litter and feed them scratch feed early each day in that so they will work and not sit on their cold feet all day. They must have breezy shade in hot weather and sunny windows in cold. Keep a hopper or other receptacle of broken clam shells and charcoal always before them, also one of bran and beef scraps.

During the cold season we feed green cut bone twice each week. Mix it with a lukewarm bean and vegetable mash, and as they seem to tire of one kind of food, change it, and they will lay in spite of themselves, providing they have exercise. Never startle them, for they must learn to trust you. Teach them from the day they leave the shells to eat from your hand. If the mother scolds while setting on her eggs, always speak kindly to her and gently smooth her feathers until she is more calm, then lift her and place her upon her feet.

Treat the brooderies kindly too. Too often they are abused. Have a small yard to put them in, no nest of any kind; place it where they can have some shade rather than sun, give thm plenty to eat and drink, and in five days try them in their regular quarters. If they go to the nest and settle down, put them back again, and in a few days more they are ready t lay. Our hens are very little care, but we give the young chicks a great deal, for it pays in the end. By never allowing them to go hungry for their first three months it forces their growth and develops them into magnificent fowls. We have young roosters now 3½ months old weighing five pounds all dressed for broiling. Our pullets, hatched in April and May, will begin to lay in October at latest and lay very steadily until warm weather.

Now, P. P., I do not know if I have told you what you really wished to know, but if not, please write me again, stating definitely your desires. Should like to hear from you further.—Penelope in Boston Globe.

THE CELLAR AS A SUMMER RESORT.

The girl who was considered clever to have fixed up the cellar of the house in which to take her rest on Sundays, read the papers and sleep in a hammock, is imitating a Russian method.

In that country of ice, where the people suffer intensely from the heat of summer as a contrast to their winters, they make a practice of sitting in the cellar during the days that are unendurable.

The great portrait painter, Mme. Le Brun, tells in her reminiscences of being taught this by the noble ladies who were sitting for her for their portraits.

Fortunately, most of the city houses have cellars that are well kept and ventilated. These are more habitable than the upper rooms of the house, which let in all the heat.

The roof is the place for the night air, but not bearable during the day. So why not fix up the cellar? On hot Sundays, when on one wants to go in the sun or the air, the family will find it very agreeable sitting below the ground in the coolness given by stone.

They could arrange hammocks, reading tables and put comfortable rocking chairs down there.

The very poor have already found out that they are not to be pitied for living below the pavement in the big roomy cellars of office buildings and huge old houses all through the lower part of the town.

TAKING CARE OF THE PIANO.

The dusting and polishing of the piano, whether it be a new and valuable baby grand or the humble and more cosey upright, should never be left to the maid, but should be done by the daughter of the house herself. It should be done with a fine cheese cloth or linen cloth, or, better still, with an old silk handkerchief. There should be neither seam nor hem in the dust cloth, as any inequality or hardness is apt to scratch the piano polish.

Cloudy spots are best removed by pouring a few drops of benzine on the dust cloth, and then rubbing very lightly and in the same direction till they disappear. The carved legs should be dusted with a soft brush, as should also the rack and other ornamental trimmings.

To restore the whiteness of the keys wash lightly and most carefully, so no moisture gets into the instrument or between the keys, with a teaspoonful of hydro super oxide dissolved in a pint of water.

The piano should never stand close against a wall; if practicable even the upright should stand fully out in the room. The direct rays of the sun upon it, dampness and draughts all should be entirely opened once a month and examined for moths, which are apt to establish themselves inside the felting and so ruin the instrument.

Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight and receive several applications for membership.

Thoroughbreds

By W. A. FRASER

Crane was remaining over night in Gravesend and going back to his quarters he reviewed the evening's campaign. He had expected opposition from Allis, but had hoped to overcome the anticipated objections; he had failed in this, but it was only a check, not defeat. He smiled complacently over his power of self-control in having allowed no hint of his absorbing passion to escape him.

If for no other reason than the great success he had made in the Brooklyn handicap with Diablo, his spirits were that evening impossible of the reception of even a foreshadowing of failure. A suppressed exhilaration rose-tinted every projected scheme. He would win Allis, and he would win the Brooklyn derby with his good colt, The Dutchman.

He went to sleep in this happy glamour of assured success, and, by the inevitable contrariness of things, dreamed that he was falling over a steep precipice on The Dutchman's back, and that at the bottom Mortimer and Allis were holding a blanket to catch him in his fall. He woke with a gasp after he had traveled with frightful velocity for an age through the air.

Crane was expecting Langdon at ten o'clock and the trainer was on time to a minute. Nominaly what there was to discuss, though of large import, required little expdession. With matters going so smoothly there was little but assurance and congratulations to be exchanged. Diablo's showing in the big handicap confirmed Langdon's opinion that both the black and The Dutchman had given them a great trial; probably they would duplicate their success with The Dutchman in the Brooklyn derby.

Accustomed to reading Landon's mind, Crane, however, surmised from the trainer's manner that the latter had something that he had not yet broached. Their talk had been somewhat desultory, when suddenly the trainer drew himself together, as if for a plunge, and said: "Did you notice Porter's mare in the Brooklyn, sir?"

"Yes, she ran a pretty good race for a three-year-old."

"She did, and I suppose they'll start her in the derby."

"I fancy they will," answered Crane, carelessly.

"She stopped bad yesterday, but I've heard somethin'."

Crane remembered his own suspicion as to Lucretia's rider, but he only said: "Well?"

"After the race yesterday the jockey, Redpath, was talkin'—to the Porter gal—"

Crane started. It jarred him to hear this horseman refer to Allis as "the Porter gal."

"Redpath told her," proceeded Langdon, "that when he saw he couldn't quite win he pulled his mount off to keep her dark for the derby."

"How do you know this?"

"A boy in my stable happened to be in the stall an' heard 'em."

"Who's the boy? Can you believe him?"

"It's Shandy. He used to be with the Porters."

Like a flash it came to Crane that the spy must be the one who had written him the note about Faust and the change of saddles.

"Well, that doesn't affect us, that I can see," commented Crane. "I'm not backing their mare."

"It means," declared Langdon, with great earnestness, "that if Lucretia could have beat all the others but Diablo, she has a rosy chance for the derby; that's what it means. The black got away with a flyin' start an' she wore him down, almost beat him; I doubt if The Dutchman could do that much."

"Well, we can't help it. I've backed The Dutchman to win a small fortune and I'm going to stand by it. You're in it to the extent of ten thousand, as you know, and we've got to try and beat her with our colt; that's all there is to it."

"I don't like it," muttered Langdon, surlily. "She's a mighty good three-year-old to put up a race like that."

"She may go off before derby day," suggested Crane; "mares are uncertain at this time of the year."

"That's just it; if she would go off we'd feel pretty sure then. I think the race is between them."

"Well, we'll know race day; if she goes to the post, judging from what you say, it'll be a pretty tight fit."

"She didn't cut much figure last year when Lauzanne beat her." Langdon said this with a drawling significance. It was a direct intimation that if Lucretia's present jockey could be got at, as her last year's rider had been—well, an important rival would be removed.

Crane had not been responsible for the bribing of Lucretia's jockey, though he was well aware what had occurred; had even profited by it.

"There'll be no crooked work this time," he said; "nobody will interfere with the mare's rider, I hope," and he looked significantly at Langdon.

"I don't think they will," and the trainer gave a disagreeable laugh. "From what Shandy tells me, I fancy it would be a bad game. The truth of the matter is that gosling Redpath is stuck on the gal."

Crane's pale face flushed hot.

"I believe that Shandy you speak of is a lying little scoundrel. I have an idea that he wrote me a note, a wretched scrawl, once. Wait, I've got it in my pocket; I meant to speak to you about it before."

Crane drew from the inner pocket of his coat a leather case, and after a search found Shandy's unsigned letter and passed it over to his trainer.

"It's dollars to doughnuts, Shandy wrote it. Let me keep this, sir."

"You're welcome to it," answered Crane; "you can settle with him. But about the derby, I have reasons for wishing to win that race, reasons other than money. I want to win it, bad. Do you understand?"

"I think I do. When you say you want to win a race, you generally want to win it."

"Yes, I do. But, see here, Langdon, just leave their jockey to take orders from his own master, see?"

"I wasn't goin' to put up no game with him, sir."

"Of course not, of course not. It wouldn't do. He's a straight boy, I think, an' just leave him to ride the best that he knows how. We've got a better jockey in Westley. Besides, the Brooklyn handicap has taken a lot out of their mare. I think you'd better get rid of that Shandy serpent; he seems ripe for any deviltry. You can't tell but what he might get at The Dutchman if somebody paid him. If I'm any judge of outlawed human nature, he'd do it. Just keep an eye on The Dutchman—but I needn't tell you that, of course."

"That two-year-old I bought at Morris Park is coughin' and runnin' at the nose; I blistered his throat last night; he's got influenza," volunteered the trainer.

"Keep him away from The Dutchman, then."

"I've got him in another barn; that stuff's as catchin' as measles."

"If The Dutchman were to get a touch of it, Porter would land the derby with Lucretia, I fancy."

"Or if they got it in their stable we'd be on Easy street."

"I suppose so. But Dixon's pretty sharp; he'll look out if he hears it's about. However, we've got to watch our own horse and let them do the same."

CHAPTER XXIV.

That evening Langdon and Jakey Faust were closeted together in a room of the former's cottage. An A 1 piece of villiany was on, and they were conversing in low tones.

"It's a cinch for The Dutchman if it wasn't for that d——d mare Lucretia," Langdon observed in an injured tone, as though somehow the mare's excellence was an unwarrantable interferance with his rights.

"What about the jock?" asked Faust.

"No good—can't be done. He's mooney on the gal."

"Huh!" commented the Cherub. "Did you talk it over with the boss? What's his little game? Is he going to hedge on the mare?"

"No; he'll stand his bet flat-footed. Say, he's the slickest! If he didn't give me the straight office that the mare might get sick then I'm a Dutchman."

"We're both Dutchmen." The Cherub laughed immoderately at his stupid joke. "See, we're both standin' for The Dutchman, ain't we?"

Langdon frowned at the other's levity. "You'll laugh out the other side your mouth if Lucretia puts up a race in the Derby like she did in the Handicap."

"But ain't she goin' to get sick? We could whip-saw them both ways then, that's if we knew it first. I could lay against her an' back your horse."

"I wish the old man wasn't so devilish deep; he makes me tired sometimes; gives it to be straight in one breath that he's got reasons for wantin' to win the race, an' then he pulls that preacher mug of his down a peg an' says, solemn like: 'But don't interfere with their jockey.' Then he talks about The Dutchman or Lucretia gettin' the influenza, and that Andy Dixon is pretty fly about watchin' the mare. Now what do you make out of all that, Jake?"

"Well, you are a mug. It don't need no makin' up. The book's all rounded to. He wants the mare stopped, an' don't want no muddlin' about with the jockey, see? Wasn't there a row over stoppin' Lucretia last year? Wasn't the boy set down for the meetin'? You ought to know; you had to pay through the nose. But what made the old man talk about the mare gettin' sick?"

Langdon searched his memory; just how was that subject started? "D——n it! yes, I told him about the two-year-old havin' the influenza."

"Well, Dick, my boy, you've guessed it, though you wern't trying. Crane would like to see the Porter mare coughin'."

"But you can't take a strange horse into their stable, an' him sick," objected the trainer.

"Right you are, Dick. But you could take the sickness there, if you had a boy with the sabe."

"I was thinkin' of that," said Langdon, reflectively. "I was wonderin' if that's what the boss meant."

"Sure thing—that's his way; he never wants to stand in for none of the blame, but he likes to feel sure that he's going to win."

"It looks a bit like it, d——n me if it don't; an' I believe he was givin' me a pointer about the proper boy for the job, too. He said Shandy would get a a horse quick enough if he was paid for it."

"There you are; what more do you want? Would you have Crane get out on the housetop an' shout to you to go an' cruel Porter's mare? He's slick, he is, an' if it can be done you've got a great chance."

"I'm a poor man," whined Langdon, "an' I can't take no chances on losin' ten thousand, if it can be helped."

"It's got to be done right away, 'cause it'll take a couple of day to get the mare coughin'."

"I told Shandy to come here," said the trainer. "He ought to be turnin' up soon. When you hear him knock, just slip into the other room, an' leave the door open a little so that you can hear what takes place. God knows what the young imp wouldn't swear to if a fellow had no witnesses. I think he's comin' here to-night to ask me to pay him to do some dirty job, an' I won't do it, see?" and he winked at Faust. "He's a bad boy," said the bookmaker, in a tone of condemnation.

"There he is now," declared Langdon. "I hear a step on the gravel. Quick, slip into the room; he'll be peepin' through the windows; he's like a fox."

There was a knock at the door. When Langdon opened it Shandy shuffled into the room with a peculiar rockin'-horse sort of gate, just like the trot of a skunk.

"Have you heard anything from the Porter stable?" Langdon asked, when the boy had taken a seat.

"The little mare's well," the boy answered, laconically.

"That's bad luck for us, Shandy. We'll be poorer by the matter of a few thousands if they win the derby."

"Who's we?" questioned Shandy, with saucy directness.

"The whole stable. A man has played The Dutchman to win a hundred thousand, an' he's goin' to give the boys, one or two of them five hundred if it comes off."

The small imp's weak, red-lidded eyes took on a hungry, famished look. "What're you givin' us—is that straight goods?" he demanded, doubtfully.

Langdon didn't answer the question direct; he said. "My man's afraid somebody'll get at The Dutchman. There's a lot of horse sickness about, an' if anyone was to take any of the poison from a sick horse's nose and put it into The Dutchman's nostrils at night, why he'd never start in the derby, I reckon."

"What th' 'ell's the difference? If the Porter mare starts Redpath thinks he's got a lead-pipe cinch."

"You'd lose your five hundred; that's the difference," retorted Langdon.

"An' if she doesn't start, an' our horse wins, I get five hundred? Is that dead to rights?"

"If The Dutchman wins you get the money," replied the trainer, circumspectly. "You mustn't come to me, Shandy, with no game about takin' the horse sickness from our two-year-old an' fixin' Porter's mare, 'cause I can't stand for that, see?"

Langdon motioned him to keep silent and proceeded:

"You see if it leaked out an' we'd won a lot of money over The Dutchman, d——n fools would say that I'd been at the bottom of it; an' if they had me up in front of the stewards I couldn't swear that I'd had nothing to do with it."

He pulled a sheet of paper from his pocket, held it in front of Shandy's eyes and said: "What did you write that letter for?"

The boy stared in blank amazement. He trembled with fear; it was the warning note he had sent to Crane.

"Now if I was to show that up to Faust, he'd put a plug on to do you up, see? I wouldn't give three cents for your carcass after they'd finished with you."

"I didn't mean nothin'" so help me God, I didn't," pleaded the boy; "give it back to me, sir."

"You can take it, only don't play me the double cross no more. If you're doin' anything crooked, don't mix me up in it. You couldn't get into Porter's stable, anyway, if you tried to fix the mare."

"I didn't say I was goin' to do no bloomin' job; but I could get in right enough."

"Well, I ain't puttin' you next no dirty work, but if you hear that the mare gets this horse sickness that's goin' about, let me know at once, see?" Come here quick. If Faust got a chance to lay against the mare he probably wouldn't say anythin' about that note, if he did know."

"I'll give you the office, sir, when she's took sick."

"That's right. You ain't got any too many friends, Shandy, an' you'd better stick to them that'll help you."

"Do I get that five hundred sure?"

"If Lucretia don't beat The Dutchman, you get it."

When the boy had gone Faust came forth from his biding like a badger.

"That's a bad boy—a wicked boy," he said, pulling a solemn face.

XXV.

The next day, intent on persuading Porter to accept the money won over Diablo, Crane took a run down to Ringwood farm.

As Allis had foreshadowed, his visit was of no avail, so far as Porter's acceptance of the winnings was concerned.

"I can't take it," Porter said to Crane. "Allis is more familiar with the circumstances of the bet—if there was one—than I: It must rest with her, she's the man now, you know," he added, plaintively; I'm but a broken down wreck, and what she says goes."

"But there's a payment on Ringwood falling due in a few days," Crane remonstrated, even as he had to Mrs. Porter.

Porter collapsed fretfully. He had thought the time for payment more distant. He would be forced to recall the money he had given Dixon to bet on Lucretia for the derby, to meet this payment to the bank.

Quite despondently he answered the other man. "I had forgotten all about it; this shake-up has tangled my memory. I can pay the money, though," he added, half defiantly; "it will hamper me, but I can do it."

A sudden thought came to Crane, an' inspiration. "I've got it!" he exclaimed. "We'll just let this Diablo money stand against the payment which is about due on Ringwood; put it in the bank to cover it, so to speak; later we can settle to whom it belongs. At present it seems to be nobody's money; it's seldom one sees a few thousands going a begging for an owner," he added, jocularly. "You say it isn't yours; I know it isn't mine, and most certainly it doesn't belong to the bookmaker."

Reluctantly, Porter gave a half-hearted acquiescence. He would have sacrificed tangible interests to leave the money that was in Dixon's hands with him to bet on Lucretia. It would be like not taking the tide at its flood to let her run unbacked when her chances for winning were so good, and the odds against her enough to insure a big return.

It was after banking hours, quite toward evening, by the time Crane had obtained this concession. He had brought the winnings for John Porter's acceptance. Now it occurred to him that he might leave the money with one of the bank staff, who could deposit it the next day.

Crane drove back to the village and went at once to the cashier, Mr. Lane's house. He was not at home; his wife thought perhaps he was still in the bank. Crane went there in search of him. He found only Mortimer, who had remained late over his accounts.

"It doesn't matter," remarked Crane. "I can leave this money with you. It's to meet a payment of three thousand due from John Porter about the middle of June. You can put it in a safe place in the vault till the note falls due, and then transfer it to Porter's credit."

"I'll attend to it, sir," replied Mortimer. "I'll attach the money to the note and put them away together."

On his way to the station Crane met Alan Porter.

"I suppose you'd like a holiday to see your father's mare run for the derby, wouldn't you, Alan?" he said.

"I should very much, sir; but Mr. Lane is set against racing."

"Oh, I think he'll let you off that day. I'll tell him he may But, like your mother, I don't approve of young men betting. If you go, don't bet. You might be tempted, naturally, to back your father's mare Lucretia, but you would stand a very good chance of losing."

"Don't you think she'll win, sir?" Alan asked, emboldened by his employer's freedom of speech.

"I do not. My horse, The Dutchman, is almost certain to win, my trainer tells me." Then he added, apologetic of his confi[illegible] "I tell you this, lest through loyalty to your own people you should lose your money. Racing, I fancy, is very uncertain, even when it seems most certain.

XXVI.

Encouraged by Jockey Redpath's explanation of his ride on Lucretia, Allis was anxious that Dixon should take the money her father had set aside for that purpose and back their mare for the Brooklyn derby.

The day after Crane's visit to Ringwood Dixon advised Allis that Lucretia seemed none the worse for her exertion in the handicap.

"Perhaps we'd better put the money on right away," he said. "She's sure to keep well, and we'll be forced to take a much shorter price race day."

"Back the stable," advised Allis, "then if anything happens to Lucretia we can start Lauzanne."

The trainer laughed in good-natured derision. "That wouldn't do much good; we'd be out of the frying pan into the fire; we'd be just that much more money out for jockey and starting fees; he'd oughter been struck out on the first of January to save fifty dollars.

"If Lauzanne would only try something tells me he'd win," contended the girl.

"And somethin' tells me he wouldn't try a yard," answered Dixon. "But I don't think it'll make no difference in the odds we get whether we back the stable or Lucretia alone; they won't take no stock in the chestnut's prospects."

So Dixon made a little pilgrimage among the pencilers. He was somewhat dismayed and greatly astonished that these gentlemen also had a somewhat rosy opinion of Lucretia's chances. Ten to one was the best offer he could get.

Dixon was remonstrating with a bookmaker [illegible], when the latter answered, "Ten's the best I'll lay—I'd rather take it myself; in fact, I have backed your mare because I think she's got a great chance; she'll be at fours race day. But I'll give you a tip. You go to Cherub Faust; he'll lay you longer odds. I put my bit on with him at twelve, see? If I didn't know that you an' Porter were always on the straight I'd athought there was somethin' doin', an' Faust was next it, stretchin' the odds that way."

Thanking him, Dixon found Faust, and asked him a quotation against Porter's stable.

"Twelve is the best I can do," answered the Cherub.

"I'll take fifteen to one," declared Dixon.

"Can't lay it; some of the talent—men as doesn't make no mistakes, is takin' twelve to one in my book as fast as I open my mouth."

"I want fifteen," replied Dixon, doggedly. "Surely the owner is entitled to a shade the best of it."

"What's the size of your bet?" queried the Cherub.

"If you'll lay me fifteen, I'll take it to a thousand."

"But you want it ag'in the stable, an' you've got two in; with two horses twelve is a long price."

DEFEATED PERTH AMBOY

Clinton Avenue's Crack Aggregation Won in a Well Played Contest.

SCORE WAS FIVE TO ONE.

Randolph Fanned Fifteen Batsmen —"Brit" Martin Got a Two-Base Hit.

The Clinton Avenues finished the local baseball season on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, by defeating the Nationals of Perth Amboy, by a score of 5 to 1. The visitors scarcely had a look-in throughout the contest for Randolph fanned fifteen batsmen and allowed but one hit. Oleson was the lucky man and it was more of a scratch bingle than anything else. The reputation that preceded the Nationals was not fulfilled and they were easy picking for the locals.

While every member of the Clinton Avenue team played a good game Randolph was the particular star. He was in the pink of condition and held his opponents without difficulty all the way. They tried hard to connect with his deceptive curves and twists, but to no purpose. He was supported well by Seery behind the rubber. This was probably Randolph's last appearance with the locals for next season he will be given a tryout by the Newark Eastern League club and his friends predict that he will make good.

Saturday's game was witnessed by a fair-sized crowd, the weather not being especially favorable to attract the usual number of people. For the visitors, Grimley took Oleson's place in the seventh inning after three hits and two runs had been made, Oleson going to second base and Waters to third. B. Martin, Emery, Boelzley and Schott led in the batting each getting two hits, including a two bagger by B. Martin. The score:

BOROUGH H. S. PLAYS TIE GAME WITH RAHWAY

The football team from the North Plainfield High School played its first game of the season with the Rahway High School eleven, Saturday, at the latter place, and neither side was able to score. The elevens were very evenly matched and the contest was nip and tuck from start to finish. The halves were twenty and fifteen minutes and every minute of time the game was marked by clean, sharp work. The borough boys felt confident of a victory, but had to be satisfied with a tie game. They are entitled to every bit of credit, however, for their opponents have already played two games this season, while it was the first for North Plainfield.

The borough team was weakened to some extent by the absence of Tone Overton, who was unable to play owing to a boil on his heel. He expects to be in the game on Wednesday, when the team will play Battin High School, of Elizabeth, on the borough field. Saturday's lineup was as follows:

Referee—W. Crosby, Rahway; W. Hamilton, Plainfield; umpires, W. Hamilton and W. Crosby; timers, Principal B. J. Phelps, Plainfield, I. Ayers, Rahway; linesmen, B. Crue, Rahway; G. Bailey and Ellsworth Bennett, Plainfield.

HOLY CROSS DEFEATS BOUND BROOK HIGH

The Holy Cross Club football eleven in the game with the Bound Brook High School team, Saturday afternoon, on the cricket field, showed conclusively that it is in the high school class. The weight of the two elevens was about even, an average of 138 pounds.

The game began promptly at 3:30 with Holy Cross kicking off. From that minute it was a stern struggle, Bound Brook having a shade the best of it by working many trick plays. Nevertheless, when the whistle sounded at the end of the first half, Holy Cross had the ball within five yards of Bound Brook's line. Neither side side scored the first half.

The second half started with fast and hard play. Holy Cross evidently having gauged the weak points in the visiting team's line. Straight football and a reserve of trick plays did the work for Holy Cross and the ball was soon over the line, through the efforts of Miller, the halfback. Williams failed on a kick for a goal. Coyle on end and Nash fullback, made substantial gains, while Miller and Williams tore up the opposing line again and again, resulting in a touch down for Holy Cross. The goal was kicked by Vail, quarterback.

By clever interference in the remaining time of play, Holy Cross soon worked around the ends and finished up by line plunges for another touch down, a touch back having already been made. The final score was 18 to 0 in favor of Holy Cross.

Quarterback Vail showed excellent judgment in directing the plays and the whole team played straight football. The arrangements for a clear and an unobstructed view of the game were perfect. No one except officials were allowed within the roped-off field. Special officers Irby and Pope were on duty. The next game will be played with Somerville High School on the Cricket Fild, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. New Brunswick is scheduled for a later date.

The line-up of Holy Cross eleven Saturday follows:

Centre, Lindsey; quarter-back, R. Vail; full-back, Nash; right half-back, B. Miller; left half-back, Will iams; guards, Blazier and Sharp; tackles, Neff and Brakeley; ends, Little and Coyle.

Sinclair was unable to play owing to an injury sustained by running a nail in his foot, not an injury on the footfield. Naylor and Roberts were the substitutes.

WINNERS' CUP PLAY AT THE COUNTRY CLUB LINKS

In addition to the weekly competition for the Fall Handicap cups, Classes A and B, at the Plainfield Country Club, on Saturday, there was the initial play for the Winners' cup, presented by W. Lester Glenney, and this brought out a large number of contestants. The conditions imposed for this competition was that any member who had won a cup or points for a cup this season up to and including Labor Day, was eligible to compete in the handicap match play.

The competition will continue on Saturdays until election day, when the finals will be played. The result of Saturday's competition is as follows:

Henry D. Hibbard, 7, beat H. F. Fox, 24 by 1 up; W. B. Tyler, 22, beat J. B. Gearson, 20, by 3 up and 2 to play; George S. Clay, 24, beat L. A. Chase, 17, by default; S. D. Lounsbury drew a bye; A. L. Willis, 9, beat J. P. Murray, 18, by default; W. T. Glenney, 6, beat C. M. Church, 24 by default; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, 14, beat H. C. Munger, 16, by default; A. E. Barclay, 22, beat E. J. Patterson, 22, by 1 up; Dudley H. Barrows, 4, beat A. G. Henderson, 20, by default; J. A. Lane 17, beat C. C. Burke, Sr., 15, by 7 up an 6 to play; G. F. Earle, 20, and F. C. Talmadge, 6, both defaulted; L. H. Van Buren, 25, beat F. O. Reinhart, 4, by default; D. H. Rowland, 18, beat Leighton Calkins, 8, by 2 up and 1 to play; C. W. King, 26, beat S. H. Patterson, 15, by 5 up and 3 to play; Arthur Murphy, 9, beat W. D. Riggs, 12, by 4 up and 3 to play; J. R. Evans, 25, beat Percy H. Stewart 12, by default.

The pairings for next Saturday are as follows:

H. D. Hibbard vs. W. B. Tyler; George S. Clay vs. S. D. Lounsbury, A. L. Willis vs. W. T. Glenney; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges vs. A. E. Barclay; Dudley H. Barrows vs. J. A. Lane; L. H. VanBuren by default; D. H. Rowland vs. C. W. King; Arthur Murphy vs. J. R. Evans.

In the play for the Fall Handicap cups, Class A, three contestants tied for first place and they each receive two points. In Class B there were also two players that tied with an 82, dividing one point. The scores:

Class A—J. Whitney Baker, 80, 6-74; Arthur Murphy, 82, 8-74; S. D. Lounsbury, 83, 9-74.

Class B—L. H. Gates, 104, 27-77; D. H. Rowland 98, 18-80; H. F. Fox, 107, 25-82; L. H. VanBuren, 107, 25-82.

In Honor of Guest.

A pleasant party was given in honor of Mrs. Pansy E. Luckey, of Kenoza Lake, N. Y., by her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Addis, of East Second street, Saturday night, when a dozen of Miss Luckey's friends called. The evening was spent in playing games the winners of which received pretty china prizes. Popular songs and instrumental music were heartily enjoyed by all and at a late hour refreshments were served. The decorations, in red and green of autumn leaves, were very effective and pretty.

Borough Club Rally and Smoker.

The First Presidential Voters Club, of the borough, will hold a meeting and rally in Eaengerbund hall, Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, at which Clarence Case, of Somerville, and other prominent speakers, will give addresses. At 9 o'clock the club will conduct a smoker for borough Republicans in general at which entertainment will be furnished by local talent.

TO SELL BLUE RIBBONERS

Miss Mabel B. Hooley to Dispose of Her Stable of Prize Winning Horses.

E. S. HOOLEY'S DAUGHTER.

Society Girl Decides to Part With Her Famous Exhibits to Become an Auto Devotee.

Miss Mabel B. Hooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, of North Plainfield, who for several years has been a prominent exhibitor and winner at all the leading horse shows in America, is going to withdraw from the horse shows, temporarily at least, and has commissioned Francis M. Ware to close out her stable of prize winners at a special sale to be held at the American Horse Exchange, New York, Friday night.

Miss Hooley is one of the most skillful amateur horsewomen in the country. She has been prominent as an exhibitor at Eastern horse shows since 1905, when she brought out her now famous chestnut mares, Quaker Maid and Dorothea.

In single, double and tandem harness these superb mares last year beat the pick of the country, winding up the season by winning in Madison Square Garden with such champions as Kitty Gray and Norina, Menella and Bussie and Phoebe Watton and Marie Tempest behind them. For combined equality, conformation and action few pairs have been seen that classed with them; in fact, dealers at the American Horse Exchange considered Quaker Maid to be about the most perfect specimen of the trotting bred harness horse ever seen there, when George D. King sold the pair to Miss Hooley's father, Edwin S. Hooley about three years ago.

Other notable winners in Miss Hooley's stable are The Czar, a heavy weight saddle horse that carried off the championship at Philadelphia last year; Mansfield, a light weight saddle horse; The Little Corporal, a harness pony, that was second to Harvey S. Ladew's wonderful little roan are All There in one of the strongest classes of the Plainfield show this year; Delight, a woman's saddle mare, and Delight and Bohemian Lad, a typical pair of cabriolet or phaeton horses that have won several prizes at the summer shows.

It is said that Miss Hooley has become fascinated with the auto and that following the disposal of her blue ribbon horses she will purchase a Mercedes, a Panhard, a Packard and a Thomas Flyer.

PARK GOLF PLAYERS CONTEST FOR CUPS

Although less than a dozen contestants posted their scores for the President's and Golf Club cups at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, the playing was close an exciting and but few points separated the leaders in their efforts to score for the trophies. For the President's cup, W. V. Gano, Dr. H. K. Carroll and W. E. Lough scored points, while W. V. Gano, Dr. Carroll and Dr. A. W. Anderson received points for the scratch cup. The leading scores:

W. V. Gano, 88, 0-88; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 90, 1-89; W. E. Lough, 100, 11-89; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 95, 4-91; W. V. Byard, 101, 9-92; W. R. Faber, 1$5, 6-97; W. C. McNaughton, 107, 9-98.

In the play for challenge trophy number one, Walter C. McNaughton, holder, defeated W. R. Faber, challenger, by 4 up and 3 to play; while W. V. Byard, challenger, won from L. R. Thurlow, holder, by default, for trophy number two, and C. B. Morse defaulted to Dr. A. W. Anderson for trophy number three.

SWEARS MRS. CURLEY WAS OF SOUND MIND

Ray Packer, of this city, a relative, gave testimony before G. W. V. Moy, a special commissioner, on Saturday, in the proceedings instituted in Chicago by Mrs. Curley, of Newark, to break the will of her mother, Mrs. McKinney, who died in Chicago four years ago, leaving her entire estate of about $20,000 to her sisters, Ella and Leola Seaman, the ground being the allegation that she was not mentally sound when she made her will. Mr. Packer's testimony tended to show that Mrs. McKinney was of sound mind.

It is said that the reason Mrs. McKinney cut off Mrs. Curley in her will was that she was not satisfied with the way the latter's daughter was being educated and it was her desire to adopt and educate the child herself. It is understood that the money was left to the two sisters with the understanding that they should educate the child.

GOOD PROGRAM AT FAIR ACRES MATINEE MEET

The disagreebale weather on Saturday had considerable affect on the attendance at the matinee race meet at the driving park, under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club. This was regretted for the reason that a good program had been arranged and several valuable prizes were offered.

Class B and C, which could not be finished a week ago, were run off, and in addition there were two other trotting events, Classes A and D. In Class, B, Frank Irving's "Fred V.," was the winner, taking one heat in addition to the two the week before. In Class C, C. C. Brower's "Sidney Leland," was the winner, finishing first in the second and third heats. Excellent time was made in all four events. The summaries:

P. H. S. BOYS DEFEAT WESTFIELD H. S. LADS

The Plainfield High School football eleven had a close game at Westfield on Saturday, when it played its first game with the high school team of that place. The Plainfield boys won out, the final score being 5 to 0, but it was only after the hardest kind of work that they scored. Bingaman made the touch-down in the first half. The teams were about of even weight, but Westfield displayed more strength than was expected, especially in the tight places. However, Plainfield play a fine game throughout and held the opposing team to the end. The halves were fifteen and twenty minutes. For Plainfield Roy Phillips refereed and Sampter was one of the linesmen. On Saturday, P. H. S. will play Rugerts Preps on Hope Common. P. H. S. lineup on Saturdayl was as follows:

ONCE WEALTHY MAN PENNILESS AT DEATH

William Greenwood, who had been well known about the city and borough for the past fifteen years, died Saturday in Muhlenberg Hospital. He had been ailing for over a year with a stomach affection and Bright's disease.

Greenwood was between sixty-five and seventy years old and when he first came to Plainfield he was reputed to be quite wealthy. He owned considerable real estate at El Mora and other places and had a controlling interest in the old baseball property in the borough through which Fairview avenue and other streets were cut for improvement purposes. Some few years ago he lost all his money, but from what cause he never stated fully any more than to say at odd times that he had been robbed out of it. He was best known to people around town by his ownership of a thoroughbred, coal-black Kentucky horse that he drove everywhere without a bridle and was his constant companion. He retained the animal after all else had been taken from him and he was heart-broken when he evenually had to give it up to satisfy a judgment against him. Just before his illness began, he eked out an existence by working in livery stables.

Greenwood was a native of Cincinnati where his father equipped and gave the city its first horse-drawn fire apparatus. He leaves a wife, who lives in Europe, and two sons, one living in Canada and the other at Middletown, this State. The funeral arrangements have not been made, pending word from them. The body is being held at Cole's undertaking rooms.

TO PLAY GOLF ON SUNDAY

Plainfield Country Club to Vote on "Liberal" Sabbath Day at Next Meeting.

FOR CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGE.

George P. Mellick, E. T. Barrows and Other Prominent Members Request Decision on the Agitation.

Agitation for Sunday golf has been revived among the members of the Plainfield Country Club and the proposition, which has been turned down several times in recent years, will be the subject for a meeting to be held at the club house on Tuesday night, October 20. The purpose of the request made to the governors for this meeting is a "liberal" Sabbath, including the throwing open of the club house, the golf course and the tennis courts after 1 o'clock on Sunday afternoons. Many prominent members advocate a change in the constitution which would permit of this innovation, while there are a number strongly opposed to what they term a desecration of the Lord's day.

The formal notice for the meeting in question follows:

"A request has been made to the governors of the Plainfield Country Club signed by the following active members:

"George P. Mellick, William B. Wadsworth, S. D. Lounsbery, J. E. Erickson, Henry E. Butler, Dr. William H. Murray, A. A. Tilney, E. A. Stevenson, E. T. Barrows, W. B. Tyler, for a meeting of the club to be held on Tuesday, October 20, to amend the constitution so as to permit the clubhouse and grounds to be open after 1 o'clock on Sunday

"It will be remembered that this proposed change has been attempted a number of times during the last few years. At one of the meetings, a large majority vote was obtained in favor of a half Sunday opening; it is believed that the sentiment regarding this question has changed very much of late, and many members who heretofore opposed the club being open on Sunday afternoon see the reasonableness of the request, and hope to see the question finally disposed of that way. It is expected that there will be comparatively little excitement over the voting on this question at the approaching meeting, and it is confidently expected that there will at this time not be much opposition to the proposed change, and that the quiet of Sunday afternoon at the club, if the proposition is carried, will surprise many who have been afraid of the contrary."

COMMITTED TO JAIL ON YOUNG GIRL'S CHARGE.

On complaint preferred against him by Jessie A. Smith, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Amelia Smith, of West Second street, Harold Cook, of Duer street, was formally arraigned before Judge Runyon in the city court, yesterday afternoon. Through his counsel, Judge William Newcorn, he asked for an immediate hearing but it was denied him as the girl was unable to appear. The matter was accordingly adjourned until Wednesday of next week and the defendant was committed to the county jail, the city magistrate being unable to fix bail in a case of this nature.

Cook is well known locally as a musician and for the past few months has been working in a New York vaudeville house as piano player. He was formally employed in a Front street store where his accuser was a saleegirl until last Friday. She is well developed for her age and would easily pass for sixteen. Cook is twenty-three years old and has a wife and child.

DAIRY FARM OWNER HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Edward Clark, the millionaire owner of the Clarkhurst model dairy farm on the Bound Brook river road, narrowly escaped serious injury, if not death, in an automobile accident near his home last evening. With a friend seated beside him, he was proceeding from Bound Brook to the farm, located just below Riverside Park, and had reached the point where the trolley tracks cross from the left to the right side of the road, when the steering gear of his machine went wrong. Before he could slacken speed, the auto struck one of the rails sideways and turned completely over.

The two men were hurled from their seats but fortunately both rolled clear of the wreckage. They were badly cut and shaken up and when Mr. Clark regained his feet he found the force of the fall had dislocated his left shoulder. Both returned to Bound Brook where they received medical attention. The automobile, a handsome Ford runabout, was almost completely demolished.

Mr. Clark is an enthusiastic autoist and has three other machines beside the one which figured in the accident. A retail distributing store for the dairy farm is located on North avenue.

MISS MABEL KIMBALL WEDS HERBERT GALES

The marriage of Miss Mabel Frances Kimball, niece of Mr. and Mrs. William G. De Lamater of Dudley avenue, Westfield, to Herbert Spencer Gales, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gales of Elizabeth, was solemnized yesterday afternoon in the Congregational church at Westfield, the acting pastor, the Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Sturgis, officiating.

The bride was given away by her brother, Charles E. Kimball of Westfield. Miss Estelle Hegeman was maid of honor and Miss Helen Virginia Keeler, of Elizabeth, and Miss Gertrude Noe, of Westfield, were bridesmaids. The best man was Alden Whitman, of New York. The ushers were William J. Bogert, Jr., of Westfield; William Le Lamater, of New York, Weston Gales, brother of the bridegroom, of Boston, and Shiras Campbell, of Elizabeth.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. DeLamater.

Mr. and Mrs. Gales left on a late afternoon train for a two weeks' honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Westfield.

Many guests were present from New York, Elizabeth and Boston.

NON-SUITED IN EFFORT TO GET COMMISSION

Charles E. Tinsman, a real estate broker, of Dunellen, was non-suited in the district court, New Brunswick, yesterday, in his action against George S. Larkin, of New Market, to recover $125 as commission on a $5,000 realty deal which did not go through. Codington & Swackhamer represented the plaintiff and W. S. Angleman was counsel for Mr. Larkin.

According to the story of the transaction, in September, 1907, Mr. Larkin signed a paper in which he agreed to sell his farm for $5,000 and Mr. Tinsman was to receive five per cent. commission if the deal went through. In August of this year, Mr. Tinsman brought John H. Currie, of New York, to see Mr. Larkin, and Mr. Currie offered $4,500 for the farm, $1,000 cash and a New York mortgage for $3,500. Mr. Larkin refused the offer.

Later Mr. Currie returned with Mr. Tinsman when the former offered $5,000 for the farm, $1000 cash, $2,00 in two years and $2,000 in four years. This Mr. Larkin also refused and stated that he had concluded not to sell the farm and rescinded the contract. Shortly after this Mr. Currie offered Mr. Larkin $5,000 cash for his farm, but he declined to sell. Then Mr. Tinsman brought suit to recover his commission on the deal.

It was held by counsel for the defendant, that no time was specified in the contract to sell, that Mr. Larkin had a perfect right to rescind the contract and that inasmuch as the deal was to be a cash one and it was not, Mr. Tinsman was not entitled to a commission. Judge E. W. Hicks agreed with the defendant and promptly granted a non-suit.

PASTOR BALKED MATCH

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell Prevented Wedding of Miss Jamison to Mr. Forsyth.

MYSTERY PERVADES AFFAIR.

Forsyth Admitted Accusations Made by Girl's Father—Miss Jamison Formerly of Dunellen.

Alfred Brookfield Forsyth, of late a resident of Newark, but for many years well known in Morristown, where his late father was a prominent lawyer, and Miss Mabel Eloise Jamison, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Eleander S. Jamison, of Andover, Sussex county, are not going to be married. The Jamisons formerly resided in Dunellen.

The invitations to the ceremony, which was to have taken place Thursday at Andover, where Dr. Jamison is pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, have been withdrawn.

Announcement was suddenly and briefly made last week by the parents of the prospective bride that the marriage had been indefinitely postponed. Simultaneously all those to whom invitations had been sent were notified of the permanent recall of the cards. The sole explanation vouchsafed was that there had been "serious developments at the last moment."

Dr. Jamison sent the following statement to a Newark paper under date of October 8:

"As the marriage of Miss Mabel Jamison to Mr. Alfred Forsyth, to which an invitation was sent to you has been indefinitely postponed, kindly make no note, and greatly oblige. Yours very respectfully, REV. AND MRS. E. S. JAMISON."

Thus far the only additional information regarding the abrupt canceling of Miss Jamison's engagement to Mr. Forsyth has come from Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Newark. Rev. Mr. O'Donnell was formerly pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church and is a son-in-law of B. O. Bowers.

Dr. O'Donnell has been an intimate friend of the Jamisons for many years. His statement yesterday, however, instead of throwing light on the reasons attaching to the permanent postponement of the marriage, serves rather to accentuate its mystery.

"It is true that I am largely responsible for Dr. Jamison's act in breaking off the marriage that was to have taken place between his daughter and Mr. Forsyth," said Mr. O'Donnell. "Why such action was taken I am not at liberty so mention. All I can say is that I was called into consultation—to tell by whom would be a violation of confidence—that I saw Mr. Forsyth, and that upon my report the recall of the invitations was sent out. My report to Dr. Jamison concerned matters of a most delicate and personal nature. Such particulars cannot be published in a newspaper. Anyway, further remark on my part would mean a breach of what I consider a most sacred trust."

"It has been stated, however, Mr. O'Donnell," the minister was told, "that Dr. Jamison saw Mr. Forsyth in your presence and said only the fact of his being a clergyman prevented his shooting Mr. Forsyth. Is that a fact?"

"I don't know," declared Mr. O'Donnell. "It wasn't said while I was present, and I don't believe Dr. Jamison would say or do anything like that."

"Were there any grounds for such a remark from him?"

"I have nothing further to say," responded Mr. O'Donnell evasively. "Only Mr. Forsyth himself or Miss Jamison's family could tell what grounds there were for the broken engagement. As I have said, they are of the most intimate and delicate nature. In this case I have acted in a purely professional capacity. An open statement from me would be as unprofessional in this case as would any explanation from a physician or a priest in any case in which they had been called for consultation."

Mr. Forsyth, who is, perhaps, the most interested party in the case, could not be found this morning. He has for some time past been boarding at the home of L. W. Frisbee, at 95 Clinton avenue. A maid at the house said Mr. Forsyth had gone away last Friday or Saturday, but she thought he had not given up his rooms there. Mrs. Frisbee is now on an automobile trip with her husband, a department superintendent for the Prudential Insurance Company.

Mr. Forsyth is about forty years old. His occupation, according to the Newark directory, is given as "salesman, New York." He had been en-

BIG SPEAKERS FOR G.O.P. MASS MEETING

Col. William H. Fairless, the silvery tongued Virginian, and Creswell MacLoughlin, the editor of The Schoolmaster, will be the chief speakers at the big Republican rally to be held at the New Plainfield theatre on Thursday night. At this mass-meeting the opening gun of the local campaign will be fired and a big attendance is expected. Women are particularly invited and special seats will be reserved for them. The doors will open at 7:30 and the meeting will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Both Col. Fairless and Mr. MacLoughlin were secured by County Chairman Frank H. Smith from the State Republican Committee for that night although there has been much demand for their appearance elsewhere at that time. They are the best speakers in the State Committee's corps, and their eloquence, sound logic and wit promise to afford an unusual treat for Plainfield Republicans.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, undoubtedly, will make some brief remarks, as they will at the following mass meeting on October 29, when Governor J. Franklin Fort and Congressman Charles N. Fowler are booked to make the principal addresses. All the other county candidates, including Captain Robert Kirkland, for sheriff, and G. W. Schwartz and A. F. Kirstein, for Assembly, will also be on the platform on Thursday night. The city candidates, too, including Mayor Fisk, will take a part in the meeting. A brass band has been engaged.

The name of the chairman and those of the vice-presidents will be announced tomorrow by Chairman Angleman.

BAPTIST S.S. CONVENTION HERE TUESDAY, OCT. 20

The fifty-seventh annual convention of the East New Jersey Baptist Sunday Schoool Association will be held with the First Baptist church on Tuesday, October 20. There will be three sessions. The morning session will begin at 10 a. m., the afternoon session at 2 p. m., and the evening session at 7:30 p. m.

A strong program has been arranged. In addition to the routine business there will be a number of addresses relating to different departments of Sunday school work.

The program follows:

Morning Session.

Prayer and Praise Service, led by Rev. G. H. Gardner, of New Market; Words of Welcome, Rev. J. A. Chambliss, D. D., of this city; reply by secretary; appointment of committees; Address, "Some Recognizable Processes in Successful Teaching." Rev. W. E. Foote; address, "The Man and the Book," William H. Bawden; discussion upon the subjects of the addresses.

Afternoon Session.

Praise service, led by Rev. C. J. Greenwood; address, "Remaking the Future," Rev. J. Madison Hare; offering; address, "Sunday-school Difficulties and How to Meet Them," Rev. W. T. Dorward; address, "Weak Links and How to Mend Them." Rev. W. F. Rowley; discussion on the Topics Presented; treasurer's report; report of committees; election of officers; miscellaneous business.

Evening Session.

Prayer and praise service, led by F. K. Mathiews; offering; singing; address "The Closet and the Battlefield," Rev. E. A. Woods, D. D.; singing, benediction; the singing of the sessions conducted by Rev. C. F. Stanley.

The officers of the Sunday School Association are: President, G. H. Batchellor, of this city; vice-president, S. Preston, Jersey City; secretary and treasurer, Rev. F. Fletcher, Dunellen.

Early Morning Chimney Blaze.

The fire department was called out at 12:19 this morning for a chimney blaze at the home of Louis Kadish, 511 West Third street. It was put out with a couple of extinguishers. The alarm was turned in from box 46 by Patrolman Tobias Nolan.

In the City Court.

Hugh O'Hanlon, arrested by Patrolman Saffron on West Seventh street, yesterday, for peddling without a license had sentence suspended when arraigned before Judge Runyon today.

For Sale—1906 2-cylinder Ford touring car, fully equipped, top search light, extra tire, etc.; car has been used very little and is practically good as new; a very desirable car; $375. Thompson, 413 Park avenue.  10 13 2

MR. RANDOLPH'S LECTURE

The "Banker Poet" Pictures Constantinople and Relates Its History.

DESCRIBES PRESENT TROUBLE.

Says the Young Turk Hates the Jew and Despises the Christian—Gives Some Personal Incidents.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the First Baptist church, last night, L. V. F. Randolph gave a highly interesting lecture on "Constantinople," supplemented at the close with about twenty views taken by him while traveling abroad a few months ago. The lecture gave evidence of great care in preparation and treated the subject in an exhaustive manner. He described the present trouble in Turkey as an evolution of many years growth. He said that when he was in Turkey he heard mutterings of the young Turk's ambition which has so recently been exhibited in a public demonstration.

Mr. Randolph said that naturally the great powers are looking out for their own interests in the Turkish provinces. In referring to the young Turk the speaker said that he hates the Jew and despises the Christian, yet in some respects he is better than the old Turk. He is brave, but slow to yield to Christians. He declared that Turkey must rely on Europe for the protection of her rights, but he did not believe that all the trouble to be worth the cost of war. In referring to the pecularities of the Turk Mr. Randolph said that notwithstanding that there is a magnificent powerful fleet in readiness, the sailors never exercise. The Turks have an idea that when they make anything or accomplish a certain object their duty ceases and it is not for them to give the matter any further thought.

Mr. Randolph in closing his lecture related several personal incidents, some of an amusing character, which he had while visiting Constantinople. He referred to the great many yellow dogs to be found there. He said that no one molested these curs which were allowed to run at will. It is estimated that there are at least 10,000 homeless, ownerless yellow dogs. Mr. Randolph's description of his trip was of exceptional interest and he held the close attention of the large audience throughout. Afterward when the club held its annual meeting a vote of thanks was extended to him for the enjoyable occasion.

MISS ETHEL ROBBINS DIES AT PARENT'S HOME.

Miss Ethel Robbins, daughter of George and Gertrude Robbins, of Trenton, and a former resident of this city, died yesterday at her parents' home. She had been ill a long time. Miss Robbins was a cousin to Mrs. Thomas E. Currin, Jr., of Mountain avenue, and graduated from the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for Nurses. She was the nurse in charge of Mayor Charles J. Fisk during his critical illness several years ago and had also acted in a similar capacity for other prominent Plainfielders. She had many friends in the city and borough.

The funeral will be held at Dutch Neck, N. J., Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Carriages will meet Trenton and New Brunswick trolleys at 1:30 at the Dutch Neck station.

Home from South America.

William Pittis, brother of Dr. Pittis, has returned to the city after two years absence in South America where he was engaged in railroad work as the representative of an American structural steel company. Most of the time was spent in Bolivia, but he went around Cape Horn and came home by way of Liverpool. He brought with him a trained monkey, called "Kelley," who is so intelligent he will "write" a letter when given paper and pencil.

Will Hold Tea and Sale.

The Charity Circle of the King's Daughters, of which Mrs. D. M. Van Vliet is the president and Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna secretary, met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Otis E. Hovey, on West Seventh street, and decided to hold a tea and sale of fancy and useful articles at the home of Mrs. W. A. Conner, 999 Hillside avenue, on Wednesday afternoon, November 4, from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Jack Frost's First Visit.

Plainfielders had the first real touch of winter weather last night, when the thermometer reached twenty-nine degrees. The low temperature was accompanied by a killing frost which had its effect on all flowers left out of doors over night.

Mrs. F. W. Bailey, of Duer street, is spending the week with relatives at Clinton, and other places in Hunterdon county.

CITY COMMITTEE NEEDS FUNDS FOR CAMPAIGN

An appeal for funds to defray the necessary expenses of the local campaign is made by the Republican City Committee. Amos Andrews has been appointed as collector and it is hoped that there will be a hearty response to the invitation to subscribe.

"The present campaign is a very important one, and money is needed to defray the expenses incidental to the proper carrying on of the work. The cost of meetings now being arranged and of the other preliminary work will be heavy, and the Republican City Executive Committee will need the financial support of all Republicans to meet the expenses which it will be necessary to incur.

"We, therefore, confidently appeal to you as a believer in Republican principles and as a supporter of Judge Taft for the presidency to assist us.

"Kindly make checks payable to W. R. Townsend, treasurer, and please remit without delay.

Respectfully,
"RALPH I. TOLLES,
"R. HENRY DEPEW,
"DUNCAN W. TAYLOR,
"HERBERT BUXTON,
Finance Committee."

FRIGHTENED PATIENT FLEES FROM HOSPITAL

Becoming frightened at the thought of having to undergo an operation, Mrs. Rose Smith a sixty year-old woman living on East Third street, seized an opportunity to elude the nurses at Muhlenberg Hospital at 5:30 this morning and fled from the building in her night clothing. Whether she climbed out of a window or made her way through the main hall is not known but it was accomplished by one of these routes inside of a moment or two. The attendants had been getting her ready for the operation and left her only long enough to bring some supplies from another room.

On leaving the hospital, Mrs. Smith ran all the way to her home, a distance of a mile-and-a-half. The air was keen and frosty and with only the light covering she had she suffered greatly from exposure. The police were notified of her disappearance and an officer located her at the house undergoing a thawing-out process. She declined absolutely to return to Muhlenberg and the operation has been indefinitely postponed. Her trouble is not a serious one and unless complications develop from her early morning flight the case will not be aggravated by the delay.

HARRISON FINED FOR ASSAULTING A BOY

Oscar Harrison, of Dunellen, who has been a conspicuous figure in the Middlesex county court cases, was arraigned before Recorder David Campbell, at Dunellen, last night, charged with an assault on Edward Wood, aged seventeen years, also of that place. Harrison was found guilty and fined $14. He settled.

The assault took place on Main street, Dunellen, Saturday night, and is said to have been provoked by Harrison because he believed that Wood broke his automobile about six weeks ago. Harrison met the lad on the street and according to the evidence given at the hearing last night, gave him a terrible beating, including two black eyes. It is said that only for the interference of several bystanders the boy would have been perhaps fatally injured. A warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Harrison and his arrest followed.

Harrison was the complainant in an action brought against the late William R. Stanberry, of Scotch Plains, to recover the value of a horse killed in an automobile accident at Dunellen, when Mrs. William A. Westphal received injuries which caused her death. He is employed by the New Jersey Central as a foreman.

PLAINFIELDERS' WINDFALL

Mrs. Sarah Vermeule to Get $100,000 Legacy from Green's $1,500,000 Estate.

FRANK VERMEULE $50,000.

And Mrs. Margaret Pierson $50,000—The Distribution Will Be Made Here Today.

By the provisions of the will of the late Henry Webster Green, of Fairfield, Mass., who died a year ago last June at Las Vegas, Mexico, Mrs. Sarah Vermeule and her son, Frank Vermeule, of Orange place, and her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Pearson, wife of Lieutenant Samuel Pearson, U. S. A., are made beneficiaries of his estate. Mr. Green was a nephew of Mrs. Vermeule, and her share of the estate, said to be worth about a million and quarter dollars, is about $100,000, while her son and daughter will receive about half that amount. The distribution of the money was to be made today.

Mrs. Green, widow of Henry Webster Green, receives the bulk of the estate. She left today for Europe, where, it is expected she will remain indefinitely. She was named as executrix of the will and with the assistance of a lawyer supervised the distribution of the bequests under the provisions named by Mr. Green.

Several years ago Mr. Green was accustomed to visit Mrs. Vermeule frequently. He came into possession of his vast fortune through his father, who died a number of years ago. On account of poor health he spent most of his time of recent years in Mexico, where the climate seemed to agree with him. Owing to the peculiar laws of Mexico there was considerable delay in probating the will and settling the estate.

HAMILTON HOLT ON 'FEDERATION OF WORLD'

The Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will hold its first meeting of the season in the lecture room of the church, tonight, when Hamilton Holt, editor of "The Independent," will give a lecture on the subject, "The Federation of the World.' Mr. Holt was to have addressed the club last year; but owing to ill-health he was prevented and the club feels fortunate in being able to secure him for tonight.

The club has prepared an attractive program for the winter's entertainment, and besides Mr. Holt, has already secured as speakers Robert Watchorn, Commissioner of Immigration, and Rev. Charles C. Pierce, of Philadelphia. These meetings are intended for the men of the church and congregation.

Johnson Has a Broken Rib.

Gustave Johnson, the Swede, who fell off a freight train between the North Avenue and Netherwood stations, yesterday, and who was taken to the hospital, was found upon examination to have a broken rib and general contusions. His condition is not serious, however, and he will be able to return to New York in a few weeks. He is employed as a fireman on an ocean liner and only landed in New York on Sunday. He was en route for Philadelphia with a friend when the accident occurred.

World's Champion in Trouble.

Ambrose Schenck, a one-armed hobo, was picked up on East Fourth street by Patrolman McDonald, last night, as he was yelling with all the strength of his lungs that he was the world's champion pugilist and could lick any two men at a time. The bluecoat chased him to headquarters where he changed his claim to the unbeaten trick roller skater and kept the reserve men awake all night by slashing around his cell. Judge Runyon gave him fifteen minutes in which to get out of town.

John Townley a Benedict.

Friends of John Townley, a fireman stationed at East Second street headquarters, learned yesterday that he had been a Benedict for the past month. His bride was Miss Leona Walters, of Scotch Plains, who is well known in the city, and the ceremoney was performed in St. Mary's rectory by Rev. Father Bogan. The young couple are now on a delayed wedding trip and will return Friday.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Hazel, to Daniel Franklyn Randolph. The wedding will take place this fall.

Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, will visit the tribe of Indians at Cranford tonight.

OUR CLUB PLAN MAKES IT EASY TO BUY

Furniture
Carpetings
Upholsteries

The Most Liberal Proposition Ever Made by a Representative Department Store.

The club plan was created to make it easy for anyone—young folks and newly-weds especially—to furnish a home. It is a safe, simple plan, but dignified—nothing embarrassing about it. Joining it is just like opening a charge account; the same privacy surrounds the transaction and the same courtesy is extended. When you join the club you may buy at our low cash prices and pay for the goods on convenient terms.

Furniture, Floor Coverings, Draperies, Pictures, Housefurnishings and Sewing Machines

Note in particular that a member of this club plan is not charged a cent more for the goods than if he or she paid spot cash.

This convenient method of buying has appealed to many because of its helpfulness, particularly those who would have otherwise felt the financial strain of a cash outlay.

Come in and investigate this club plan—we will cheerfully give full information without binding you to any sale.

Live Wire Burned Taft Banner.

The Taft and Sherman banner that floated across Broad street, Elizabeth, in front of the Republican county and city headquarters, in the Dix building, was destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The high northwest wind blew down an electric light wire, which dropped over the banner and set it afire. Rolla Engine Company was called out, but when it reached the scene not a vestige of the emblem was left. It is not probable at this late stage in the campaign that another banner will be raised. The Democrats declare that the affair is an omen favorable to their candidates.

gaged to Miss Jamison for nearly two years. The latter is widely known in northern New Jersey as a singer. She has been heard at concerts for a number of years. Since the announcement of the broken engagement she has been away from home with her father.

Andover, Oct. 13.—Miss Ethel Jamison, sister of Miss Mabel Eloise Jamison, whose wedding invitations were recalled shortly before the date set for the ceremony, admitted this morning that revelations had been made by a Newark clergyman concerning Miss Jamison's fiancee, Alfred B. Forsyth. Forsyth, summoned at once by tlegraph, had admitted the truth of the clergyman's statements. He had been told that under the circumstances the wedding was impossible, and, further, that he could not spend the night under the Jamison's roof. Forsyth went to Newton, where he put up at a hotel. He left Newton early the next morning.

Miss Mabel Jamison is so ill that she cannot be seen, and her father is out of town. It is said that he is at the home of a friend in Newark. He left here Friday morning, declaring that under the circumstances he could not face his congregation. The pulpit of the Methodist church was filled yesterday by Rev. Dr. Soper, of this place, formerly a minister to Japan.

Miss Ethel Jamison told a reporter that on Tuesday afternoon a Methodist clergyman from Newark, a friend of her father, had come to the house, and had made certain statements concerning Forsyth. The nature of these statements, and the identity of the clergyman making them, Miss Jamison would not reveal. It is known, however, that the minister was Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Newark.

Dr. Jamison immediately telegraphed to his daughter's fiancee. Before he arrived Mr. O'Donnell had been compelled to return to Newark. Forsyth was confronted with his sweetheart and her father. He was asked as to the truth or falsity of the charges that had been made. He admitted their truth, it is said.

A New York newspaper published a story of the affair, declaring that Dr. Jamison had told Forsyth that if he were not a clergyman he would shoot the younger man. Nothing of this sort occurred, Miss Jamison asserts. "My father was very calm," she said, "but very positive."

By the time the interview was over the last train for Newark had gone. Forsyth was told that he could not spend the night at the Jamison home. He left for Newton and of what he has done since then the family know nothing.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

FIGURING ON MAJORITIES

New York World, Democracy's Leading Paper, Gives N. J. to Taft by 30,000.

THIS IS TOO CONSERVATIVE.

A Plurality of 42,000 Is More Probable—Fort and Fowler Predict a Landslide.

The New York World, which is the leading Democratic newspaper of the United States, has made a careful canvass of the prospects of the two parties in the states of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and as a result it concedes the success of the Republican national ticket in those states.

Reliable political prophets say that the World is far too low in its estimate of Taft's probable plurality. They point to the figure for Union as an instance. Here but 3,200 majority is given the Republican nominee although the county G. O. P. managers are sanguine that it will be over 4,000. Four years ago, Roosevelt got 5,300 plurality in Union, and while there may be some falling off because of apathy, it is quite likely that the plurality will be at least 4,200. The figures credited to Somerset is considered about right, but it is claimed that in the entire State, Taft will get at least 40,000 majority.

Congressman Fowler predicts a landslide as does Governor Fort. The former predicts 75,000 for the G. O. P. candidate, while the latter goes one better by placing it at 80,000. Former Governor Stokes sticks to his prediction of 40,000.

Ward Heeler's Pull a Myth.

Nathaniel Ackerman, a ward politician, of Atlantic City, is under $1,000 bail on a charge of procuring $150 from Miss Lotus Leland under false pretences. It is alleged that he represented to her that through influential friends, he could stop the prosecution of John Kerwin, of Philadelphia, who is awaiting trial for the theft of a $450 diamond ring from Charles L. Smith, of Philadelphia, after the latter had been stricken with vertigo in a boardwalk rolling chair. He promised to get bail for Mr. Kerwin, but failed to do so.

James E. Martine, Democratic candidate for sheriff, spoke at Elizabeth last night. Tonight he speaks at Frenchtown, and tomorrow afternoon and night at Elizabeth. On Thursday night he will talk at New Providence and on Saturday night at Madison. Thursday, October 22, he is booked to speak at Cranford, Garwood and Kenilworth.

Good Bed Comfortables.

When you buy Comfortables you naturally are particular about what you are buying, and it's to Particular People we like to tell about our famous "Perfection" Comfortables. They are made in an absolutely sanitary, non-sweatshop factory, are filled with clean white new cotton, entirely free from waste and shoddy. By a special process the filling is carded in one sheet, making it very light and fluffy. The colorings are silkolene and sateen, nicely tufted. It's really hard to tell them from a home-made comfortable, yet they cost no more than the poorer kinds. They range in price as follows:

1.19, 1.59, 1.98, 2.25, 2.39, 3.25 and 4.50.

IT PLEASES THE PALATE.

Henry Haurand is the Agent for "Ale As Is Ale."

Anyone who has followed the ramblings of Dickens' Mr. Pickwick must have a sincere longing for a pot of good old ale such as Mr. Pickwick and his jovial companions enjoyed daily at the dear old public houses.

Bartholomay's sparkling ale is a good ale, very pleasing to the palate. It has that happy tang that delights the conniseur and pleases everybody.

Bartholomay's sparkling ale is brewed at the Bartholomay Brewery, Rochester, N. Y. This big brewery as you probably know is renowned for the purity and quality of its products.

Bartholomay's sparkling ale is an appetite creator; it helps a weak stomach to digest a good meal and is a sure sedative in nervous conditions, especially at bedtime.

One or two bottles of ale taken daily will aid you to endure arduous labor without fatigue and is a refreshing drink at mealtime.

Henry Haurand is the agent for Bartholomay's Sparkling ale in Plainfield. Give him your order over the 'phone. His number is 229, or drop him a card to 68 Somerset street. He will fill your order promptly. 10 13 15 16

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The first of a series of winter entertainments arranged under the auspices of the Epworth League, of the Methodist church, will be held tomorrow night in Excelsior Hall. J. Wotley Gangloff, the well known humorist and dialect story teller, is the attraction for the first of the series.

It is hardly likely that the town will have a representative football eleven on the gridiron this season. There is plenty of good material for a team, but there is a lack of interest in the game.

An important meeting of Fanwood Council F. A., will be held tonight. All members are urged to be present, as business of importance to all members will be transacted.

Mrs. Antonio Martino has sold her property on Hunter avenue and has removed to one of the flats over the postoffice.

Principal S. Dana Townsend has returned from a week-ends stay at his home in Newark.

Miss Edith Marsh has returned from a visit with friends in Brooklyn.

Brant Johnston has returned from a visit with out of town friends.

Frank Corrona was the guest of friends in New York yesterday.

DR. BUCHANAN HEADS BAPTIST MEN'S CLUB

Officers were elected, reports received and the members discussed informally plans for the winter at the annual meeting of the Men's Club of the First Baptist church, last night. The club is in excellent condition and prepared for a season of activity and the monthly meetings will be made more attractive than ever.

Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, who was re-elected president, clearly defined the purpose of the club and made many excellent suggestions as to how the members can make the club the best in the city. He said that every member must feel an individual responsibility and not lay back and let a few do the work. He said that if the men would show half the spirit of fraternalism displayed in secret societies, the organization would be a great success, and he believed that it was up to every man to see that this is accomplished.

The report of the retiring treasurer, E. C. Martin, showed that the recipts and expenditure for the year were about even, and all but one bill paid. Raymond Carver, retiring secretary, also presented a brief report. B. J. Phelps, principal of the North Plainfield Public Schools, was chosen secretary, and John G. MacLaughlin was elected treasurer in place of Mr. Martin. In accordance with the constitution, the board of governors will consist of ten members, instead of twenty-six as heretofore. These officers were chosen: President, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan; first vice-president, H. C. Krebs; second vice-president George H. Smith; secretary, B. J. Phelps; treasurer, John G. MacLaughlin; board of governors, Harold Serrell, George A. Chapman, U. B. Crane, Alexander Gilbert, Alpheus Stine, James E. Church, Frank W. Jones, Fred K. Armstrong, S. St. John McCutchen and L. W. Randolph.

The above list of officers was presented by the nominating committee, of which Harold Serrell was the chairman, and with the exception of secretary and treasurer, which were afterward changed, was accepted by the club. President Buchanan will announce his committees within the next thirty days.

Tonight an interesting service will be held in the Salvation Army Hall on East Second street, at 8 o'clock. The speaker will be the Rev. Walter Scott Stranahan, B. D., who is entering the Army as an officer.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Pastor's Aid Society will give a reception in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, tonight.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold an all-day sewing meeting tomorrow at the Park Golf Club. If stormy the meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George R. Morris, on Central avenue.

The annual meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church will be held tonight. Reports of officers will be presented and officers elected for the year. Questions of great importance as to the club's future will be discussed.

Thursday evening the special speaker will be "Sophie," the scrubwoman preacher from New York. Sophie is a well-known worker in the New York missions and is very popular as an original, interesting and witty public speaker. Don't fail to hear her. All are cordially invited.

The Congregational church Sunday-school has elected these officers for the ensuing year: Superintendent, J. M. Whiton; associate superintendent, Harold A. Nomer; secretary, Stacy G. Raynolds; assistant secretary, Carl A. Steiner; treasurer, Clarence B. LaRue; librarian, Charles E. Steiner; musical director, Charles L. Lewis.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Victor Herbert and Henry M. Blossom's successful musical comedy, "The Red Mill," will be tonight's offering at the New Plainfield theatre.

While May Ward, who comes to the New Plainfield theatre Saturday in "The Cash Girl," was playing in New York recently, one of her many admirers presented her with a particularly pretty kitten, which the little star of "The Cash Girl" promptly christened "Highball." The same evening a young woman friend dropped in, saw the tiny animal frisking about the room and asked its name. She was much amused at the reply. "How funny," she exclaimed, "Why do you call her Highball?"

"Because she is black and white," answered Miss Ward smiling.

Laughing at the retort the visitor departed, only to return a little later with a friend. The door was opened in response to her knock and the couple looked past Miss Ward upon a scene of wreck and ruin, "Highball" had done her worst as was attested by a large variety of broken vases, spilled sewing baskets, and overturned tabarets. Regardless of these things the new arrival walked into the apartment. "I was so entertained by what you said of the kitten," she gasped to Miss Ward, that I had to bring Will down to hear it. Tell him what you call the little creature and why."

Miss Ward smiled again, then she indicated the trash about her with a sweeping gesture. "Highball" she said, "That's all."

Coming to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, is the great rural comedy drama, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," distinguished from all plays of its class by the absence of any old-time features of the bucolic drama, such as an erring son, a ruined daughter or a mortgage to be lifted. This play claims to be a genuine piece of rural life made up of comedy and pathos, free from all melodramatic effects, and as such it finds favor everywhere. In fact, its instantaneous success has been the subject of comment from theatrical people all over the country. This great New England play has had the rare honor of spending almost all of the season in the four big cities of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago.

PRAYER PLACED IN SLAIN MAN'S HAND.

Evidence That Tony Madelin Was Shot by His Wife in the Head From Behind.

Mrs. and Mrs. Frank Destori, of Milltown, called upon their daughter, Mrs. Annie Madelin, at the county jail at New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon and retained ex-Senator Theodore Strong to defend her on the charge of murdering her husband, Tony, whom she admits shooting Saturday night at their home in South River after a quarrel. They did not call upon the girl until she sent for them.

The girl's story that she shot Tony as he was advancing toward her with a knife and threatening to kill her is not borne out by the medical examination of the dead man's body. He was shot in the head from behind. There is no doubt about the couple having had frequent quarrels. One week after they had been married her husband beat her about the head, breaking earrings which she wore. He was insanely jealous of her.

The girl declared at the jail yesterday that she had never loved her husband; that she married him because her father wanted her to do so. She believes that Tony gave her parents $100 at the time of the wedding. It is reported among the Italians that the girl was sold for that amount to Tony. A prayer, written in Italian, and a crucifix were found clasped in the dead man's hand. How they got there is not known.

ELKS DINE ON ELKS.

300 Are Guests of B. C. Kuser, Who Shot Animals in Sussex.

B. C. Kuser, proprietor of the Trenton House, at Trenton, and president of the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission, gave an elk dinner last night at his newly furnished hotel to his 300 fellow members of Trenton Lodge of Elks. The stable portion of the feast was two elks, which he shot a few days ago in Sussex county. The guests included some of Trenton's most prominent men, as well as Elks from lodges in adjacent counties. The dinner was an elaborate one, with music, singing and speechmaking.

Fire Commissioner William Thomas, exalted ruler of Trenton Lodge, was the master of ceremonies. Speeches were made by Richard P. Budd, of Mount Holly, district deputy, and by the Rev. George C. Maddock, chaplain of the local lodge. "Dominie" Maddock, on behalf of the Elks, presented to Mr. Kuser a diamond pin emblem of the order. Mr. Kuser responded. Exalted Ruler Thomas then announced that within a few days Mr. Kuser would be made a life member of the lodge, in order, as he expressed it, to show appreciation of present hospitality and past assistance and to keep any other lodge from capturing him. Mr. Kuser's elks were fine specimens of their kind. He will have the heads on view, after mounting.

By W. A. FRASER

Copyright, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"I'm takin' it against the stable, just because it's the usual thing to couple it in the bettin'. It's a million to one against Lauzanne starting if Lucretia keeps well."

Faust gave a little start and searched Dixon's face furtively. The trainer's stolid look reassured him, and in a most sudden burst of generosity, he said: "Well, I'll stretch a point for you, Dixon. Your boss is up ag'in' a frost good and hard. I'll lay you fifteen thousand to one against the stable, an' if Lauzanne wins you'll buy me a nice tie pin."

His round, fat sides heaved spasmodically with suppressed merriment at the idea of Lauzanne in the Brooklyn derby.

The trainer told Allis what he had done. He even spoke of his distrust at finding Faust laying longer odds against their mare than the other bookmakers. "But I don't see what they can do," he said, reflectively, studying the grass at his feet, his brow quite wrinkled in deep thought. "The mare's well, and we can trust the boy this time, I think."

"Yes, you can trust Redpath," affirmed Allis, decisively. "You backed the stable?"

"Yes, an' Lauzanne'll have a chance to-day to show whether he's worth the pencil that wrote his name beside Lucretia's."

"You are starting him to-day? I had almost forgotten he was entered."

"Yes, it'll give a fair trial—it's a mile, an' there ain't no good horses, that is, stake horses, in the race. I'll put Redpath up on him, an' you might have a talk with the boy, if you like."

Allis gave Jockey Redpath the benefit of her knowledge of Lauzanne's peculiarities.

"I'm afraid he won't take kindly to you," she said, regretfully. "But if he won't try he won't and the more you fight him the sulkier he'll get. I wish I could ride him myself," she added playfully; then, fearing that she had hurt the boy's feelings by discounting his ability, added, hastily: "I'm afraid I've spoiled Lauzanne; he has taken a liking to me, and I've learned how to make him think he's having his own way when he's really doing just wha' I want him to do."

The chestnut was a slow beginner; that was a trait that even Allis' se-Lauzanne till her return next morning.

When the starter sent Lauzanne off trailing behind the other seven runners in the race that afternoon, Redpath made a faint essay, experimentally, to hold to Allis' orders, by patiently nestling over the chestnut's strong withers in a vain hope that his mount would speedily seek to overtake the leaders. But evidently Lauzanne had no such intention; he seemed quite satisfied with things as they were.

"Just as I thought," muttered the boy, "this skate's kiddin' me, just as he does the gal. He's a lazy brute—it's the bud he wants and he proceeded to ride Lauzanne most energetically.

In the horse's mind this sort of thing is associated with unlimited punishment. It was not a pleasurable prospect; and, at the first shake-up, Lauzanne pictured it coming. All thoughts of overtaking the horses in front fled from his mind.

Redpath felt the unmistakable sign of his horse sulking; and he promptly had recourse to the jockey's usual argument.

Sitting in the stand Allis saw, with a cry of dismay, Redpath's whip hand go up. She just moaned, "It's all over. We are beaten again."

By the time the horses had swung into the stretch, and Lauzanne had not in the slightest improved his position, it dawned upon Redpath that his efforts were productve of no good, so he desisted. But his move had cost the Porters whatever chance they might have had. Left to himself Lauzanne undertook an investigating gallop on his own account. Too much ground had been lost to be made up at that late stage, but he came up the straight in gallant style, wearing down the leaders until he finished close up among the unplaced horses.

"I'm afraid the chestnut's a bad actor," Dixon said to Allis, after the race. "We'll never do no good with him. If he couldn't beat that lot he's not worth his feed bill."

"He would have won had I been on his back," declared the girl loyally.

"That's no good, Miss; you can't ride him, you see. We've just one peg to hang our hat on—that's Lucretia."

The next morning brought them fresh disaster; all that had gone before was as nothing compared with this new development in their run of thwarted endeavor.

Ned Carter had given Lucretia a vigorous exercise gallop over the derby course. As Dixon led the mare through the paddock to a stall he suddenly bent down his head and took a sharp look at her nostrils; another stride and they were in the stall. The trainer felt Lucretia's throat and ears; he put his hand over her heart, a look of anxious dismay on his usually stolid face.

"She coughed a little, sir, when I pulled her up," volunteered Carter, seeing Dixon's investigation.

"I'm afraid she's took cold," muttered Dixon. "Have you had her near any horse that's got the influenza?" he asked, looking inquiringly at Carter.

"She ain't been near nothing; I kept her away from everything, for fear she'd get a kick or get run into."

"I hope to God it's nothin'" said the trainer; and his voice was quite different from his usual rough tone. Then a sudden suspicion took possession of him. Faust's readiness to lay long odds against the mare had haunted him like a foolish nightmare. Had there been any foul play? The mare couldn't have taken a cold—they had been so careful of her; there had been no rain for ten days; she hadn't got wet. No, it couldn't be a cold. But she undoubtedly had fever. A sickening conviction came that it was the dread influenza.

That morning was the first time she had coughed, so Faust could not have known of her approaching illness, unless he had been the cause of it.

The trainer pursued his investigation among the stable lads. Finn remembered an incident he had taken at the time to be of little import. "Two mornings ago when I opened her stall and she poked her head out, I noticed a little scum in her nose; but I thought it was dust. I wiped it out, and there was nuthin' more come that I could see."

"What's the row?" asked Mike Gaynor, as he joined Dixon.

When the details were explained to him Mike declared emphatically that someone had got at the mare. Taking Dixon to one side, he said: "It's that divil on wheels, Shandy, ye can bet yer sweet loife on that. I've been layin' for that crook; he cut Diablo's bridle and t'rew th' ould man; an' he done this job, too."

"But how could he get at her?" queried the trainer. "The stable's been locked; an' Finn an' Carter were sleepin' in the saddle room."

"That divil could go where a sparrer could. How did he git in to cut the bridle rein—t'rough a manure window no biggern' your hat. He done that as I know."

"Well, if the mare's got it we're in the soup. Have you seen Miss Porter about, Mike?"

"I did a minute ago, and here she comes now. I'll skip. D——n if I want to see them gray eyes when ye tell about the little mare. It'll just break her heart. An' maybe I wouldn't break the back av' the divil as put up this dirty job. It isn't Shandy that's as much to blame as the blackguard that worked him."

Dixon ran over in his mind many contorted ways of breaking the news to Allis, and finished up blurting out: "The mare's coughin' this mornin', Miss; I hope it ain't nothin', but I'm afraid she's in for a sick spell."

The trainer's words struck a chill to her heart. She could not speak—the misery was too great—but stood dejectedly listening while Dixon spoke of his suspicions of foul play.

"I don't suppose we'll be able to prove it," declared Dixon regretfully, "but that doesn't matter so much as the mare bein' done for; we're out of it now good and strong. If we'd known it two days ago we might a saved the money, but we've burned up a thousand."

"We'll have to start Lauzanne," said Allis, taking a brave pull at herself and speaking with decision.

"We might send him to the post, but that's all the good it'll do us, I'm feared."

"I've seen him do a great gallop," contended Allis.

"He did it for you, but he won't do it for nobody else. There ain't a boy ridin' can make him go fast enough for a live funeral. But we'll start him, an' I'll speak to Redpath about takin' the mount."

Allis was thinking very fast; her head with its great wealth of black hair, dropped low in heavy meditation.

"Don't engage him just yet, Dixon," she said, looking up suddenly, the shadow of a new resolve in her gray eyes; "I'll talk it over with you when we go back to the house."

That Allis could evolve any plan to lift them out of their Slough of Despond Dixon felt was quite impossible; but at any rate he got a distinct shock when, a little later, a slight-formed girl, with gray eyes, set large and full in a dark face, declared to him that she was going to ride Lauzanne in the derby herself.

LEGAL NOTICES.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 6.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the House of Assembly concurring), That the following amendments to the constitution of this State be and the same are hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

1. Strike out paragraph 3 of section I, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

3. Elections for members of the Senate and General Assembly shall be held every two years on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, and every second year thereafter; and the two Houses shall meet separately on the second Tuesday in January in each year, at which time of meeting the legislative year shall commence.

2. Strike out paragraph 1 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The Senate shall be composed of one Senator from each county in the State, elected by the legal voters of the counties respectively, for four years.

3. Strike out paragraph 2 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

2. As soon as the Senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution they shall be divided by the Senate as equally as may be into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year and, if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only; provided, that the Senators having the longest period of time still to serve at the time of making said division shall be entitled to the longer terms.

4. Strike out paragraph 1 of section III, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The General Assembly shall be composed of members elected by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, every second year, beginning on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants. The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten, and at its first session after each United States decenial census hereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange each county of this State into a district or districts for the election therein of a member or members of the General Assembly. Each Assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory in a compact form, but no county, or part thereof, shall be joined with any other county, or part thereof, in any such district; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Last Resort, by whatever name known, is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power, under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe, to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into Assembly districts of the counties of this State for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and, if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

5. Strike out paragraph 3 of Article V and insert in place thereof the following:

3. The Governor shall hold his office for four years, to commence at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January next ensuing the election for Governor by the people, and to end at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January four years thereafter; and he shall be incapable of holding that office for four years next after his term of service shall have expired; and no appointment or nomination to office shall be made by the Governor during the last week of his said term.

6. Strike out paragraph 6 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

6. Clerks and surrogates of counties shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly. They shall hold their offices for six years.

7. Strike out paragraph 7 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Sheriffs and coroners shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly, and shall hold their offices for four years, after which four years must elapse before they can be again capable of serving. Sheriffs shall annually renew their bonds.

8. Add to section 2 of Article VII, three paragraphs to be known as paragraphs 12, 13 and 14.

12. All elections for Governor, members of the Senate and General Assembly, sheriffs, coroners, county clerks and surrogates of counties and all other officers now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of the whole State, or of any county thereof, shall be held every second year, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten.

13. All elections for justices of the peace and all and any municipal officers, as distinguished from State and county officers as hereinbefore provided, now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of any city, borough, town, township, village or subdivision thereof, or any municipality of this State, except counties, shall be held every second year on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

14. Except as herein provided with relation to the office of Senators, all officers filling any elective office at the time these amendments take effect shall continue in the exercise of the duties thereof according to their respective commissions or terms of office, and until their successors may be elected and qualified under the provisions of these amendments, and all officers whose terms of office would expire after these amendments take effect and prior to the election and qualification of their successors in office, at the election for the respective offices first held under the provisions of these amendments, shall continue in office until their successors can be elected and qualified, at the election for such office or offices to be held next after these amendments take effect, according to the provisions hereof.

The Legislature shall pass all necessary laws to arrange the terms of office of all statutory elective officers so that said terms may be in harmony with these amendments, and to carry into effect the provisions hereof.

These amendments, if adopted, shall take effect and go into operation on the first day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 4.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved, (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the Constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months previous to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 10 of Section VII of Article IV, and change the numbers of the following paragraphs to correspond:

Second—Change Paragraph 10 of Section V so to read as follows:

10. The Governor or person administering the government, and four citizens of the State appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall constitute the Board of Pardons. The members of said Board, or any three of them, of whom the Governor or person administering the government shall be one, may remit fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves, commutations, pardons and parules, after conviction in all cases except impeachment. The four members specially appointed shall hold office for five years, and receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during the term of their appointment.

Third—Change Section 1 of Article VI so as to read as follows:

SECTION I.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Court for the trial of impeachments, a Supreme Court, County Courts, and such other Courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as may be established by law, which inferior Courts the Legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require.

Fourth—Strike out all of Section II, IV, V, VI and VII, of Article VI, change the number of Section III of Article VI to Section II, and insert the following sections in Article VI:

SECTION III.

Any judge of any of the Courts of the State may be removed for disability continuing for one year, or for refusal to perform the duties of his office, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate and of two-thirds of all the members of the House of Assembly voting separately, after a hearing before both Houses in joint session.

SECTION IV.

1. The Supreme Court shall be organized in three divisions, namely: the Appeals Division, the Law Division, and the Chancery Division. It shall consist of a Presiding Justice of the Appeals Division who shall be styled the Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice of the Law Division who shall be styled the President Justice, and a Presiding Justice of the Chancery Division, who shall be styled the Chancellor, and eighteen Associate Justices, which number may be increased by law.

2. The Appeals Division shall consist of the Chief Justice, and six other Justices of the Supreme Court to be assigned by the Governor. A Justice of the Supreme Court assigned by the Governor to the Appeals Division shall serve in said Division until the end of his term.

The remaining Justices shall be assigned by the Supreme Court to the Law or Chancery Division, as the business of the Court may require.

3. Whenever the number of causes before the Appeals Division shall be so great that the Division cannot promptly hear and determine them, the Governor shall, when authorized by statute, temporarily assign five of the Justices of the other Divisions to sit in the Appeals Division, which shall thereupon sit in two Divisions for the hearing and decision of causes pending at the time of such assignment.

4. Four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum on the final hearing of any cause in the Appeals Division, but the Supreme Court may provide by rule for the making of interlocutory orders by a lesser number of justices, or by one justice; such orders to be subject to revision by the Appeals Division.

On the hearing of a cause in the Appeals Division, no Justice who has given a judicial opinion in the cause in favor of or against the judgment, order or decree under review shall sit at the hearing to review such judgment, order or decree, but the reasons for such opinion shall be assigned to the Court in writing.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section I of Article VI, of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all cases within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted, and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII; and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the numbers of the paragraphs following 5 to correspond:

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall not be less than thirty-five years of age and shall have been practicing attorneys in the State for at least ten years. They shall hold office for the term of seven years; shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State, or of the United States, and shall not engage in the practice of law during their term of office. The Chancellor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Vice Chancellors and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in office when this amendment takes effect, shall be Justices of the Supreme Court until the expiration of their respective terms.

The Circuit Court Judges in office when this amendment takes effect shall be continued in office with the powers of the Justices of the Supreme Court at the Circuit until the expiration of their respective terms. They may hold the County Courts, subject to assignment by the Law Division of the Supreme Court.

2. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one Judge of the County Court in each county, and such additional County Judge or Judges in any county as may be authorized by law. The County Judges may hold court in any county subject to the control of the Supreme Court. The County Judges shall not be less than thirty years of age, and shall have been practicing attorneys in this State for at least five years. They shall hold office for the term of five years; shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation, which shall not be diminished during their term of office, as the Legislature in its discretion shall fix for each county, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State or of the United States, and shall not engage in practice of the law in the courts of the county where they hold court during their term of office. The judges of the Common Pleas, in office when this amendment takes effect shall be the judges of the County Courts until the expiration of their present terms.

3. This amendment shall take effect on the first Monday in February, in the year next following its adoption by the people.

4. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution and this amendment thereof.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1908.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 9.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the ayes and nayes taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

Amend by striking out paragraph seven, section four, article four, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Members of the Senate shall receive, annually, the sum of one thousand dollars, and members of the General Assembly shall receive, annually, the sum of ten hundred dollars during the time for which they shall have been elected and while they shall hold their office, and no other allowance or emolument, directly or indirectly, for any purpose whatever. The President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the General Assembly shall, in virtue of their offices, receive an additional compensation, equal to one-third of their allowance as members.

October Sale of High-class Furs

We held many sensational Fur Sales in the past, but the great event which we began today in our State-famous Fur section is so conspicuously superior to any of these and so far surpasses any contemporary effort that it may be said to stand alone—to occupy a distinctive field, as it were. Such tremendous values have never been and probably never will be duplicated at this particular season of the year and we frankly advise all of our friends to avail themselves of our various sterling opportunities to the fullest extent of their means. This great sale is made up of the choicest skins and newest styles—every garment involved was made for regular selling and every garment, irrespective of price, carries with it our usual guarantee as to quality and perfection of workmanship. A new fur selling record is about to be estaplished in Newark—aren't you interested?

PERSONAL.

Charles L. Holstein, Jr., of Summit avenue, has been ill with typhoid fever.

Joseph Lane, the well known local theatrical man, was the guest of friends in town over Sunday and yesterday.

Miss Pauline Denton, of Washington avenue, and her cousin, Miss May Brown, of this city, are spending a few weeks at Belmar.

Mrs. Thomas O'Leary, of West Fifth street, and Miss Ellie Talbott, P. J. Hickey and John J. Hickey, of this city, spent Saturday and Sunday with friends in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pray and daughters, the Misses Eleanor and Mabel Stutsman, of East Sixth street, have returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Clipsham, of West Philadelphia.

Rev. Henry A. Pearce, of Savannah, N. Y., has been spending a few days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearce, of Essex street. He will leave tomorrow afternoon for New York to visit a college chum before returning home.

Mrs. Lucy Titsworth Saunders.

Many friends in Plainfield will be pained to learn of the death of Mrs. Lucy Titsworth Saunders, which occurred yesterday at the residence of her son, Dr. Laurence Saunders, of 34 West Fifth street, New York. Mrs. Saunders was a native of Plainfield and a sister to David E. Titsworth, of Madison avenue. She was married in 1876 to Truman W. Saunders, of Wisconsin, who died in 1882. The funeral will be held at Dr. Saunders' home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and burial will be at Milton, Wis.

Miss Ada L. Bennett.

Word was received here today of the death of Miss Ada L. Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Bennett, of Ninth street, Brooklyn, which occurred this morning after a long illness. She had many friends in this city, where she was a frequent visitor. She was one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Dr. and Mrs. Charles L. Moore, of West Front street.

Hospital Governors Meet.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital held its regular October meeting, last night, when the medical report for September was presented as follows: Patients remaining at date of last report, 24; admitted, 6; total number treated, 85; discharged cured, 36 improved, 6; died, 3; remaining, 40; operations, 42; hospital days, 746. In the dispensary, the number of patients was 74, visits of patients, 168 and four operations. Only routine business was transacted.

Injured in Fall From a Train.

John Runonsky, a Pole, residing at 651 South Second street, fell off a coal train on which he was riding yesterday afternoon, and received severe internal injuries. When sent to the hospital it was believed that he was suffering from a fracture of the skull, but a later examination failed to disclose such an injury. His condition is not considered serious and it is expected that he will be able to leave the hospital within a short time.

Caught His Hand in Buzz-Saw.

Richard Pryne, aged 34 years, of Fritz place, the borough, who is employed at McCullough's mill on Steiner place, caught his left hand in a buzz-saw at the mill yesterday afternoon and received severe injuries. He went to the hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the little finger and index finger at the second joint. Mr. Pryne was able to return home today, but will be detained from work for sometime.

Peter B. Sweeney's One Regret.

Peter Bonaparte Sweeney, collector for The Daily Press, is celebrating his twentieth birthday today. His only pang is that he will not be able to cast a vote for Taft.

Don't Forget to Register.

Tuesday, October 27, is the last day to register. The polls will be open from 1 until 9 p. m. If your name is not on the registry list, you cannot vote.

Charlotte Skiff.

Charlotte Skiff, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edmund Skiff, aged six years and nine months, died Sunday at Waterbury, Conn., from heart trouble, following a five weeks' illness with diphtheria while camping with her parents near New Haven. The parents planned the camping trip for their daughter because of her poor health and nervous condition and it was during that outing that she contracted diphtheria. She recovered from the disease, but it left her in a weakened condition and death was due to heart trouble. The little girl was identified with the Sunday-school at the First M. E. church, and was beloved by all who knew her. The funeral service will be held from the residence of H. R. Moyer, 415 East Seventh street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Geo. S. Clay Cup.

George S. Clay, of the Plainfield Country Club, has offered a trophy to be known as the Autumn Handicap cup, to be competed for on Saturdays up to and including Election Day. According to the conditions of play, two players from Class A and two from Class B are to qualify at eighteen holes and on Election Day morning there will be the semi-finals between the players from Classes A and B, with the finals in the afternoon. This will bring the players from both classes together, it being the desire to give the Class B players as much show as possible.

Leaflets for Evening Service.

For the benefit of strangers and the convenience of everybody, Rev. G. A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross has caused leaflets to be distributed in the church for the Sunday services. The leaflets comprise the entire evening service, including familiar hymns, and makes it possible for worshippers to fully acquaint themselves with the regular order of service. It is the aim of Rector Warner to restrict the service to an hour and the leaflets will materially assist those attending. They are printed in plain type on an excellent quality of paper.

P. H. S. Football Schedule.

The revised schedule of the North Plainfield High School football eleven is as follows: October 14, Battin High School, at Plainfield; 17, New Brunswick High School at New Brunswick; 21, Bernardsville High School at Bernardsville; 24, Somerville High School at Somerville; 28, open; 31, Kingsley, at Essex Falls; November 3, Westfield High School at Plainfield; 7, Westfield High School at Westfield; 11, open; 18, open; 21, Plainfield High School, at Plainfield.

Pleasing Birthday Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Waldron, of Somerset street, gave a party Saturday afternoon in honor of their daughter, Helen Ray Waldron, who celebrated the third anniversary of her birthday. There were about twenty-five little folks present who enjoyed various games, after which refreshments were served. The decorations were red and green. The little celebrant received many gifts.

Mrs. Henry E. Bennett.

Mrs. Rachel Wagner Bennett, wife of Henry E. Bennett, died this morning at the home of her mother at Watchung avenue and Fifth street. She was the daughter of Amy H. and the late Henry P. Johnson, who resided for a long time on East Third street near Richmond. The funeral will be held at the mother's home, Friday morning at 10 o'clock and burial will be at Somerville.

NASSAU SWEEPSTAKES EASILY WON BY THE BUICK

The BUICK No. 10 won the Nassau Sweepstakes at the Motor Parkway, for cars selling at $1,000 or under, in 2 hours, 6 minutes, 52 seconds, outstripping the following cars—Mitchell, Gryoscope, Cameron, Cadillac and Reo.

The little Buick's average of 45 miles an hour for the four laps of the Vanderbilt Cup Course is better than the average of 60 per cent. of all cars competing in all classes of Saturday's Sweepstakes.

The consistent, steady running of the speedy little Buick was a pronounced feature of Saturday's race. Its time for the different laps was:

First Lap	30:55	Second Lap	36:15*
Third Lap	30:13	Fourth Lap	30:29

*Stopped five minutes at Grand Stand to change tires

POMP MARKS DEDICATION

Hundreds to Participate in Parade Preliminary to Mt. St. Mary College Affair.

BISHOP M'FAUL TO REVIEW.

Father Morris to Make Address When Catholic Societies Assemble at Institution's Grounds.

The committee making arrangements for the parade in connection with the dedication of St. Mary's college held the final meeting, last night. From the letters of acceptance received from the different societies in surrounding towns, to which invitations have been sent, a big parade is assured previous to the ceremonies next Sunday afternoon. The organizations already heard from are the Dunellen, Stony Hill, Westfield, Bound Brook, Raritan and Rahway Holy Name societies, together with those from St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches; Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus; Division No. 4, A. O. H. and the T. A. B.'s of Plainfield; also the Polish societies of Plainfield, South Plainfield, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan and Perth Amboy. The Italian Society of Plainfield, with its much appreciated band, wil take part in the parade and there will be three other bands and the Independent Fife and Drum Corps.

The line of march will be from St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, down Watchung avenue to Front street, to Terrill road and thence to the Convent. When the dedication ceremonies are over, the societies will be addressed by Bishop McFaul and Rev. Dr. Norris and when benediction is pronounced, the paraders will disband on the grounds. People who have planned to attend the dedication and who do not care to walk from the trolley cars to the college building, will be conveyed by automobile at a small charge.

The committee which has been working on the parade plans is composed of the sixty members of the Holy Name society under the able direction of Thomas Meany, of Elm place, as chairman, who has been treasurer of the society for many years.

UNION COUNTY DOCTORS IN SESSION HERE

The Union County Medical Societ. held its quarterly meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building, this afternoon, when three papers were presented, followed by an informal discussion. One paper was by Dr. W. Kelley Simpson, of New York, on "Adenoids and Tonsils," another by Dr. F. C. Ard on "Dangers of Operation for the Removal of Adenoids and Tonsils," while Dr. Norton Wilson, of Elizabeth, presented a paper on "Complications Due to Adenoids."

The meeting was largely attended by members of the society from all parts of the county.

Cook's Bail $2,000.

In court at Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon, Judge Atwater announced that he would fix bail in the sum of $2,000 in the case of Harold Cook the Plainfield young man committed to jail on a girl's complaint. The amount had not been furnished up to noon today.

Going to Central America.

David Blackford, of South Plainfield, will soon leave for Central America, where he will engage in the work of developing a gold mine in which he is interested. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Blackford and his cousin, George Blackford.

NEWARK FIRM LOSES IN PLAINFIELDER'S SUIT

A jury in the Union county court at Elizabeth, yesterday, gave George Voehl, of this city, a verdict for $247 in the suit brought by him against C. Smith & Moorehouse, a wholesale milling firm with headquarters at Newark.

In his bill of complaint, Voehl claimed that he entered into a contract with the concern to purchase 1,000 barrels of flour at $4.35 each, the deliveries to be made in specified lots according to his order. He declared that only 600 barrels were forwarded at the stated price and that after that the firm charged him an advance. He brought suit to recover the difference between $4.35 and the second figure he was called upon to pay for 400 barrels. The defense maintained that the contract for the 1,000 barrels stated that all should be called for within ninety days in order to get the $4.35 rate but that Voehl used but 600. The jury was out but a short time when the verdict in favor of the plaintiff was reached.

Voehl was represented by Francis J. Blatz, of this city, while Robert Terhune, of Newark, looked after the interests of C. Smith & Moorehouse.

GOLD MEDAL MINSTRELS UNDERGO RE-ORGANIZATION

The Gold Medal minstrels, the pioneer black-face entertainers in the local field, underwent complete reorganization at an enthusiastic meeting, last night. Thomas M. Muir, the original promotor, was again elected president and general manager and Erwin Neighbor was made vice-president. William Doud, the veteran of several big shows, was elected secretary and Bertram C. Firstbrook, treasurer. Harry R. Roberts will have full charge of the music and the program arrangements; Richard Bittle will be electrician and master of properties and John Conway, box office magnate.

The troupe has taken steps to file articles of incorporation in order to prevent a flood of imitators from infringing upon the established name. The Gold Medals have been appearing in Plainfield and the suburban towns for the past four years and have built up a reputation second to none in amateur minstrelsy. They will go out this season with a complete new wardrobe and effects and will play most of the larger places in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties.

Last night's meeting was held at the home of B. C. Firstbrook on Liberty street, and was followed by a chicken supper provided by the old officers. Twenty two members were present.

Morristown Boy Wins.

The competitive examination held by direction of Congressman Charles N. Fowler on Saturday for the purpose of selecting a midshipman at Annapolis from the Fifth Congressional district of New Jersey, resulted as follows: First, Sifrein Fontaine Maury, of Morristown; second, Chauncy Ryder MacPherson, of Elizabeth; third, Frank Walton, of Springfield.

An Approaching Wedding.

Dr. Richard G. Savage, of Westfield, who is well known to Plainfielders, and Miss Alletta Vredenberg Dodd, of Somerville, will be married at the latter's home, 67 North Bridge street, Friday night. Miss Dodd has many friends in the city and borough and her sister, Miss Bessie Dodd, is a teacher in one of the local schools.

STATE Y. M. C. A. PENNANT WINNERS TO BE GUESTS

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team has concluded its active season and on Saturday night at the association building, the physical department will tender a banquet to the members who were successful in winning the State Y. M. C. A. League pennant, which includes the Spalding trophy, for finishing in first place. While Physical Director Listman is not entirely satisfied with the results attained by the team, he is pleased that the League honors come to Plainfield.

At the banquet Saturday night in addition to being presented with the Spalding trophy, each member of the team will receive a gold medal for individual achievement on the diamond the past season. Physical Director Listman will be in charge of the affair, and Secretary H. E. Parker will assist. There will be a few informal speeches and a general good time. The dinner will be served by members of the Women's Auxiliary.

Below will be found the official figures, showing the standing of the teams in the association league, the scores of the games, together with the batting and fielding averages:

SEES UNIVERSAL PEACE

Hamilton Holt Predicts That This Nation Will Bring About "United World."

THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA.

Editor of The Independent, U. S. Peace Delegate, Gives Instructive Talk Before Church Men's Club.

That the era of settling inter-national disputes by force of arms is at an end, that a law era will soon succeed the waning war era, that the United States will lead the nations of the world to form a United World, that statesmen of all the civilized nations have banded together to make war on war and that within the next century there will exist peace on earth and universal good will among men are the claims Hamilton Holt, editor of "The Independent," ably set forth in a lecture before the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Church at the first fall meeting of that organization held in the church parlors last night. The lecturer, who was one of the Nation's representatives at the Hague Peace Conference, is the cousin of Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue and in simple, straightforward language spoke of the federation of the world and how it may be accomplished.

"As the result of the Hague conferences," Mr. Holt said, "great strides have been made in the direction of world-wide peace through a universal tribunal of arbitration, and I believe that this is no longer a theory, but a practical certainty, which has appealed to all thinking men. It is the destiny of the United States to lead in this movement, for the United States, with its individual state divisions, is a world in miniature. We have had a declaration of independence and will soon be able to declare a world-enclusive inter-independence."

Introducing his subject, the lecturer summarized the sentimental aspects of war and peace. He spoke of the healthy patriotism aroused by the latent power of a strong fighting force on land and sea; he told of the important part man-to-man conflict has played in the civilization of the world as the only legal and final method of nations to settle their disputes. Then he quoted famous statesmen and generals who have maintained that "war is hell," and conflicts are the greatest scourge of mankind.

He spoke of international law as the only practical solution for the universal peace problem. "Why shouldn't this be?" he continued. "Where are today fifty-nine nations in the world, and each nation is at peace within itself—there is no civil strife. Why shouldn't this civil peace become an international peace? All nations now have a representative form of government. Now is the time to organize the world.

"To do this is merely to apply on a larger scale the methods used in organizing the thirteen colonies into this nation of ours. One hundred years ago, New York and Virginia each had navies. Our government was founded on a principle of national sacrifice, as the United World must be founded. Each sovereign must sacrifice his sovereignty wherever the general welfare demands it.

"Do not think that this theory of a United World will not soon materialize. The union of nations does at this very moment exist in the Hague court and the Hague conference. The Hague conference stands as the first organization of nations. It gave impetus to the theory of arbitration and it established the Hague tribunal. And its influence is already wide-spread. Peace societies, about five hundred in number, have been founded, we have the Carnegie peace prizes, and the Nobel prizes. The nations of the world are intermingling more and more. Students from abroad come to our American colleges, the foreign business world comes to us to learn business methods. And we, too, send our young men abroad. Why, if this thing keeps up, we may expect an exchange of Theodore Roosevelt for Emperor William, or—if it becomes a question of the 'survival of the fattest,' King Edward may be called upon to act as substitute for Mr. Taft next Presidential term."

In a brief outline of the work done by the Hague conferences, Mr. Holt spoke of G. W. F. Holls, of Yonkers, N. Y., as the principal factor in the organization of the Hague court as a permanent tribunal for the settlement of international ruptures. With his name were mentioned those of President Roosevelt, Secretary Root, Andrew Carnegie, Congressman Bartholdt as men to whom honor is due. Summarizing the work of the second Hague conference, Mr. Holt said that aside from

TAFT COMING TO UNION

Republican Presidential Nominee to Speak in this County on Monday Morning.

LYCEUM THEATRE, ELIZABETH.

Will Arrive at 10:30 With Senator John Kean as Escort— Big Demonstration Is Planned.

William H. Taft, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, will speak in Union county before the close of the campaign. Through the efforts of United States Senator John Kean, National Chairman Frank William H. Taft.

Hitchock has arranged Mr. Taft's itinerary so that the people of this county may be able to shake hands with the G. O. P. standard bearer and to listen to his views on the National issues.

In his whirlwind tour through New Jersey, Mr. Taft will arrive in Newark at 9:30 on Monday morning next. There he will be the guest of former Governor Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State Committee, and after a speech to the people of Essex, will be escorted to Elizabeth by Senator Kean. At 10:30 he will make an address at the Lyceum theatre and an opportunity will be afforded all voters, irrespective of party, to shake the hand of the former jurist, cabinet officer, governor of the Philippines, diplomat and statesman.

Following is the railroad time table, the time of departure from Plainfield and arrival at Elizabeth being noted: 8:44, 9:12, 9:29, 9:53, 9:59, 10:16, 10:28, 10:36. Mr. Taft's stay in Elizabeth will be limited to one hour.

After the meeting at Elizabeth, Nominee Taft will be hurred to Trenton by Senator Kean, where Senator Briggs will become his escort. A half hour speech will be made at the Capitol City and later Mr. Taft will make an address at Camden before going to Wilmington Delaware.

As told exclusively in The Daily Press some days ago, State Senator Ackerman wrote Mr. Taft urging him to visit Union county during his whirlwind tour of the East. In reply, the Presidential nominee expressed his desire to comply with the request and suggested to Mr. Ackerman that he get in touch with Chairman Hitchcock which the latter did.

Already plans for a monster demonstration of Union county Republicans is being made for the occasion of Mr. Taft's visit. From all parts of the county, including Plainfield, Summit, Rahway, Roselle, Westfield, New Providence, Roselle Park, Cranford, Fanwood and Berkeley Heights, the faithful will journey in large numbers to the county seat for the opportunity of grasping the hand that will write the Presidential messages during the next four years.

United States Senator Kean will preside at the meeting and among those on the platform will be such distinguished sons of Union's Republicanism as Hamilton F. Kean, Ernest R. Ackerman, Alexander Gilbert, Foster M. Voorhees and Chas. N. Codding.

A striking likeness of Mr. Taft, in colors, may be obtained by Daily Press readers on application at this office. The speech of acceptance, other notable utterances of the nominee and the party platform are also to be had here on application.

Don't Forget to Register.

Tuesday, October 27, is the last day to register. The polls will be open from 1 until 9 p. m. If your name is not on the registry list, you cannot vote.

RED TAPE STAVES ACTION

Bungle in Call for Meeting Prevents Adoption of Fire House Proposition.

TO MEET ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

Delay, Linger and Wait Policy Continues and East End Is Made the Victim.

Because of the failure to properly draft the call for the special meeting of the Common Council, the members were unable to take any action las. night regarding the proposed new fire house to be erected on South avenue in the Netherwood district. It could not be learned who drafted the call, but it omitted the essential wording covering the question and Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh informed the members that no action could be taken at that time. In consequence another special session will be held Friday night for that purpose, a correct call now having been issued.

Although unable to take any official action, the members decided to resolve themselves into a committee of the whole and discuss the proposed improvement. Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who has been in the Adirondacks with his family, returned in time for the meeting and before an adjournment was taken, he expressed his opinions as to the method of procedure and the proposed bond issue.

Speaking at some length, Councilman Montgomery presented a new phase of the question, that of selling No. 1 fire house and the property on West Second street and taking the proceeds to build and equip the new house in the East End. He had been informed that the property could be disposed of for $18,000 and if the new house and equipment is to cost $15,000, there would be sufficient funds to do this without issuing bonds. There had been considerable criticism on the part of taxpayers about another issue of bonds for improvements, and he believed that the Council should not run the city into any greater debt than necessary.

Again, Mr. Montgomery believed that thirty years is too long a period to extend an issue of $15,000 worth of bonds, ten years would be long enough.

"We have two fire houses in the business section," continued Mr. Montgomery, "and it will take considerable money to improve No. 1 house. We might better tear that structure down and build a new one. Headquarters is commodious and the apparatus from No. 1 house could be placed there. I asked Corporation Counsel Marsh if the money from the sale of that property could go into the firemen's pension fund and he said it could not, as the sale of real estate is not includded in the act. Besides, another new house means an additional captain. I don't know of a place in New York city where the fire-houses are as close together as headquarters and No. 1 house. This should not be a matter of sentiment. If we should abolish No. 1 house I do not believe that the rates of insurance in the centre of the city would be increased.

Replying to Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Buxton said that it would be unwise to abolish No. 1 house as it is in the best location. He said that it is just as necessary to increase fire-fighting facilities as it is to increase the facilities for school children, and he would be against the proposition to do away with the West Second street house.

"There would be a great protest against such action," remarked Mr. Suydam. "We could not get the apparatus from that house into headquarters. As for the captains there are now four in number and I believe that there should be one for every company. I would object to abolishing the West Second street house, but at the same time I am not in favor of issuing $15,000 worth of bonds for thirty years. We would be the laughing stock of everybody in the State."

In the opinion of Mr. Hall the erection of a new fire house in the district would be the means of stimulating the building industry in that part of the city and thus increase the tax receipts. He believed that by taking favorable action the confidence of the people would be gained and enough could be accomplished this year to make a good showing on the improvement. He urged immediate action.

In discussing the proposition to consolidate No. 1 house with headquarters, President Tolles said that in the past there had been considerable thought given to this plan, but he did not think it practical. He believed that it would be better to remodel No. 1 house and put it in first class condition. He was in favor of letting the whole matter

LESLIE N. BROKAW DIES AFTER OPERATION

Leslie N. Brokaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw, of Sycamore avenue, died at the home of his parents at 10 o'clock last night from a tetanus affection that followed an operation for varicocele. It was performed at Muhlenberg Hospital two weeks ago and at the time was thought to be entirely successful. He had so far recovered on Thursday last that he was removed to his home, where the complications developed.

Mr. Brokaw was but nineteen years old and was one of the most popular young men in the Washington Park section of the borough. He was educated in the Leal School and had been engaged in business in New York at the time he went to the hospital. He was greatly interested in athletic sports and during his school-days promoted several successful track meets. He was a member of the First Baptist church. Beside his parents, he is survived by a brother DeWitt Brokaw, who was operated on at Muhlenberg at the stime time he was and for the same trouble, and a sister, Mrs. Arthur D. Stout, of Watchung.

The funeral will be held at the parents' home, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be private.

PLAINFIELD'S MILK IS OF HIGH QUALITY

The reports presented at the October meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health, yesterday afternoon, showed the sanitary condition of the city to be in good shape. Not one case of diphtheria nor of scarlet fever was reported during the month

Thirty-three dairies and milk bottling places were inspected; all found to be in good condition. Thirty-one samples of milk and six samples of cream were collected and analyzed. The average milk analysis was as follows:

Fats, 4.26; solids, 13.36; solids not fat, 9.10; lactometer, 114; bacteria per cubic centimeter, 86.855.

Permits to sell milk were granted to Frank Culler, and Charles Fuller. The plumber's bond of James M. Frazee was ordered filed. The application of Carl Ruppenstein to collect garbage was granted. The following returns were received at the office during the month: Marriages, 16; births, 42; still-births, 2; deaths, 31; total, 91.

CONGREGATIONAL MEN IN ANNUAL MEETING.

The Men's Club of the Congregational church at its annual meeting last night elected officers, received reports and discussed plans for the coming year. Four new members were elected, making a total of about sixty. There was considerable discussion of plans, nothing definite was decided upon. The club will meet as usual once a month and the usual excellent entertainments will be provided, including the "ladies' night" affairs.

These officers were elected for the year: President, Dr. Frank T. Clawson; vice-president, F. A. Weeks; secretary, Dr. H. V. Hubbard; treasurer, Charles E. Steiner; executive committee, Morris C. Van Arsdale and J. A. Powlison. A little later the president will announce his committees.

Mission Societies to Meet.

The thirty-first annual meeting of the Women's Synodical Society of Foreign Missions in the Synod of New Jersey will be held in the Second Presbyterian church, Rahway, tomorrow, beginning at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. The thirty-first annual meeting of the Women's Synodical Society of Home Missions will be held in the afternoon. There will be addresses by several persons prominent in the denominational work. Each auxiliary, Young People's Society and Mission Band have been requested to send two delegates.

Dates for Teachers' Institutes.

State Superintendent of Schools Charles J. Baxter has announced the dates for the teachers' institutes to be held in the State. No institute will be held in Union county, but one will be held in the Somerville High School, Somerville, on November 16 and 17, and there will be an industrial institute for Middlesex county at New Brunswick December 4.

Will Present Reports.

The delegates from the local W. C. T. U. who attended the convention of the State Union at Atlantic City, last week, will present reports of the gathering at a meeting of the union to be held in the rooms on Madison avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

HOOLEY SUCCEEDS FISK

Another Banker Heads Watchung Hunt Club, Which is One Year Old.

S. A. CRUIKSHANK, VICE-PREST.

Membership Limit Reached—Lewis E. Waring Chosen as Master of the Hounds.

The Watchung Hunt Club held its annual meeting last night, marking the completion of the first year at the club's handsome new home. All the reports showed the orginization to be in a flourishing financial condition with a large active membership. Exceptional interest has been shown since the acquisition of the club's new quarters and a complete reorganization, now considered the strongest in the State. The membership is about up to the limit and it is only a question of time when it will have to be raised to admit new members.

In chosing officers for the coming year, the club regretted the fact that owing to many other duties Mayor Charles J. Fisk was obliged to retire as president. Edwin S. Hooley was selected as president, in place of Mr. Fisk, and he will maintain the high standard set by the former officers.

After the presentation of reports these officers and heads of committees were chosen for the coming year:

President, Edwin S. Hooley; vice-president, Siemon A. Cruikshank; secretary, L. G. Timpson; treasurer, Harvey Fisk; master of the hounds, Lewis E. Waring; chairman of the house committee, L. G. Timpson; entertainment committee, W. L. Righter; stable and grounds, Lewis E. Waring. W. L. Righter, Arthur L. Otterson and H. E. Butler were elected members of the Board of Governors.

Just now the club is enjoying its annual fall hunts which are being attended with unusual success. This morning a number of riders started from the kennels and enjoyed a chase after the hounds over the surrounding country, a distance of about six miles. Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the members will meet at the Mt. Pleasant schoolhouse.

POLITICAL RALLIES IN CITY AND BOROUGH.

Mass meetings, smokers and the like are the order of the day in both political camps just at present.

Tonight, the North Plainfield Republican Club will hold a smoker at Saengerbund hall in honor of the First Presidential Voters' Club.

Tomorrow night, the Plainfield City Republican Committee will hold a mass meeting at the New Plainfield theatre, which promises to be a big affair. Two gifted speakers have been announced and a brass band will add to the celebration.

Tomorrow night, also, the North Plainfield Democratic Club will hold its first rally in Debele's hall, Chatham street. The speakers will be the party's candidates, William V. Steele, Nelson Y. Dungan, George W. Anderson and Clarence Garretson.

Juniors Visit Dunellen.

William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Dunellen, entertained about fifty members of George H. Adams Council, of Newark, last night, the occasion being a fraternal visit. The Newark Council was accompanied by its initiatory team, which initiated four candidates. This was followed by speechmaking and refreshments. Among those who spoke was State Councilor Frank Sharp, of Newark, who is now a candidate for State Council secretary.

"A Day in the Children's Court."

Ernest K. Coulter, deputy clerk of the Children's Court of New York, will be the speaker at the men's meeting to be held at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. He will speak on the subject, "A Day in the Children's Court." Mr. Coulter is especially well fitted to discuss this topic and his story cannot fail to interest anyone. He will also refer to the "Big Brothers' Movement," which has met with such success in New York city.

Although the local baseball season closed Saturday, Manager Dorflinger has scheduled one more contest with Bound Brook, to be played at the latter place on Saturday. This will windup the season at Bound Brook. Manager Newhouse having become involved in a dispute with Somerville over conditions not altogether unlike those between Plainfield and Somerville, decided he would like to play Plainfield. He will be accommodated and at the same time will get a drubbing that will last him all winter.

Now that the National League season is over the local fans are not showing a great amount of interest in the World's Championship series, especially as Chicago seems to have the best of the argument. Detroit played its trump card on Sunday when Manager Jennings used Donovan in the box. He was invincible for seven innings and then blew up in heartless fashion.

"Christy" Mathewson is thinking strongly of taking a baseball team to Cuba this winter, starting about November 1. He believes that a few weeks in Cuba will be beneficial to the players and help them to keep in condition.

The Cubs jumped on a train last Wednesday and arrived in New York the next day and drubbed the New Yorks. Then they jumped on the train again went to Detroit and clipped the Tigers' claws. That night they took to the rail again and beat the Tigers in Chicago the next day. That's going some in more ways than one.

Thomas H. Keller, better known as "Tee Kay," was in Plainfield a few days ago and gave his opinion of the termination of the National League race. He said that the New Yorks are entitled to credit for their high standing and the way they fought for the pennant, but for general all-round superior work he believed Chicago to be entitled to the pennant. In his opinion the Cubs have shown a class not equalled by any team in either league. However, he believes that next season will show a marked improvement in the New York team.

ANNUAL RECEPTION TO REV. DR. C. E. HERRING

With 200 or more members of the congregation in attendance, The Pastor's Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church tendered the annual fall reception to Rev. Dr. Chas. E. Herring, last night. In the original plans it was intended only as the customary affair to mark the resumption of fall activities but it resolved itself into a congratulatory session in honor of the clergymen's engagement, recently announced.

The reception took place in the church parlors, tastefully decorated for the occasion with autumn foliage; chrysanthemums and La France roses and was enhanced by an informal program of music provided by Clifford Braider. Mrs. J. Harry Manning poured tea and Mrs. Joseph Allen the chocolate. The waitresses were in charge of Miss Katherine Lounsbury, and refreshments were provided by a committee composed of Miss Addie Dietrich, Mrs. Ransom Allen and Mrs. Charles L. Clark.

Mrs. Clarence Bond, president of the Pastor's Aid Society, was in general charge of the reception and was ably assisted by all the members. The decorations were arranged by Mrs. H. A. Pope, Mrs. Charles L. Clark, Mrs. J. S. Johnson and Miss Ella Lounsbury.

John A. Layton.

John A. Layton, for many years a resident of this city, died last night at his home on First street, Westfield. Heart failure was the cause. Mr. Layton was employed for a long time by the Jersey Central as an engineer at different water tanks and on several occasions was nearly asphyxiated by a gas engine at the Cranford plant. Just previous to his death he had been working in a Garwood factory. He leaves a wife, one son, Walter Layton, and three daughters.

At Mining Engineers' Meeting.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, has returned from Chattanooga, Tenn., where he attended the annual convention of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

Funeral of William Greenwood.

The funeral of William Greenwood who died in Muhlenberg Hospital Saturday, was held at Red Bank this afternoon. Burial was made in the cemetery at that place.

Good Bed Comfortables.

When you buy Comfortables you naturally are particular about what you are buying, and it's to Particular People we like to tell about our famous "Perfection" Comfortables. They are made in an absolutely sanitary, non-sweatshop factory, are filled with clean white new cotton, entirely free from waste and shoddy. By a special process the filling is carded in one sheet, making it very light and fluffy. The colorings are silkolene and sateen, nicely tufted. It's really hard to tell them from a home made comfortable, yet they cost no more than the poorer kinds. They range in price as follows:

1.19, 1.59, 1.98, 2.25, 2.39, 3.25 and 4.50.

go over until next year.

At this time Mr. Hibbard, presented a letter from Corporation Counsel Marsh calling the attention of the Council to the fact that no action could be taken at this meeting regarding the fire house, and stating that a corrected call had been prepared for the special meeting to be held Friday night, setting forth in detail the proposition to come up at that time for action.

A resolution was offered later by Mr. Hibbard and adopted, that is it the sense of the Common Council that a fire house be erected and equipped as soon as practical by the city on property on South avenue acquired for that purpose and that it is the intention of the Common Council to build and equip the same in the near future.

No one appeared to object to the purpose of the resolution, but Mr. Mygatt opposed that part of it which read, "it is the intention of the Common Council to build and equip the same," believing that it was not right to thus bind the members to such action. His amendment to strike out those words was lost, and the resolution went through as offered.

Referring to the desirability of issuing the bonds for thirty years, Mr. Buxton explained that the city would only be obliged to raise $300 a year, while if the issue was for ten years it would be necessary to raise $1,200 a year. He favored the long time issue, adding that the bonds could be sold for a better price. He also stated that City Treasurer W. F. Arnold could act as a sinking fund commissioner.

Mr. Montgomery raised the point as to what might happen if Mr. Arnold should cease to be treasurer. He did not believe that the Council could force his successor to act in that capacity.

Maintaining the position he took at the last meeing, Mr. Mygatt again opposed the issue of the bonds for thirty years on the grounds that no one could tell what might happen in the meantime. He again urged as an undesirable feature that there would be no restrictions as to the investment of the sinking fund. He favored waiting until the Legislature meets when it might be possible to have the law amended giving the city right to issue serial bonds. At present he said there is no other law under which the city can act.

Upon the invitation of the members, Mayor Fisk made a few remarks appropos the subject. He favored the thirty year issue of bonds, believing it to be the best and safest As for a sinking fund commission the only objection he had to offer was that sometimes a city has an undesirable administration and it plays with the sinking fund. It is something that has to be looked after strictly and carefully. If it were possible he believed the serial bond to be the best, but he advised the Council to act under the present law.

Speaking of laws, Mr. Fisk said that the State is all tied up with laws—laws that will permit a person to do almost anything. After a little further discussion of minor points, the regular order of business was returned to when the resolution offered by Mr. Hibbard favoring the building and equipment of the fire house was adopted. The meeting then adjourned.
